Christmas-in-August Delights 500 at Morgan Memorial Camp

ATHOL--Christmas came early for more than 500 children at Morgan Memorial Fresh Air Camp at South Athol recently.

Christmas Eve festivities were celebrated Monday night when Santa dropped out of the skies by parachute. There was traditional carol singing, hanging of stockings, an exchange of hand-made Yuletide cards, and decorating of Christmas trees in each of the various camps serving different ages.

Sants Claus was a member of the widely known Parachutes, Inc., Orange. He parachuted into the camp carrying a big pack of candy and toys.

Another highlight was a turkey dinner with all the fixings on Tuesday.

Henry E. Helms, executive secretary of Morgan Memorial said that Christmas "in" August, the fourth successive program to be sponsored at South Athol, is designed to emphasize the "spirit of Christmas should reign all the year-round."

More than 500 are spending the summer at the big 810-acre Camp, now celebrating its 55th year, and one of the oldest in the country.

The spectacular arrival of Santa is a feature long remembered by the youngsters.

"Our Christmas idea in the summer started out in 1958 and it was such a huge success with the youngsters that we plan to make it an annual event," Helms pointed out.

Letter To The Editor

Wayland Firemen Get There First With Mostest, Top Weston, 9-2

To the Editor:

You know, sometimes you miss something that really interests us around here. What happened on that Weston-Wayland firemen's ball game? Didn't say a word about it but Wayland edged out Weston, 9-2.

For your information , both pitchers went the route and at times showed startling prowess in striking out the side.

Ben Crouch of Weston did this several times. Of course, he lost. But he did it. And Jerry Whelchel. who enters the University of Massachusetts this fall, had his innings, too. I'd like to tell you about it:

One of the reasons "fearless" Ben Crouch got shook up was when a bunt in front of the mound pulled him in, and after lobbing a perfect throw to first. he discovered that "Togo" Thorburn, Weston's stellar first baseman. was not on the base. The ball dropped right on the bag, too. "Togo". it was learned, was right behind Ben, covering the bunt, too.

This started a donnybrook that lasted several moments while certain "responsibilities" were ironed out.

Oh yes--the previous contest resulted in a 15-14 victory for Weston.

It was obvious in this second game that department officers, when it comes right down to it, were out picking daisies, when the positions were handed out. Both Lt. Al Lawrence and Chief Hartin of Wayland and Lt. Al White of Weston were transported to the outer reaches and heard from only occasionally. Which is good for officers.

One of the more spectacular sights was John Thorburn (Weston) who lives on Valley View rd in Wayland. Bystanders were somewhat confused as to his allegiance. He was wearing a Wayland jersey. Togo, as he is called by all but his friends, decided the best thing to use on first base was a hockey goaler's glove that, when fully extended, resembled the side of a barn, complete with "Bull Durhan" sign. Scorers noted that with all this equipment, Togo managed to whiff four times and skied once.

Then of course there was Wilber "Crew Chief" Pettigrew who is supposed to be harboring a rarely seen albino sparrow at the Cochituate Fire House. It seems that Willy who loves birds doesn't understand why people can't get excited about his recent discovery. Why don't you get around more?

Yours,
W.P.

Ed. Note--Thank you. But we did get some pictures of the game in question. Also--from your account--we can't help but note how closely baseball and bird-watching are related around here. Maybe you could enlighten us in this.

Former Weston Man Pioneers In $6000,000 Texas Plant

WESTON -- A former Weston man has set up a $600,000 plant in Texas designed to recover more oil in digging operations.

Edward Edmunds Jr., now 39, was one of the top planners for the CO-2 plant which will manufacture liquid carbon dioxide.

Edmunds is executive vice president of Carbonic Chemicals Co. of Albuquerque, N. M., which in conjunction with two other firms recently opened the Puckett oil field, southeast of Fort Stockton, Tex.

The Texas plant will transform waste carbon dioxide gas into liquid for oil well injection. The carbon dioxide is mixed with water and resembles carbonated water. It speeds up the flow of water through oil-bearing sands.

By speeding the water flow, the process increases oil recovery under the water-flood program. Substantial reduction of cost and increased recovery are cited as principal benefits of this method.

Edmunds also heads the Edmunds Chemical plant in Albuquerque, a concern he founded when he was 30 and which he incorporated in 1959. Three years ago he became associated with Carbonic Chemicals as vice president in charge of sales.

Edmunds is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Edmunds of 36 River rd., Weston.

At Weston High, Edmunds was an honor student and athlete when he graduated in 1938. He was active in track and hockey at M.I.T. where he graduated as a chemical engineer in 1942.

During World War II, he served as a second lieutenant and was stationed in Baltimore with the chemical warfare division of the U. S. Army.

Mr. Edmunds Sr. is a mason contractor in Weston with another son, Alfred.

Edmunds became interested in producing CO-2 for oil recovery after reading about the process and he then persuaded Carbonic Chemicals to undertake the project of processing the raw material.

Edmunds' own firm, now a million-dollar concern, began as a fertilizer plant. While employed as a chemical engineer in Baltimore about 10 years ago, Edmunds became interested in opening his own plant after talking to New Mexican farmers about the need for a low-cost fertilizer.

A year later, when he and his family moved to New Mexico, his wife's native state, he went into the fertilizer business and has since expanded his firm's line.

Edmunds lives in Albuquerque with his wife and five children.

North av. reconstruction could be delayed for a while.

Incidentally, county commissioners are working out details on land takings for North av. straightening after which town authorities will confer with abutors before any construction is authorized.

The Winter st. extension, first outlined years ago by Rep. James DeNormandie in connection with a proposed state park, would cut across part of the Valley Trust property on the Weston-Lincoln line. For the most part, however, the Winter st. route would go through the backlots.

So far it has the DPW district engineer's approval and it is felt that the route is desirable as a traffic relief route by the three towns and state authorities.

Following conferences in March between Mr. Dickson, Mayor Rhodes of Waltham and Lincoln authorities, a survey was made as to its feasibility.

According to District Engineer C. F. Mistretta who directed the survey: "We recommend favorably on the proposed construction of the extension."

"One of the principal reasons which makes this connector desirable is the absence of an interchange between Rtes. 117 and 128. Extensive industrial development has taken place in the Winter st., Waltham, area and many of the employees and suppliers desire to reach points west of Rte. 128 on Rte. 117."

He pointed out that roads now used are "completely inadequate by modern standards because of alignment, severe grades and residential development located so that widening and straightening... would be prohibitively high and would completely change the rural character of the locale."

Weston-Wayland Firemen Game Tomorrow Night

The final softball game of the series, between Weston and Wayland Firefighters, will be played tomorrow night under the lights at Cochituate Ballfield starting at 7:30. Weston won the first game 15-14 and Wayland won the second 9 2.

The third game in the best two our of three series promises to be a thriller and perhaps even funnier than game No. 2 which is described elsewhere in the Crier this week.

If fate means you to lose, give him a good fight anyhow.

Patrice Munsel At Carousel Sept.4

FRAMINGHAM -- Patrice Munsel, lovely Metropolitan Opera and television star, will again appear at the Carousel Theatre, Framingham, for one week starting Monday, Sept. 4 in Kiss Me Kate.

Miss Munsel, starred at Carousel last season in Kiss Me Kate, which most observers believe was Cole Porter's greatest musical.

Middlesex Polio HQ Moves to Cambridge

CAMBRIDGE -- The Middlesex East Chapter of The National Foundation has relocated its office in the Commander Hotel, Cambridge, it was announced last week by Edward Marsh of Arlington, chapter chairman of the March of Dimes organization. The office was formerly in Arlington.

The move to Cambridge, the largest community in the chapter, was made because of its central location. The new office is more accessible for polio patients aided by the chapter, and for the volunteer workers.

run in the first inning--and that was it as Donna mowed down the opposition.

The Laurelettes struck back Sunday in what might have been the final game, winning over the Corvettes and Carol Marshall, 5-0. Carol gave up two runs in the fifth and three more came across in the troublesome seventh.

In the final, Donna was again on the mound and prevailed, 3-2 over the Laurelettes. Peg Everone, star hurler for the Laurelettes, was on the mound. She was voted the most valuable player of the tourney.

The Corvettes started with a bang. Carol Wood singled, Mary Bennett singled and Joan Fitzgerald reached on an error. Then Joyce Letourneau singled home two runs. Peg shut off the rally after one more reached base.

Joyce Letournear brought in the third run in the fourth on a sacrafice fly with the bases loaded.

In the sixth, Joyce recovered a wild pitch and threw out a Laurelette trying to score. Donna made the putout.

Selectmen Referee Row Over Renewal

WAYLAND--A drive against the Wayland Redevelopment Authority broke out in the Board of Selectmen's meeting Monday.

A delegation from the Wayland Civic Assn., following up a letter to town boards, pressed for assurance that the selectmen would call an open hearing before approving the "workable program".

Or failing that, they argued, an open hearing should be held before applying for Federal funds for renewal.

(At the special town meeting in June, it was ruled that the authority would hold a public hearing before firming up any plans with the Federal government.

(Also, town officials ruled then that the WRA would have to seek approval of the town meeting before seeking any further funds.

(This opinion was given by Town Council Frank Kilburn and Finance Board Chairman Robert Morgan who cited Louis Weinstein, leading state authority on renewal.)

At Monday's session Lawrence Fordham, representing WRA, said no public hearing would be necessary before drawing up a workable program or seeking Federal funds but added that probably WRA would hold one.

Mr. Fordham, outlined steps leading up to the application for planning funds: a workable pro-

Legion Rd. Residents Wind Up Year's Fight With Waltham Truck Depot—Going to Court

WESTON -- All this ruckus over noise at the truck terminal is going to court.

Fifteen families from the Legion and Fairhope rds. area of Weston announced this week that they'd "just about had it" in their year-long dispute with the Associated Transport truck terminal nearby.

The issue involves a touchy matter of relations across community lines.

The terminal is in Waltham, by virtue of a revamping of the area's zoning status from residential to commercial about a year ago.

Originally, the land was rezoned to make it possible for a laboratory to build. But after the rezoning, the lab deal fell through -- and the truck firm stepped right in to buy the land.

The issue: around-the-clock noise, bright lights, revving up of giant interstate trucks 4 - 7 a.m. daily, excessive noise in the workshop, a loudspeaker system.

3-Year Delay Is Ended-- Selectmen Vote to Move Heard House -- But...

WAYLAND--Well, the Heard House will move... after three years of talk and dickering.

The move back to its original site on Main st., Wayland Center from its present location on Raytheon Company land on Sudbury rd. was voted Monday by the Board of Selectmen after several delays.

Ralph Heard, one of the more persistent objectors to the move, had a testy "No comment at all" when informed of the move.

Mr. Heard has maintained that trimming of the trees in front of his home would be a detriment to them and probably cause them to die.

His objection has held up the move, along with a neighbor Ralph Weiland.

Mr. Weiland could not be reached for comment but Mrs. Weiland said "we have no comment on the whole affair."

Neither party had any comment on the possibility of an injunction suit which presumably hangs over the town's head in granting permission to move the house owned by the Wayland Historical Society.

No action is expected before three weeks at least, despite a plea by J. Otis Post, first vice president of the historical society who pointed out that installation of a heating system made speed in the move necessary.

Town Council Frank Kilburn said it would take about three weeks to get a qualified appraiser to assess costs in anticipation of a damage suit from Mr. Heard or Mr. Weiland.

What the selectmen voted was this:

Cat Shelter Starts New Fight, Charges Run-Around Here

WAYLAND -- The cats are back . . . and fighting hard to stay. The latest in the cat saga:

--Atty. Gen. McCormack is deciding this week whether the special amendment to the zoning by-laws voted last January by Wayland voters is arbitrary and discriminatory and ought to be ruled invalid.

--Representatives of the Ellen M. Gifford Sheltering Home are taking an appeal to the Supreme Court.

--They are also threatening to take town officials back into Superior Court to face contempt of court charges in connection with their building permit.

Atty. Eugene Tougas, representing the cat shelter corporation, argued before Asst. Atty. Gen. Richard Dray last week that Wayland had passed the amendment last January solely to block construction of the cat shelter at 302-A Concord rd.

He asked the Attorney General to refuse to declare the by-law valid.

(The amendment in question provided that all "charitable" institutions seeking a building permit must get the approval of the Board of Appeals in addition to other town officials. No

Where to Swim in Wayland Rocks Boat for Selectmen

WAYLAND -- Well, who owns Simpson rd. beach on Dudley Pond? It's posted--"not a public beach" but selectmen were not sure of ownership at their meeting Monday.

Town Counsel Frank Kilburn said he would search title to it--whether it was owned by developer of Lakefield (old Snow's Day Camp) site or the town.

What touched it off was a letter from a nearby resident who wanted to know.

As for the other beach at the foot of Mansion rd., where townspeople swam before Lake Cochituate beach was opened, there seems to be a problem.

People like the beach, but there is no bathhouse nor sanitary facilities, the drinking fountain is broken and a police officer is there on weekends, keeping people out.

Selectman Frank Tarr recalled that several years ago Rep. James DeNormandie promised to get a bill through the legislature to make

New Weston High Ready For Sept. 7- Except for Gym

WESTON -- Everything will be ready at the new high school, except the gymnasium when schools reopen here Thursday, Sept. 7, according to Dr. Anthony Brackett, superintendent of schools.

First grade and kindergarten pupils begin Monday, Sept. 11.

As things stand, the School Building Committee is moving into the school, room by room somewhat like the anxious purchaser who's already got his furniture in storage.

Actually, Weston schools will reopen with 2145 enrolled, compared with 2067 a year ago. Also--with 120 teachers as against 113 last year.

There will be 33 new teachers.

And the new high school will increase the number of classrooms available from 80 to 102, according to Dr. Brackett.

Dr. Brackett pointed out that there will be separate bus trips for the junior high and senior high pupils. Both trips will start their runs at 7:30 a.m. but over different routes.

Elementary school trips will begin at 8:30.

New teachers will meet in the library of the junior high school

Hide-'n'-Seek Fire Keeps Firemen on Go In Wayland

WAYLAND - Wayland and Weston firemen fought a three-day, on-and-off battle with a hide-and-seek fire in the woods along the town line last Friday-Sunday.

Thirty-eight men from both towns helped fight the fire which gave the first hint Friday night about 8 p.m.

Both departments made investigations near the home of Edward P. Ripley on Draper rd., Wayland, but returned without finding the fire which was snaking its way

SUBURBAN LIVING IS FOR THE BIRDS

. . . not for people. Birds need never mow, plow, weed, paint, spray, polish, rake, and so forth. People do, endlessly. We ask you, isn't taking care of your suburban haven almost all work and practically no play? We fear it often is. And, lo and behold, so does the knowledgeable editor of the South Shore Mirror who, recently, first quoted a press release and then expressed his views thusly:

Keep That Apartment Ready

"Intown living — in an ideal setting — may be the answer to the growing number of psychosomatic problems reported in our suburbs."

That is the contention of Theodore J. Shoolman, vice-president of Charles River Park, Inc. His organization is developing Boston's West End into a $55,000,000 garden apartment neighborhood.

Shoolman noted, in a discussion with Boston businessmen, a study reported by the American Medical Association. It recorded a high incidence of coronary thrombosis, ulcers and hypertension in a suburban area. Besides trying to keep their homes "spotless and dustless," many ambitious home-owners felt there could not be a "blade of crabgrass in the lawn."

Listen Shoolman, I could tell you about some suburban diseases that would make coronary thrombosis, ulcers and hypertension seem as uncommon as beri beri. I myself am suffering from a disease of no known cure called "ulcerative coalitis," a disease characterized by the intestines turning to pure charcoal, which, combined with the ingestion of home-made barbecue sauce, is usually fatal.

Another common suburban disease is tomatocolis, common among those who put in tomato plants and try to consume the produce of the plants, all two tons of which ripen in one week.

One of the most insidious of suburban diseases is known as "recital lethargica" a dulling of the brain that comes from watching a 44-act dance recital in which your daughter appears around the 39th act.

Shoolman, I've got 17 more years on my mortgage, then, if the cutworms haven't got me I'll either be moving into town or going way out.

Bravo! And thank you. Our only suggestion to the wise editor — and to you — is: don't wait. A new and wonderful kind of in-town living is waiting for you at Charles River Park. For all the marvelous details, read our advertisement on page 9 of this newspaper.

Flower Drum Song: Dancing Tops So Far; Cast Spirited

By FRANCIS J. HARTIN JR.

The FLOWER DRUM SONG at the Carousel Theatre in Framingham gives us a new, chiefly Oriental cast. The change is a decided improvement, in both the dancing and in the attitude of the cast towards their roles.

The girls were of a shape more consistent with the necessities of the dance than are the regular Carousel corps. The first male solo, too, was danced with considerably more professionalism than is customary at Carousel productions.

The general attitude of the cast was much more vivacious than one has been led to expect by past shows here. The epitome of this attitude is found in Yin San (Linda Low) who puts herself into her role with a great deal of feeling. She is doing her utmost dancing, acting, and singing Linda Low.

Neither does the rest of the cast have that jaded attitude that one often finds among actors. These people are charming. They give one a refreshing sense of naivete.

Of special interest are the voices of Joy Kim as Helen Chao, the higher notes of Harry Theyard as Wang Ta and the humor of the play. The humor is not subtle but is sometimes striking.

None of the voices except that of Joy Kim were exceptional but with the life that each actor gave to the performance one really didn't mind the merely adequate singing. The excitement of the actors was enough to make this show an enjoyable evening's entertainment.

Next week Carousel will present Julie Newmar in Damn Yankees.

Address Change Social Security

WAYLAND -- Statistics show that one in four families in the United States changes residence during the course of a year. Of the 15 million people in this country getting social security checks, a good number also have a different address during a vacation period.

Old Illegal Urge Endangering Weston Youngsters

WESTON--That old illegal urge is overcoming some Weston youngsters--and parents, according to Chief Frank Shaw.

A number of cases of children setting off gunpowder fires and other experiments with gunpowder and firecrackers have been reported to police.

Chief Shaw warns that this is illegal- as well as dangerous. He said some parents are bringing firecrackers back from out-of-state trips, and some sales of 'crackers by "salesmen" in autos have been reported.

On Summer Bachelors

We think Harry Patterson's "Summer Bachelor" poem printed on Page One last week speaks pretty well for itself. But of course we just can't resist sticking in our two cents worth. And it's this:

We'd like to have a nickle for every summer bachelor who's been through that indifference-turned-into-anxiety feeling. If we did, we could afford the whole summer at the shore with the wife and youngsters--and two or three months in Florida come winter.

Letters To The Editor

Fair Shake For Birchers

To the Editor:

May I offer a neighborly, but deeply felt criticism?

It would seem to me that the major dailies have published enough misinformation about the Birch Society without your pitching in.

Granted, the society's founder has often been guilty of the most loose-lipped remarks. His ridiculous excesses have probably irked most society members even more than they have the public. The sad thing is, the man's irresponsibility has too frequently been matched or bettered by the irresponsibility of the jackals who so passionately misquote him.

Let us at least give the devils this much due: first, the Birchers are the only semi-official group with the sense to recognize that we are indeed at war--and have been for more than a decade.

Second, let us be guided not only by the society's expressed principles, but by the facts. These demonstrate clearly that we are not dealing with some vigilante committee with McCarthy-like purposes. The aims of the society are strictly educational (and please don't guffaw until you have actually talked with a Bircher and heard him out on this subject.)

Of course it's too late now for these people to make any real mark in this country. The good gray Sulzbergers, Susskinds, Scharys and an army of ant reporters have seen to that.

Which is all the more reason for The Crier to tend to its local and useful knitting. Frankly, after reading your editorial I had the queasy feeling I was watching a maggot crawl over the carcass of a Buffalo, long since picked clean.

Permit me one snide remark. Next time you "research" a Birch story, begin at the beginning. Perhaps with the spelling of Welch.

Name Withheld

WAYLAND

Ed. note--Ouch. We do know Mr. Welch's name, but sometimes we Imperfect Ones can't shoo all the bugs before the paper comes out.

Disservice To Birchers

To the Editor:

Your editorial on The John Birch Society in the Aug. 17, 1961, issue was most interesting, particularly since the opinions expressed appear to have been formed after reading a single issue (July 1961) of the society's "Bulletin", plus a recent release on its essay contest.

I am certain that you would not wish first-time readers of The Crier to form irrevocable impressions from a solitary issue.

For this reason, I feel you do a disservice to an organization professing sincere purposes by rendering such hasty judgment.

Your criticism of the essay contest would make more sense had you read Rosalie Gordon's "Nine Men Against America" and understood the nature of the society's brief against Earl Warren.

Your support of or dissent from its stand could at least then be reasoned. There are entirely too many glib dismissals and too few thoughtful rejections of non-conformist ideas today to let your smooth editorial go without comment.

Lest you reach another overly hasty conclusion, I am not, myself, a member of The John Birch Society and have serious reservations about certain of its methods.

Yours very truly,
R. N. Ober
102 Glezen Lane,
Wayland

Ed. note -- Thank you for your comment. But contrary to your conclusion: our editorial was not based on a "single reading of the society's bulletin". We have long studied the Birchers and, like you, "have serious reservations about certain of (their) methods." For example, its habit of blaming all our ills on one cause or on one person. We have long since left that gimmick to the Reds.

The Choice Ahead

You've probably noticed last week's story about Dow Chemical Co. wanting to build a pure-research lab in Wayland.

We'll warrant there will be more than a little discussion about this before it's settled. But one of the big points to consider, it seems to us, is the effect this can have on the tax rate. We're paying at an $86-per-$1000 clip now. And we're not going to get off any more easily in the years ahead, what with schools bursting at the seams and town services ballooning to accomodate us.

We'll have more to say on this subject. But it might be worth considering the difference in resulting town expenditures between 18-20 houses with children on the 26 acres involved and an off-street laboratory which does not require new schools but may well help our school system.

Seriously....

"Take note, America." The words are those of William Clark, co-director of the Summer School of the Cambridge School of Weston in a letter printed elsewhere in The Crier.

"Take note, America," he writes. "The youth of our time are a different breed. Youth wants to know, and to learn, and to grow, and to accept responsibility,"

Those are his conclusions after a session with serious-minded students, and he points out that this newer-type summer session--not just for those who flunked math and English last year--is catching on across the United States.

We'd like to agree. Youth does want to know. And early in life, too...especially when encouraged by interested parents and teachers. Just note the number of wee ones who literally pull their parents to the Science Museum and even the Fine Arts and DeCordova.

Be that as it may. There's another point that stems from Mr. Clark's observations of the serious students of today.

We hope the hucksters and others who feel a bit of soft-soap is all you need when you're dealing with the great unwashed public will take note.

The public wants to be led--yes, up to a point. But the men and women of tomorrow (even of today) will be demanding more common sense in the big talk-talk about politics, education, home-buying, etc. than they've gotten in the past.

And we can't help but think this is healthy. Maybe parents might find that a good starting point for thinking when they're wondering how they can bring their children along--encourage their curiosity and keep them steamed up about new things. Even send them to summer school.

The more they have a chance to feel seriously about the subjects they take seriously, the better off they're going to be in the days ahead when they're not going to have us looking over their shoulder.

A Sign of the Changing Times....

It might seem strange, almost cute--this idea of a motel-like nursing home. But it's not cute. It's safe. And the way it's designed, complete with a beauty parlor where the patient's own beautician can come to do her hair, it has the resident's health and happiness in mind.

As the Audit of State Needs pointed out more than a year ago in one of its best reports, one of every 10 Massachusetts residents is 65 or older. In other words, the aging in the population are increasing. In another 10 years, it's apt to be one in seven, according to estimates.

And with this increase in the aged among us, more thought will have to be given to their accommodation since not all will be able to live doubled up with their children. And not all will be able to keep house for themselves. Infirmities have a habit of coming with age.

So what looks strange to us in 1961 is really just the precursor of things to come.

And we'd just like to point out that with more of our population living to ripe old age, more consideration will be given to their comfort.

This motel-like nursing home going up on Commonwealth av. in Wayland is a step ahead of the usual nursing home. It is somewhere between a hospital and the rambling, three-floor structures with spindly fire escapes that have passed for nursing homes in the past.

All we're saying is that this convenient one-floor firesafe nursing home is something we'll be seeing more of. It's a sign of changing times.....

Good Brakes Count

When the compulsory automobile inspection law was enacted by the General Court, the first part of your car mentioned in the Act was your brakes. You must have brakes in good working order on your automobile to avoid traffic accidents. Now's the Time To Sow New Lawn

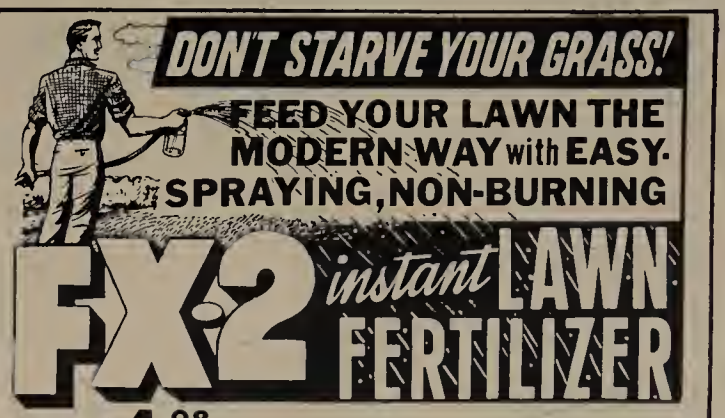
CONCORD -- Now's the time to get your soil tested, because it's almost time to put in the new lawn you've been thinking about.

Contrary to old-fashioned opinion this is the best lawn-growing season. Lawns put in before mid-September have a good chance of surviving the winter. They outwit the weeds, so to speak.



This advise put out by the Middlesex County Extension Service (EM-9-4845) which points out that it is necessary at this time of year to supply adequate water, in order to have positive germination and survival of the seed.

First -- spade or til the soil to a depth of four to six inches to cover the trash and properly level the area.

With your soil tested, apply the lime and fertilizer required and then seed carefully to avoid covering the seed too deeply.

Keep the area moist until the lawn has become well-established.

Something About Birds

WESTON -- On Aug. 13 a pied-billed grebe, a group of 6 phoebes, and a broad-winged hawk were seen at 80 Acres on Lexington st. (C.L. Smiths). Black-crowned night herons have been heard almost nightly as they fly to their feeding grounds along the coast; and two solitary sandpipers were found Aug. 14 in the little pond (now diminished to a couple of mud puddles) on North av. near Conant rd. (C. E. Smith).

Two reports of red-breasted nuthatches at feeders on Aug. 16 (4 by Mrs. T. R. Pleim and family, Wayland; 1 by Mrs. W. E. Phillips, Weston) indicate that these birds are now migrating. They usually start moving southward the latter part of August continuing to about mid-October, and are seen much more often during fall migration than in the spring.

Many warblers begin to pass through New England on the cool waves of polar air in August, but are apt to be unnoticed because they are silent, the bright colors of spring have been replaced by dull fall plumage, and they are wll hidden by dense foliage.

Several people (including W. R. Koe and Mrs. R. E.Woodman of Wayland) have seen hummingbird sphinx moths this past week, remarking on their similarity to hummingbirds. At first glance, there is a resemblance because of the soft, hairy body, the tuft-like tail, and the hovering flight on rapidly vibrating wings. They feed on flower nectar with a long, tubular tongue which uncoils and probes into the flower much like a hummingbird's bill. The body is little more than an inch long and the back shows bands of gray, buff, or red, not the hummingbird's iridescent green. In answer to a question, the ruby-throat is the only hummingbird found east of the Mississippi River, but there are some 15 different species in the West.

Goodwill Industries Thank Kiwanis and Townspeople

WAYLAND--The Wayland Kiwanis Club recently received a letter from Public Relations Director Howard A. Patterson expressing appreciation for help given to the Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries.

Members of the Wayland Kiwanis Club wish to pass credit along to townspeople.

Mr. Patterson's letter in part:

"We feel that you and your customers (our friends) deserve a great deal of credit for the increasing help being given to handicapped people and the national award just received by Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries...

"Aid to the handicapped has jumped at Morgan Memorial because the total volume of donated clothing, household articles and other material has been on the increase. Last year 'Operation Goodwill', namely the Goodwill collection boxes of which you are so much a part contributed 185,379 filled Goodwill bags to 'Help the Handicapped Help Themselves'...

"We at Goodwill are very proud of this accomplishment, but we know that this national award to Morgan Memorial for the greatest increase in gain of hours of service and opportunity rendered in 1960 is due largely, first, because The Village Shopper provided the space and strategic locations for our Goodwill collection boxes and secondly, because your customers responded so very generously with their contributions of material to out work.

"Once again, on behalf of the officials and handicapped workers at Morgan Memorial, to you and through you to your wonderful customers (our friends) from the bottom of our hearts- Thank you for making this all possible..."

You never know what lies around the next bend in the road but you can be fairly certain there is another motorist.

Bits & Pieces

We've been ducking brickbats all week since word went out from here that the Birch-rodders were talking up hate. And the substance of the complaints:

--Granted the Birch Society is irresponsible and its leader often loose-lipped and deplorable in his utterances, we did not know what we were talking about when we criticized the Birchers.

--Somehow, it was all right for the Birchers to jump on Chief Justice Warren but not all right to defend him unless you'd read everything the society and its special pleaders had written against him.

Well now -- if it's come to the point where friendly and unfriendly critics can agree that the society is irresponsible in its methods but only the friendly critics have a right to say so, we have come to a pretty pass. Of course, that isn't so. We'll go right on making our observations about a group that even its friends admit raise "serious reservations about certain of its methods."

Friendly critics often suggest that Mr. Welch is irresponsible and a burden to his associates. Our suggestion: those deploring his methods might do well to resign from such a society and form another, more concerned with fair and responsible action.

Our observation of the John Birch Society extends from the earliest notices it gained in the public eye and our opinions are based on its overall performance since that time.

One observation of Birch-rodders close to home:

In Portsmouth, N. H., within the fortnight, a prominent member of the society voted firmly against the admission of an African student, tuition-free, to the Portsmouth school system for one year.

Mrs. Louis F. McGee, president of the Portsmouth branch of the society, was not a run-of-the mill Bircher but one singled out for extra praise by Robert Welch, the founder.

Mrs. McGee's reasoning in her action as a school board member:

Portsmouth could not afford to pick up the tuition costs of this African youth . . . this in a period when America's efforts to maintain its position abroad depends in part on such friendly efforts by small-town America.

This is probably why WBZ-TV's Staring at the Editors is such a popular program. You never know what to expect. Like this answer of Mr. Minot who had this solution of the Berlin situation to offer. As we recall, his quote went just about like this:

"Well, I think we made a big mistake. When they put up that barbed wire, we should have wheeled up our atomic cannon and shot it down again."

(In passing, we've heard the atomic cannon is also good for swatting flies . . . if you don't like your surroundings.)

As for Staring at the Editors, we'd just like to note that Mr. David Brickman is still holding forth impartially on the world in general and Gov. Volpe in particular.

Mr. Brinkman has yet to detect a mistake or a booboo of any sort emanating from the governor's office.

He also does not mention that he is Mr. Volpe's editor of Mr. Volpe's Medford-Malden newspapers and a high-priced consultant (that dirty word hasn't gone out of use) on transportation for the governor.

A clear case of conflict of interest if we ever heard of one . . . and we often have -- from Mr. Brickman.

Of course, it was not one whit better when one of the other independent editors used to get the line weekly from one of Gov. Furcolo's trusted aides.

It's awful hard to know what's wrong with government as long as the "ins" always have spokesmen on independent news panels.

And speaking of the governor. Sometimes we're so snide we hate ourselves. In writing a recent editorial critical of one-letter license plates, we were tempted to say: the only way to win this upmanship game with plates is to devise cute little words.

And now the governor has gone and done it. S-1 is not distinguished enough for a governor. How can you distinguish it from a pol's plate? So he's come up with the answer a plate that shouts: GOVERNOR.

A tax note: See where Sudbury residents have a $5 reduction in their tax rate upcoming but they don't know (because the assessors won't say) how come -- if there's been no new industry. Well - we know. Valuations are going up, so don't crow until you've digested your tax bill.

We know you won't believe it -- so we're repeating what Weston Safety Officer Larry Tierney told us: you can use your pants or your shirt to keep yourself afloat for hours.

Take the pants: pull them off while you're getting your bearings. Tie the legs in knots, zip them up and THEN wave them like a distress signal over your head, so they catch a full scoop of air. Then swiftly bring them down into the water. Wet cloth helps keep the air bubble in there.

If you're losing air, just duck underneath and blow a few bubbles more into the pants from underwater. With a shirt, it helps if it's a chino. Button all buttons and then puff a little air into the shirt.

You know how fussy these hairdressers are about their first names. You know, "Louis", "Emil", and all that? Well, it seems the Crier ran a news item two weeks ago about some new hairdressers now working for Emil the Hairdresser at the Village Shopper in Wayland. He told us that he had a new man coming from New York. "Very special" says Emil with eyes glowing! Further that his name was Anthony. "Oh, such a mistake I made" . . . so his name is Joseph, and to make things right, Emil is holding open house Sat. Aug. 26, to welcome Joseph and Leo too. 9 a.m. - 6 p.m.

First Summer Break in Weston $3500-Plus Taken

WESTON -- Police are investigating the first housebreak this summer in Weston and warn residents that the chances of a series of breaks at this time is high.

Best advice: Don't let on when you're leaving town....except to tell police.

One couple in the south section of town neglected to tell police they were leaving last weekend and discovered a break that netted thieves upwards of $3500 in silverware, TV set, jewelry and other items when they returned.

Police say a neighbor noted two strange men in the neighborhood about 4 a.m. Monday but did not inform police until 9. Police also learned that a strange car had been seen recently in that neighborhood.

DIRECTOR -- Glenn N. Lempereur, Weston, Town Moderator, has been named to the board of directors of Keystone Custodian Funds, Inc. Mr. Lempereur has been an executive of the $700,000,000 mutual fund organization for the past 15 years and is now vice president and secretary.

Rep. Perry Speaker At Wayland GOP Picnic Tuesday

WAYLAND -- Rep. Francis W. Perry (R-Duxbury), the one-man prober whose charges have led to the 30-day suspension of the state waterways director, will be the speaker at a Wayland GOP picnic supper Tuesday, Aug. 29, at 6:30 p.m. at the new high school.

Roger Ela, Republican town chairman, said the catered picnic supper will start at 6:30 Charge: $2. The speaking will begin at 8 -- free of charge.

Theodore Magoun, supper chairman, invited residents of Weston, Sudbury, Natick, Lincoln and Framingham to the supper affair. Tickets may be obtained in those towns from the GOP organization.

Tickets in Wayland are available from : Mrs. Bruce Kingsbury of Goodman lane; Mrs. Nathaniel Cannistraro of Sherman Bridge rd; Mrs. Emily Blair of Bow rd. and Mr. Magoun.

'Voice of Celtics' Moves to Wayland

WAYLAND -- The "Voice of the World-Champion Boston Celtics", Johnny Most and his family have purchased a home in Wayland. Mr. Most, his wife Sandra, and two children James Andrew 2 1/2 and Margery Ann 1 1/2 now reside at 15 Anthony rd.

Currently, Johnny Most can be viewed over Ch. 5 on the "Wheaties Scoreboard" after each of the Boston Red Sox baseball games. When he's not behind the microphone at sporting events, Johnny Most is a faculty member of the Cambridge School of Radio-TV Broadcasting Boston, and teaches "sportscasting".

His career in broadcasting began with the Brooklyn Dodgers during the 1940s and 1950s. During this period he broadcast the New York Giant football games along with Marty Glickman. He also worked with Glickman broadcasting the New York Knickerbocker basketball games.

Mr. Most has worked, too, with the famous baseball slugger, Johnny Mize. Their show -- "Johnny On the Spot" -- followed the National League baseball games on the New York Giants radio network.

Prior to his coming to Boston, Most worked with Glickman and Gussie Moran (ex-tennis player) on pre- and post-game shows around the American League circuit for the New York Yankees.

Weston Girl Concludes Month In British Family

WESTON - Miss Anne Janeway of 445 Concord rd., who has been spending a summer in Great Britain as part of The Experiment in International Living, will be returning home soon.

More than 1200 young Americans have spent the summer living in 28 foreign lands throughout the world, according to Gordon Boyce, the society's president. Each of them has lived for a month in the home of a foreign family, learning the customs and culture of the country by living it.

Insurance Warning For Drivers in N.Y.

BOSTON--Watch out if you're traveling in New York state. They have a compulsory insurance law, too--and it applies to Bay Staters as well.

According to the Automobile Legal Assn.: the major requirements of the New York law are $10-20,000 public liability, $5000 property damage and the insurance company must be authorized to do business in New York.

Also--if you're involved in an accident there, with $100-plus property damage, evidence of required insurance coverage must be filed within 48 hours with the Department of Motor Vehicles. And if you don't, you get 10 days to produce. After that, your license is revoked.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

It Just Might Be The Bugs Who Survive

The other day our family was recalling, with watering mouths, the luscious pink and cream Belle of Georgia peaches, with their delicious aroma, that we picked in the early 1900s from a tree behind our house. No sprays needed, for there were few insect enemies; no care except to keep the tree growing.

In August, beautiful red-striped Williams and crisp yellow Porter apples dropped from the backyard trees onto hay spread underneath. No disease or disfigurements on them, except for an occasional codling worm at the core, and we youngsters ate around him without trouble.

Earlier in the summer we had climbed the cherry trees and filled up on the clean ripe fruit. No spray on it. The greedy robins who gobbled the sweetest and best were the sole destroyers. (There was a dark belief on the part of children that drinking milk afterward would give you the colly wobbles, an illness almost completely unknown today).

Even in Pint-Sized Yard

In the fall, with school open, we "scholars" wandered home slowly filling up from the loaded Concord grapevines: the fungus that destroys so many nowadays had not appeared. And in September and October, there were Damson plums and a half dozen delicious pears, Bartlett, Sheldon, Seckel, Beurre Bosc - yielding bountifully one after the other, with only an occasional fruit malformed or diseased.

Up to that time nearly everybody with so much as a pint-sized yard, even in citified places like Cambridge and Somerville, had a few fruit trees and vines. Among the youngsters, if fruit was lacking in their own yard or some friend's, the more hardened characters helped themselves surreptitiously from a neighbor's.

Weston and Wayland, Sudbury and Lincoln were full of farms with a dozen to 500 trees of fruit grown for the Boston market.

The fruit farms are all gone from here, now. Though house holders in our towns have large lots, few bother with trees and vines. It is cheaper and better to buy first-class fruit at the roadside stand or the chain store.

Bugs - Bugs - Bugs

What has made the vast difference in a half century?

It is the great influx of newly imported pests and diseases.

Now, to have decent fruit, you must spray or dust, not once, but many times, and at exactly the proper period. And as with fruit, so also with many vegetables.

Not that all pests and plant diseases, by any means, are new. There were plenty in the old days. Said the Old Farmer in his Almanack in 1831:

"'Bugs, bugs, bugs! O the bugs will eat up all the cucumbers!' No, they will not, cousin Betty, if we attend to them. We must be up in the morning, aye, in the morning I say . . . before the sun kisses the pine tops, and see to those bugs and pinch their necks for them."

But even though he does get up in the morning (which for the most part he certainly will not) the ordinary householder today and even the small farmer, has usually neither the precise knowledge nor adequate equipment to protect his fruit and vegetables properly with sprays or dusts.

So, after a year or two, he gives up the fruit, and even vegetables and fills the backyard with lawn and ornamentals, or lets it grow up to forest trees. Thereafter he buys his needs through some roadside stand or store which is supplied by specialized growers maybe from a whole continent away.

You Pay for Dusting

Has it occurred to you how these multiplying pests have added to the costs of food and of living generally?

In every dozen of corn you buy, you pay someone for dusting the cornfield, to eliminate the European corn-borer, a worm never known on this hemisphere where corn originated and where it has been grown for thousands of years until it was introduced in imported plants within my memory.

A recent bug arrival is the Japanese beetle, which is at work on my raspberry plants and roses at this very moment. This has been with us only a decade, and is exceedingly hard to control.

To take down a single one of the giant elms which have always been the glory of New England may easily add two to four hundred dollars to a town's expenses, and we have millions of them as shade trees.

All of them are threatened by the Dutch elm disease, another immigrant within the past decade or two; which leaves heart-breaking gaps where the trees once raised their green umbrellas.

Now the poisonous sprays we feel forced to use are themselves becoming a menace, not only to wild creatures, but to humans.

Not many weeks ago this column poked a little fun at "the good old days."

Now we must admit that in some respects they were actually better. Thus sobered, are we quite so certain that it is man with his gadgets and his chemical sprays who is to inherit the earth?

Just possibly, it might be the bugs!

The tragedy of love is indifference. (Maugham)

19,425 Receive Aid From Waltham Security Office

WALTHAM -- By the end of 1960, 19,425 people in the Waltham district office service area were receiving old-age, survivors and disability insurance benefits.

The total benefits paid to these people for December 1960 was $1,339,810 according to Norman A. Keyes, manager of the Waltham social security district office. "This is an increase in the number of people receiving benefits by about 6 percent over the same month last year," he said.

Nationally, more than 15 million people were receiving about a billion dollars a month in old-age, survivors, and disability insurance benefits at the close of 1960. Many of these people were made eligible for benefits by the changes in the law made in 1960 - such as the reduction in the amount of work required to qualify for benefits and the removal of the age 50 requirement for disability benefits.

Payments to a retired worker with no dependents receiving benefits averaged $70.00 in December 1960; to a retired couple, both receiving benefits, the average payment was $124.00. The average for an aged widow was about $58.00.

1960 was the 20th year that social security benefits were payable, and the 25th anniversary of the Social Security Act, which became law in 1935. Changes in the law since 1935 have brought more than 9 out of every 10 people in the United States protection by old-age, survivors, and disability insurance -- protection paid for by taxes on employees, their employers, and the self-employed. Earnings will be reported to the social security accounts of more than 75 million workers during 1961.

Take Note: Students Dig for Learning Letter

To the Editor:

On Friday morning, Aug. 18 the last farewells were said, not a few stray tears were wiped away with the sadness of parting, as the 96 students of The Cambridge School of Weston's Summer Session departed for their homes.

After eight weeks of hard academic work, many shared hours of social activities and recreation, and much personal growth, these young people scattered to their homes in 19 states, some as distant as California and Florida. They will never be the same again.

They were the new generation of summer school students, who had participated significantly in one of the new phenomena on the American educational scene.

All had gained a great deal from their experience-some had even said it was the most enjoyable summer they had ever spent in their lives.

And yet they had come together basically for hard work.

This was something new and promising in American life. Summer schools we have long had with us. For the most part they have been for remedial and makeup purposes, and students have attended them only because they had to. What happened at The Cambridge School is happening all across our land.

Students are converging upon our greatly multiplying summer schools, many of them not having to go but wanting to go for their own enrichment, and all of them coming with the realization that this is a worthwhile venture to gain new standing and new prestige.

Take note, America. Here is just another bit of evidence that the youth of our times are a new breed. Youth wants to know, and to learn, and to grow, and to accept responsibility. Only this can explain the vast increase in the numbers of our young people flocking to the fast multiplying summer schools of the nation.

PSYCHIATRIC CARE of sorts is given to the human-like Cybertron of Raytheon Company. Machine learns by trial and error but when it goofs--technician presses "goof button" and helps it get the right slant on things.

Raytheon Machine Predicts Weather

Cybertron—An Inhuman Human: It Learns From Its Mistakes

WALTHAM--Well, it's been invented--the little machine that's going to make it harder for you to make the same mistake again--and yet again.

It's called the Cybertron. And it's the proud possession of Raytheon Company.

This machine--even as ,humans--is "alogical". That is, it learns by trial and error.

And when it makes a mistake, its teacher presses a "goof button". And the machine sort of backs up and takes another look at the problem.

In technical terms: its "punishment" causes it to re-evaluate its method and adjust its memory content.

The teacher says nothing but "you're wrong", but he can give it the correct answer and when it responds with the right answer, it is rewarded by being allowed to continue operation uninterrupted

This machine is not a computer. It learns by trial and error, relating new situations to its past experience--and constantly improving its skill.

That last attribute is probably what distinguishes it from mere humans who have been known to [illegible] for which [illegible] is known. It figures out its own method of attack, gives the answers- and can tell how it arrived at the answer.

Raytheon now has two of these inhuman humans working at its Advanced Development Laboratory at Norwood.

The smaller (K-100*) is working on military problems under contract from the Pentagon.

But Cybertron K-200, now nearly completed, is designed to recognize speech sounds. When ready, it will be capable of recognizing and typing out all typical American word sounds by using its 192 learning elements.

To give you an idea of how they work:

On a tape about one foot long, it stores all it learns in a given field--say about dozens of cardiograms and sonar identifications.

It learns by being exposed to data or experience on specific fields, modifying what has already been learned, and storing new data on its memory element.

It absorbs all it needs to know on each experience in seconds.

Some idea of future uses of these machines comes from Richard E. Krafve, president of Raytheon:

Weather forecasting, analysis of radar data, sorting of industrial or agricultural products. In the end- it may halp to devise more discriminatory radar.

Pitted against experienced sonar operators, for example, it learned to separate out false targets echoes....learning in hours what it had taken these veterans months to absorb.

Equipped with sensors giving data on wind, temperature, weather map and radar patterns, and other details, the machine could help weathermen make local predictions in munutes.

If, following a prediction, the machine's findings proved wrong, it could be told it erred. It would then adjust or refine its memory content, reducing the chance it would make the same mistake again.

Cybertron dies not run the danger of becoming bored with repitition. Rather, it thrives on repetition, continually refining its learning and bettering performance.

Since Cybertron's learning is in the form of signals, the machine's brain can be picked by brother machines hundreds of miles away. All it knows can be transmitted by conventional communications systems.

Once the Cybertron has mastered a particular task, its know-how can be transferred to an AIDE (Adapted Identification Decision Equipment), a simpler, more compact machine which can perform the task but cannot do any further learning.

In industry, a master-apprentice plan could be adopted. A master Cybertron, centrally located, would learn jobs. Its learning would then [illegible] DBs never forget what has been learned.

through the woods, underground.

But shortly after noon on Saturday, Wayland firemen located the blaze about 1200 feet from Draper rd. and both departments moved in on it.

It was brought under control within 14 minutes but the process of damping down the earth and cleaning up consumed four hours for the Wayland firemen and three for those from Weston.

Water had to be tanked into the site because of the distance and terrain involved. Several refill runs were made.

Then on Sunday at 2:48 p.m., Wayland firemen found the blaze had rekindled. It was brought under control an hour later.

Three pieces of apparatus responded from Wayland on Saturday and two from Weston. The state fire patrol truck also was on hand.

In other Wayland fire calls:

On Friday at 12:58 p.m., cat rescued from tree on Edgewood rd. (not happy about it); at 1:16, grass fire at 94 Cochituate rd. On Saturday--at 6:45 p.m., false alarm on Dean rd.; on Monday at 2:25 p.m., child locked in at 23 Marsall terr.; at 7:50 p.m., false alarm from flaw in alarm system at Cochituate Nursing Home; at 7:51 p.m., wires down on Edison Co. pole on Commonwealth rd., E.

First Change in 25 Years

Weston Observatory Gets Sharper Ears for Quakes

WESTON--Modern earthquake-recording equipment is being installed at the Weston Observatory.

This is the first time in almost 25 years that any changes have been made in seismographic equipment and the new pieces will make the record much easier to read.

The changes are part of a vast revamping of quake recording around the world. Within two years 150 such stations will be reequipped. This is the second change to be made anywhere in the world.

When the old instruments have been removed, a spokesman said, space will have to be provided for three times as much equipment. It will be more sensitive.

The equipment removed from the Weston Observatory of Boston College will be distributed throughout New England by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey which is stepping up the recording of quakes throughout the world.

The new equipment will enable scientists to pinpoint quakes more quickly, authorities say at Weston.

This means that, although both old and new instruments recorded quakes all over the world, the new recordings will not have the faintness the old did.

To prepare for this vast changeover, workmen have been remaking parts of the observatory.

The Rev. Daniel Linehan, S.J., is expected back shortly from the Far East where he is advising quake stricken nations. Soon after his return, the new equipment will be ready for operation.

Garden Club Women Make Point: Wayland Center Getting New Look

WAYLAND--Wayland's experiment to show that something beautiful can be made out of wetlands is taking shape in Wayland Center.

The first phase of the Wayland Garden Club's unique effort to create a wildlife sanctuary and wetlands arboretum out of a center-of-town mudhole has been completed.

Approximately an acre of town owned land has just been dredged to make room for the new look.

The contrast is startling but in about one year, the plantings suitable to a wetlands plot should become visible, according to Mrs. William Tolman, chairman of the club's sanctuary Committee.

We'd like to prove that you don't have to bring the bulldozer in when you find swampy area in a nice section," said Mrs. Tolman. "Nor do you have to bury the brook in the culvert."

The garden club hopes to prove to conservation-minded Wayland that it has the key to beautifying these areas that abound in the town.

"Also," added Mrs. Tolman, "it might prove helpful to other towns. We're going to spread the word....when we complete this project."

Actually the determined group of women that is the Wayland Garden Club does not sit idly by. Once a project is born, as this was in the Fall of 1957, they work hard to make it click.

Their efforts to raise $10 apiece to meet the total cost--in four figures--led to some unusual jobs:

One woman cut neighbors' childrens hair. Another got up every Sunday to prepare stewed kidneys (which she detests) for her family--at a price.

And there were those who set up a babysitting business, did cooking for friends' dinners. flower arrangements for their weddings. One woman sold custom-made doll clothes and another intrigued her friends with handwriting analysis. All for a price...for the big goal.

It will be about a year before extensive planting will be undertaken, Mrs. Tolman said. It will take that long for the land to resettle.

Some plantings may be undertaken meanwhile.

A project such as this calls for extensive technical know-how, and this was furnished by the Middlesex Soil Conservation District.

"Without their assistance, we could never have done this," Mrs. Tolman explained. "and we have been exceedingly fortunate in out dredger, Mr. Joseph DeDeo of Marlboro who is a real artist in this work."

The garden club's wetlands arboretum will be the largest in the state, larger even than the portion of the Arnold Arboretum devoted to this.

The club has let the form of this sanctuary and arboretum grow out of the natural conditions, utilizing the damp region to produce something of beauty.

Into it they hope to place songbirds, waterfowl, and small aquatic mammals.

Also- they hope to work with the science department of the junior high to afford a living laboratory for science students.

Egbert Hans, consultant to the State Department of Natural Resources, was also very helpful in the project.

Mrs. Parmalee C. Hill is president of the club. Mrs. Robert Elwell will join Mrs. Tolman this fall as co-chairman of the sanctuary committed for the planning phase.

Protest —

Noise - and Then Some

"We already know every workman by name over there," said one Weston resident representing the Hobbs Brook Improvement Assn. and the terminal owners. Mr. Crafts recently filed a bill in equity in Superior Court, Cambridge, to:

--Halt what he termed a common law nuisance.

--Get the terminal to conform to Waltham zoning laws which prohibit excessive noise, fumes, etc.

The 24-hour truck terminal backs up on one of Weston's exclusive residential sections.

The difficulty is one of many that plague adjoining towns in the absence of mutual planning by two communities or some metropolitan planning agency.

Hearing in Fall?

If an agreement can not be worked out to quiet present conditions, according to Mr. Crafts the case will probably be scheduled for a hearing in the fall.

If the court agrees on the nuisance, it would then work out some sort of agreement as to noise abatement during certain hours.

Mr. Crafts described the terminal as one of the largest on the East Coast. He said interstate trucks pick up and discharge cargoes there for concerns all over Greater Boston.

Surprised Everyone

"The difficulty," according to some Weston residents, "is that a complete rezoning was done on this area in the first place. That made it possible for any type commercial operation to come in.

"I don't think anyone expected this truck firm would be a 24-hour affair but I can't help but think that if a simple variance for one specific business had been granted, we wouldn't be in this stew."

Mr. Crafts pointed out that although the matter had to do with the laws of Waltham, the Weston residents had a right to seek redress through an equity suit.

'Without Our Say-So'

The situation was cited by Weston selectmen last winter in opposing the erection of commercial and apartment buildings on the present site of Norumbega Park.

They noted that the planning board and selectmen of one community had some necessity for feeling responsible for the type of zoning on their community's outskirts -- since the edge of the town facing rezoning was also the edge of an adjoining community. Any zoning changes, they pointed out, could adversely affect the neighboring town.

"We feel we've been put in a commercial zone without our say-so," said a Legion rd. homeowner.

Mr. Crafts pointed out that the terminal owners had reduced the Big Boomer loudspeaker to several smaller ones but he said nothing much had been conceded until he filed the equity suit.

"We'll need more concessions than that before we'll feel that we've been given proper consideration," he added.

Just because the terminal is in another community gives it no right to create a nuisance, is the argument of the improvement association.

Heard House —

1--Granted permission for the society to move the building.

2--Instructed the tree warden to do the necessary trimming and other work on the trees along Sudbury rd.

It came about this way:

Selectman Frank Tarr cited a new state statute permitting communities to trim trees up to an indefinite height for the purpose of moving buildings.

(Heretofore, trimming was limited to aiding traffic passage.)

He moved permission be granted but Selectman George Lewis said he'd be happier if the motion were split in two parts.

Chairman Thomas F. Linnehan, who has thus far not spoken up on the issue, then voted that the motion be to grant permission and to direct the tree warden to follow through.

There were no audible ayes or noes but the motions were declared passed. There was no argument or dissent among the selectmen. Mr. Tarr and Mr. Lewis were known to be in favor.

Even if a temporary or permanent injunction is granted against the town, Mr. Kilburn thought this could be settled in court by early September.

[illegible] ing system, he said, should not be started and then stopped in the cold weather.

Turned over to Mr. Kilburn was the original report from the Davey tree concern now in the possession of the selectmen.

Originally, the town meeting of 1958 voted to have the Heard House moved but a succession of delaying actions by Mr. Heard have held this move up until the present time.

Renewal Row

gram is prepared by the planner the authority retains, is submitted to the selectmen for their approval, and returned, approved or not, to the Authority which then has the responsibility for submitting the survey and planning application to Federal government. This would give them 100 percent federal money for planning -- no matching funds needed.

The whole business is a kind of a long-form application for money, Mr. Fordham said.

Briefly, if any public hearing is held it will have to be requested by the Renewal Authority. Selectman George Lewis asked for a little more trust from Civic Association. It was brought out that any money to be spent by the town will have to be approved at town meetings.

In other business, the selectmen:

--Talked with plumbing inspector about the scale of fees for inspecting gas installations; voted to refuse approval of future bills which have not received approval by a majority of the town board involved.

--Voted to put town insurance, now handled by Boston Mutual, out for bids.

--Denied request of Mr. Brett that his taxi license be transferred to new owner, preferring to have new owner make application in own right.

Cat Shelter —

other person or group has to do this.)

Whether McCormack rules the law invalid or not makes no difference, Tougas told The Crier.

His group charges that it has been given a run-around by town officials when the cat shelter corporation tried to carry out a June ruling of the Superior Court.

The court at that time ruled that the Gifford permits were invalid and told Tougas to apply again for permits.

If all papers are in order, Tougas said, town officials must grant the permit, but he said it has taken two months to get a permit from the Board of Health and when it came to Building Inspector Homer MacDonald, he could get nowhere.

"Town officials said he was on vacation and we would have to wait until he returned," Tougas said. "Yet I understand there are permits already signed -- and blank-- in the office to take care of the vacation problem."

He said this "run-around" constituted contempt of court.

Town Counsel Frank Kilburn represented the town in the hearing before Dray.

In brief, the hassle over the permits comes down to this:

The court found that the building permit application did not have a signature of the owner nor did it state the purpose of the permit. (Also, that the health board could not waive granting [illegible] have spaces for such data, and that the building permit first issued by MacDonald did state the purpose.

"If our application is invalid for those reasons," said Tougas, "then so are 767 applications that preceded ours."

The cat shelter is about half completed. Work has been halted pending outcome of the court hearing.

The Attorney General must pass on the validity of all locally-passed bylaws before they can take effect.

Thus, Tougas was arguing against approval of this bylaw since it could hold up construction by the sheltering home. So far, the special January amendment is not law and all that is needed is approval by the board of health and the building inspector.

If McCormack should rule this week that the by-law is valid, then the sheltering home would have two strikes against it.

Town Beaches

it possible for the town to expand its Lake Cochituate beach holdings toward Rte. 30.

Right now, there is a problem as Mrs. Seth Johnson, Red Cross swimming instructor, has pointed out: the Red Cross classes have been held in the early morning and early evening.

And the reason: site is too popular and fills up during the hot afternoon hours.

Schools —

Tuesday, Sept. 5, at 9:30 a.m. and will then hold conferences with principals for the rest of the day followed by dinner at 6 in the junior high cafeteria.

Classroom furniture is being moved into the new high school daily as the builders finish off the rooms. Teachers' desks and office furniture are the last to arrive.

George Stanley Patey Jr., will be administrative assistant to Dr. Brackett. He is a graduate of Northeastern University with a bachelor's degree in business administration.

Mr. Patey has worked for a general contracting firm and has been engaged in his own business of building houses. He also taught for two years in Lebanon (N.H.) High School.

Positions still to be filled as of this week:

Social studies and industrial arts in the high school, home economics in junior high and music in the elementary grades.

WAITRESS WAITING FOR A RATING -- The waitress who serves Robert Farrington of Wayland had better be good. Each bit of service gets its rating from the president of Tippers Anonymous as Miss Charlotte McAlinden of Wayland is learning here.

He Has Tip for Weary Tipsters: Don't Tip One-Arm Bandits

WAYLAND -- Here's an inside tip: you can fight those nasty waiters without getting nasty about it yourself.

Robert Farrington of 7 Dean rd., Wayland , has come up with the weapon--Tippers Anonymous.

And it works. At least he has 1200 members from all over in this two-year-old organization.

With his help you just slip the snooty-but-slow waiter or snippety cab driver a yellow slip with--or without--your tip. It depends on how good his service has been.

How about that? A chance to strike back.

It all began , according to Mr. Farrington who isn't ordinarily disposed to take back talk from anyone, a couple of years ago when, wearied by two hours of sloppy waiting in a good restaurant, he nevertheless slipped the waiter a fat tip.

Just couldn't bring himself to tell the waiter off. He didn't want to make a scene. So what could he do?

When he got home that evening, Mr. Farrington had some second thoughts: why COULDN'T you fight back? And just like that he did. Found out, too, that many others felt the same way.

For one dollar, members get a booklet of 30 yellow slips.

A waiter's "performance", for example, can be rated on the slip from excellent to poor. Of course, if it's the latter--a suggestion is made that he keep the poor ones in his pocket to study in his free time. And improve or take the consequenses.

Of course, he's free, too, to pass the rave notices on to his employer. And good luck to him. Maybe he'll even get a bonus. We hope so.

"What we're trying to do," says Farrington, "is give the chicken-hearted person a chance to express himself without getting into an argument with the waiter. That's all."

(Maybe that's enough).

"Don't get me wrong," he adds, "I'm not against tipping. But how about making the tip commensurate with the service rendered?

"Besides, not everyone is bold enough to speak up when he's been had."

Most of the growth of this organization has come from "inside tips" from those who've found the plan works. Right now, there're 1200 members, all of whom are presumed to be feeling much better deep down inside.

As a matter of fact, some of the letters of application express gratitude that there is such a secret weapon with which the writer can strike back--after years of frustration.

Even a hotelkeeper had some nice words to say:

"One of the principal reasons in my estimation why service is so poor in hotels and restaurants today is that the public gives tips indiscriminately whether the service is good or bad."

Well, if you've suffered through the sneer treatment of a waiter blinded by his own importance, maybe this makes sense.

To the waiter who can--or will--read, each yellow slip informs him:

"This group is dedicated to improving service and restoring its reward--tipping to its rightful status."

"The group is not opposed to tipping," it sneers at the sneerer, "but feels that its meaning has been lost in the hurried pace of the modern world."

Gosh--reading that, we haven't felt so good in weeks.

Car Inspection Early-Start Sept.1

BOSTON -- Time waits for no man. Neither does Registrar Riley who announces that car inspections must be completed by Oct. 15 this year not Oct. 30.

You can start looking for your black and-green OK sticker from Sept. 1 onward. And don't forget, on wrap arounds: it goes on the lower (far) right corner. Also: everything else comes off the windshield or else.

Just a thought: There are 1,958,392 motor vehicles and trailers registered in the state so start early. Last fall, 527 motorists were hauled into court for you know what.

Good Headlights Count

As the days of early darkness approach, you must be able to see the road ahead to avoid involvement in a traffic accident. This means that your headlights must be in good working order. This year the Fall inspection period, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15, gives you plenty of time to comply with the inspection law. The green inspection sticker on your windshield will indicate to your neighbors that you are a member in good standing of the Massachusetts traffic accident prevention team.

Life is too short to do anything for oneself that one can pay others to do for one.

Time To Register For Wayland H.S.

WAYLAND New students planning to enter Wayland High School (Grades 9 12) are to register at the Administration Building between the hours of 8 and 12 on the morning of Sept. 5.

To complete their registration a pupil must furnish records from the previous school attended, their academic transcript, certification of age, and evidence of parental residence in the Town of Wayland.

Rear-End Collision: Don't Let It Happen

Rear end collisions are a common occurrence on our multi-lane high speed highways. They are caused by following the car ahead too closely. Common sense rule of thunb for avoiding rear end collisions is to allow a car length between you and the vehicle ahead for every ten miles per hour you are driving.

For example, at 20 miles per hour, keep two car lengths away from the vehicle in front of you and at 30 miles per hour, keep three car lengths away.

Richard Lombard Is U.F. Chairman For Weston

WESTON Richard B. Lombard of 35 Winsor Way has been appointed as chairman of Weston for this fall's United Fund "People Helping People" Campaign. As community chairman he will be responsible for residential and small business solicitation in the Weston area.

Mr. Lombard has served the United Fund in the past as chairman of advance gifts for Weston and as town United Fund co-chairman. In giving his time and effort to this year's campaign he says: "We all need and want for our Greater Boston community the services supported by the United Fund. Over the years it has been established that the all-inclusive campaign for funds to maintain these services can best be accomplished through the United Fund organization. Each one of us has a responsibility to support this effort which is a substantial one -- and I'm confident Weston will do its part in this job as it has in the past. It is my desire to make this a certainty."

Wellesley Figure Skating Club Organized for Area Skaters

WELLESLEY -- The Wellesley Figure Skating Club was organized this week for area figure skaters, with Roger F. Turner of Walpole, a former national men's champion and one of the fathers of figure-skating in the United States in charge.

Mr. Turner is a former executive officer of the United States Figure Skating Assn. and is a national judge. The committee was called together by C. E. Scotvold of the St. Moritz Ice Skating Studios.

The committee: James C. MacKenzie of Wellesley Hills, membership chairman; Mrs. Walton P. Lewis of Framingham, secretary; Mr. and Mrs. Donald A. LaBorne Sr. of Wellesley; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Reynolds of Wellesley, and Mr. and Mrs. John B. Perry of Sudbury.

The club's purpose will be to encourage the instruction, practice and advancement of all phases of figure-skating and to cultivate the spirit of fraternal feeling among ice skaters. Its aim: to produce amateur ice shows, to develop competitive skaters.

Three years ago the St. Moritz Ice Skating Studios opened their facilities at Wellesley. The studio operates a figure skating school and family skating center designed primarily for the instruction and practice of individuals just learning.

It was deemed necessary to create an organized club to carry many skaters developed at these classes and other figure skaters in the area further in their skating. A new full size ice skating rink is being developed in the area, and this rink with complete facilities will be available to the club in the fall.

All skaters interested in information regarding application for membership may contact any of the following, evenings: Mr. MacKenzie at CE 5-1581, Mrs. Lewis at TR 2-6267, Mrs. LaBorne at CE 5-2320, Mrs. Reynolds at CE 5-8615, Mrs. Perry at HI 3-2953.

Appointments should be made as soon as possible for evaluation of the speech problem and for class attendance in the fall by calling the Parmenter Health Center, OL 3-5111.

Christian Science Services

WESTON -- Significance for today of the healing theology of Christ Jesus will be explained at First Church, Christian Scientist, Weston and at Christian Science services Sunday.

Scriptural readings in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Christ Jesus" will include this verse from Matthew (9): "And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people."

One of the correlative citations to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy states:

"The highest earthly representative of God, speaking of human ability to reflect divine power, prophetically said to his disciples, speaking not for their day only but for all time: 'He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also;' and 'These signs shall follow them that believe'" (p.52).

Handiwork Entries Sought For Eastern States Show

WEST SPRINGFIELD -- Entries in the 1961 Handiwork Contest sponsored by the Eastern States Exposition home department will be accepted until Sept. 1.

Wayland Dancing Classes For Students Begin Sept. 27

WAYLAND -- The PTA of the Junior and Senior High Schools will again this year sponsor dancing classes by the Curry School of Dancing. Classes will be conducted by Edward Richards on alternate Wednesdays, beginning Sept. 27. Invitations will be mailed in September to all students in the 6th through 12th grades. The subscription will be $10 for 10 lessons.

Any further information can be obtained from Mrs. Frank T. Gerould, Sears rd. or Mrs. Harlow J. Barker, Rice Spring lane.

There will also be an adult group on Wednesday evenings. Anyone interested in registering for this group, should contact Mrs. Frederick J. Anderson of Woodridge rd.

Traffic accidents would be greatly reduced if motorists controlled their speed so they would be able to stop in time to avoid a traffic accident.

Wayland School Bus Policy

In determining whether a school child should be provided transportation, the following regulations set forth in school bus policy shall apply.

1. Pupils who reside more than a mile from the school attending are provided transportation.

2. Pupils who must traverse a dangerous route, exposed to traffic or other hazards, transportation is offered regardless of distance.

Explanation of rules for Wayland School bus use.

1. Buses and routes have been numbered for convenience and compliance.
2. Street listings for each bus route appear under the title services. If your street has been inadvertently omitted simply board the bus which serves your geographic area.
3. The last bus arriving at Claypit Hill School will transport special class students in that district to the Loker School (Bus 8B).
4. Stops have been selected in terms of safety and pupil availability. Individual stops will be made only on those streets where settlements are widely scattered.
5. It is possible that schedule readjustments of time and place may have to be made to insure smoother operation.
6. Elementary school students arriving at their respective schools on first bus runs will be transported home first in the afternoon.
7. Pupils in the Cochituate area living on the further end of West Plain Street shall be transported to school via Middlesex Bus as was the case in past years.
8. Because of varying traffic and load conditions only departing times and arrival times are indicated. It is important that pupils allow necessary time in getting to the bus stops.

Well, Did The Vikings Land Right Out There on The Charles?

by HARRY PATTERSON

WESTON -- The "Viking Tower". If you want to see it, you drive east on South Ave. (Rte 30) to the Rte. 128 rotary.

Go around it and bear right on River Road. Bear right again, and you're on Norumbega Rd. Go under Rte. 128, wind your way along for a quarter mile or so, and you'll see on your right a small, triangular park.

At the apex of the triangle, away from the road, stands a tall, round tower of rough fieldstone. There's an entrance doorway, and a circular stairway leads to the top, which overlooks the Charles River and Stony Brook.

Obviously it's a memorial, for in the wall facing the road is a polished granite tablet, about six feet by ten.

This tower, with the commemorative tablet, was erected in 1889 by Prof. Eben Norton Horsford.

You don't hear much about Prof. Horsford today, but in the 1880s he was a prominent figure. He became convinced, through an immense amount of research and exploration, that, as the inscription on the tablet relates, Leif Erikson, in the year 1000, sailed up the Charles River as far as Watertown, and built a house there; that Leif's compatriots built a fort and a city at the mouth of Stony Brook; and that Norse colonies developed the area for 350 years.

They worked, he says, at a variety of industries, and he says that probably their chief one was the gathering, shipping and marketing of "Masur wood".

He defines this as the burr, or burl, sometimes found growing on an oak or other hardwood tree (Webster says it was usually a maple). These burrs, when dried and carved or turned, made very handsome drinking bowls that would not readily crack or split. The wood was highly valued in Europe, and the Viniand Vikings harvested and shipped home large quantities of it.

A good many authorities -- Thomas Wentworth Higginson, Francis Parkman, Justin Winsor and others -- disagreed altogether with Prof. Horsford's conclusions, and didn't hesitate to say so in print.

Some stated flatly that the Norsemen never sailed south of the St. Lawrence River -- that Viniand was in Labrador -- or that Prof. Horsford had allowed his imagination to override his good sense, and to make things appear logical and true that were not so at all.

However, the professor not only stood vigorously by his guns, but seemed to get a certain enjoyment out of the argument.

He replied to his critics with several large volumes filled with photographs and old maps. In fact, he must have spent about half his time, for several years, interpreting the ancient Norse Sagas, and putting his findings concerning them, as well as the results of his explorations around Weston and Watertown, on paper, in defense of his theories.

The tumult and the shouting have died after 70 years. But there's a saying that everyone is entitled to his own opinion, and it may be that the professor was right, after all.

Who knows -- or, probably, ever will know?

A driver should never answer the call of the open road with a chip on his shoulder. A give and take mental attitude contributes much toward accident free driving.

Wayland Pupils Get Rare Courses In Harvard Summer School

SCIENCE ABSORBS THEM -- These junior high school students from four west-of-Boston suburbs get first-hand experience in science at unusual Harvard Summer School conducted in Lexington. Courses they would not get in regular classroom study were given there by teacher teams, including one from Weston. Wayland pupils attended.

LEXINGTON -- Five hundred and fifty pupils from Wayland, Concord, Lexington and Winchester have finished a new six-week summer school program held in Lexington in cooperation with the Harvard Graduate School of Education.

The Harvard Lexington Summer Program, held for the first time this year, gave pupils from the four communities a chance to increase their knowledge and experience in areas not normally offered during the regular school year.

It also gave 62 teachers and principals from 17 states who were enrolled at the Harvard Graduate School of Education, an opportunity to observe, analyze, and study team teaching.

Each team included a team leader and a senior teacher, each a specialist in one or more subjects; two teachers; and a teacher aide, who handled secretarial and other non-professional tasks for the teachers.

Each team worked together to plan and carry out the instruction of some 100 pupils on two grade levels, using a variety of different methods, class groupings and teaching materials.

Pupils were taught in groups ranging in size from two or three to 107, and carried out independent study projects of their own under the general supervision of the demonstration teachers.

A teacher team from Weston was among those working at the summer school.

Wayland pupils attending were:

Claypit Hill School: Gerald W. Best, Thomas F. Frechette, Robert W. Hanlon, Jayne L. Hitchcock, Caroline A. Karp, Richard R. Jones, Anne E. (Nancy) Quinn, Thomas B. Stanley and David E. Best.

Happy Hollow School: Jeffrey D. Mix and Herbert Ross.

Loker School: Virginia H. Emerson, Stephen M. Sharek, Richard J. Gebhardt, Vickery E. Randall and John G. Wood.

Wayland Junior High School: Christine Stanley, Robin J. Eddy, Joanne Connor, John Quinn, Christopher A. Eddy, Linda M. Gebhardt, Maria Gravina, William Rex Seley, Kathryn A. Juliano, Julie Horvath and Bryan Warwick

Wayland Gets Cat Shelter Ban Law But Runs Into Hassle With Lawyer

WAYLAND -- The cat fight warmed up again this week with two new moves, one of them unusual:

--Atty. Gen. McCormack approved the "cat-shelter amendment" to the zoning bylaws that would enable the town to throw the cat shelter out of town -- but the amendment still isn't law, and won't be for another two weeks.

--Meanwhile, the Ellen M. Gifford Sheltering Home finally located Building Inspector Homer MacDonald after a long search but couldn't get its hands on its building permit.

Mr. MacDonald just wasn't giving out.

The prospects: more court hearings in the very near future with Atty. Eugene Tougas of Waltham charging contempt of court.

Mr. Tougas' efforts in town last Monday were designed to show that Mr. MacDonald, as the responsible town official, was giving the cat shelter the run-around -- and it was quite an affair.

It went like this:

Mr. Tougas, accompanied by a colleague outside the fire station, ran into Mr. MacDonald who'd been unavailable during vacation.

Mr. Tougas: You know what we're here for.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes.

Mr. T: Is our application in order?

Mr. Mac: Yes.

Mr. T: Then, we'd like our permit, please.

Mr. Mac: You'll have to see Mr. Kilburn (Frank Kilburn, town counsel). He said you were to see him.

Mr. T: Well, is there any bylaw which says I must see Mr. Kilburn.

Mr. Mac: Don't know. But that's my orders.

U.S. Principals' Group to Study Wayland High Plan

WAYLAND -- The National Association of Secondary-School Principals received permission this week to come into Wayland High School to make a first-hand study of the system for a written report to be distributed among professional educators.

The School Board voted permission at its meeting Monday.

The association, as are others, is interested in Wayland's plan to build the school around a program.

Two exchange teachers - one from England and the other from Spain - have arrived to teach classes here.

Miss Brenda Whiting of England will teach third grade in the Cochituate School and Miss Mary Pazvalesco of Spain will teach Spanish in the high school.

Miss Pazvalesco is here under the sponsorship of the U. S. Department of Health Education and Welfare.

Miss Whiting is here on an exchange with Miss Frances Jacobs, third-grade teacher in Cochituate School, who will teach in England. This is the first time the town has sent a teacher abroad to teach as part of an exchange program.

Wayland Schools Ask Police To Help on Traffic Bugaboo

WAYLAND - Heavy traffic trying to avoid the Wayland Center traffic lights is creating a problem for the school department.

Coupled with heavy use of a road connecting Claypit Hill rd. and Adams lane (also built and maintained by the school department), it was sufficient to have the board instruct Supt. of Schools Edward J. Anderson to confer with town selectmen.

The board looks to having the town take over the road near Claypit Hill School but it seeks police aid in shutting off the slip-through traffic on the school grounds.

The latter is regarded as too dangerous to pupils to allow it to be made into a town road. The department recently spent $3000 to rebuild the road.

The board also voted to set up a study committee, comprising 6-7 laymen and 3-4 faculty members to look into the utilization of the junior high school.

Since there may be the need for added facilities at the junior-high level in the near future, the board thought it would be wise to study the role of the junior high in the present school system.

Just Looking for Garden Work But He Makes Bee Line Instead

WESTON -- He was such a quiet little man. Just walked right in the house, quietly of course.

And when the North av. housewife investigated the noise in the kitchen, he just smiled.

"Glad to meet you," he said, "I'm lining up some gardening work and . . . "

He sounded so reasonable but something made the housewife think he just wasn't the gardener type. And she was so right.

The man turned and bolted as she advanced. Gone like a flash for the Lincoln line. She called police.

Meanwhile, Officer Thomas Healy looked out his back door and saw the little man moseying around there and stepped out to investigate. Again the man ran . . . into the swampland.

When Healy called police, too, he got the message: get him. And get him, he did. After a gooey run into the swamp.

Arraigned Tuesday in Waltham District Court, Alfred Lewis, 43, was held in $5000 bail for a hearing today on the breaking and entering in the daytime and trespassing on posted land charges.

Lewis lives at 12 Haviland st., Boston, and has a considerable record as would-be gardener, part-time sprinter and activities less reputable.

Weston Police Chief Frank Shaw wants him for questioning on recent breaks in the town.

Two recent breaks in the south end, Chief Shaw said, follow a pattern found in a number of breaks in Newton, Wellesley and other nearby suburban towns.

These last two breaks, in which silverware, jewelry and TV sets were taken, are Nos. 2 and 3 for the summer in Weston.

Wayland Man Burned by Steam

WAYLAND -- Leslie Sherman of Oxbow rd., Wayland, an employee of the town highway department, received burns of the chest and face Monday when scalded by steam from the highway sweeper.

He was taken to Leonard Morse Hospital, Natick, by Chief Ernest Damon in the police cruiser. He was released and returned home for rest.

Mr. Sherman found the highway sweeper overheated and had stopped to obtain water. He told police he had cooled the exterior of the radiator on the rear of the sweeper, and was burned when he tried to remove the cap on the radiator.

Wayland Man on Carrier

WAYLAND -- John E. Haynes, fireman, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Haynes of 254 Boston Post rd., Wayland, is serving aboard the aircraft carrier USS Essex on a summer training cruise in the North Atlantic. The Essex operates out of Quonset Point, R.I.

Dr. Fuchs Off to Philippines To Head Peace Corps Mission

WESTON -- How does the dean of the faculty of Brandeis University come to leave a post he likes very much to work for the Peace Corps?

The answer, according to Dr. Lawrence H. Fuchs, is:

"This work is something more important than we can fully realize at this time. It needs to be done. And if it's done well, it may be lasting and of first-line importance to the United States."

Dr. Fuchs is leaving for the Philippines where he will head a Peace Corps mission to that nation.

A recognized authority on politics, Dr. Fuchs has never missed an opportunity to be in the midst of active politics, whether at the local, state or national level.

To these dimensions, the young Brandeis dean is now adding the international field.

Dr. Fuchs will be in charge of coordinating the activities of Peace Corps educational workers in the Philippines.

With him will go William Warren, education director of Polaroid, Inc.; Lawrence Howard, assistant professor of government at Brandeis and Harvey Pressman, now at Harvard and formerly an undergraduate at Brandeis.

Announcing acceptance of his new post, Dr. Fuchs said:

"I don't see the Peace Corps especially as foreign aid but as

Bernadette Houston Bride Of Joseph F. White

WAYLAND -- In St. Anns Church Miss Bernadette Houston, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Daniel J. Houston of 51 Plain rd, Wayland, became the bride of John Augustine White, son of Mrs. Joseph J. White of Westwood and the late Mr. White. Rev. Robert P. White brother of the groom performed the morning ceremony. A reception was held at Motor Inn, Framingham.

The bride was escorted by her father. She wore a gown of silk taffeta and chantilily lace and carried a prayer book with miniature carnations, stephanotis and ivy.

Miss Agnes Houston was maid of honor for her sister and Mrs. Robert Falvey of Fort Lee, N.J., also a sister of the bride was matron of honor.

Bridesmaids were Miss Kathleen Andrews, Wayland and Miss Lorraine Atkin, Cranston, R.I. They wore bouffant waltz length dresses of romance blue and white Dior bows. They carried old fashioned bouquets of daisies, miniature carnations and bachelor buttons.

Patrick Regan of Dedham was best man. Ushers were: Thomas White of Newton, brother of the groom, Joseph White of Westwood, another brother of the groom, Edward Casey, Westwood, Norris McSweeney, Westwood and Francis Carey of Lexington.

The bride graduated from Regis College and Tufts University and has been on the teaching staff at the Massachusetts Hospital School in Canton.

Strange Doings of Cats...

Some people have expressed amazement that the Wayland cat fight is still going on. They believed that it had all been settled at last January's town meeting when the zoning laws were amended to take care of this case. Or at least in June when the court ruled in the town's favor.

But while we've been going about our business, the spat over cats has been continuing.

Right now, the issue seems to be: Can the Ellen M. Gifford Sheltering Home apply for a building permit under the old zoning by-laws -- or must it conform to the new condition that compels "charitable institutions" to apply to the Board of Appeals for a permit?

The fight, all these long months since January, has been along these lines:

--The town has been trying to get the new by-law on the books as speedily as possible, so that there would be no question that the sheltering home must go to the appeals board for its building permit.

--But due to one delay or another, the Attorney General's office has not ruled on the new by-law until last week. Although the ruling was favorable, the by-law still is not on the books -- and won't be for another two weeks.

--Meanwhile, the sheltering home, losing its court fight to prove it had a valid permit, was instructed by the court to apply again before the Board of Health and Building Inspector Homer MacDonald -- in that sequence.

--But again delay . . . The health board held up issuance of its permit two months and by that time, Mr. MacDonald had gone on vacation, couldn't be reached and no permit could be granted.

--All this has left Sheltering Home representatives hopping mad. They charge this latest delay is due to town officials' hope that the cat fight can be stalled long enough until the new by-law takes effect.

--Town Counsel Frank Kilburn argues that in the "quiet zone" between old and new laws, the new law is in effect anyway.

And there it stands. We believe this maneuver and counter-maneuver is a good thing to keep an eye on. And we have a feeling that the whole affair is not over by a darned sight. Cats traditionally have nine lives.

Weston's Headache Is Everyone's

Weston and Waltham are one and the same community when it comes to matters of dispute over zoning.

This fact came home with a jolt again last week with a reminder that residents in the Legion rd. - Fairhope rd. region are fighting to overcome a noisy truck terminal operation next door -- in Waltham.

Not much success in one year's time, so the group has decided to get court redress.

In the absence of some planning agency which might serve as a clearing house for the plans of adjoining communities, we can't see any way to ease such problems as have arisen where Weston and Waltham are, in fact, one and the same community.

That's a difficult concept to get across. The idea that you come from Weston or Wayland or Waltham dies hard. And maybe it should for most things. Identity is worth something. But when it comes to mutual zoning problems, it seems to us:

The edge of one town is also the edge of another. And what one does directly affects the other. That makes these adjoining areas, to all intents and purposes, just one town.

What this calls for, we're not quite sure. It may mean closer cooperation between adjoining communities. A commercial or industrial zone ought not to shoot up in one town, when across the imaginary town line there are exclusive residences. This same issue is coming up again in Newton where the Norumbega development also threatens residential Weston.

It may also mean the establishment of the much-talked-about metropolitan planning agency. That remains to be seen.

But right now, we have one suggestion to make in view of the busy years ahead for the planning and zoning boards of suburban towns in this region:

Blanket changing of the zoning of residential areas into business or industrial should not be undertaken.

Under such an arrangement, the trucking terminal became the surprise owner of the land everyone expected would be occupied by a quiet laboratory . . . when the zone was changed.

Rather, it might be wise to make a variance for a specific business the rule in such changes. Make the change only for the type of building everyone is led to expect will come in. Only then will we have the type of zoning that doesn't make everyone miserable.

Brandeis Seeks Homes For Faculty

To the Editor:

Would you please inform your readers that the Brandeis Faculty Women's Organization has established an Off-Campus Housing Bureau for the University. This agency was created to be of service to both the members of the university and the landlords in surrounding communities.

Brandeis University appoints its faculty and selects its student body without discrimination based on race, creed, color, or national origin. We expect that a similar policy of non-discrimination will be followed by those landlords who list with us.

In accepting only these listings open to all people regardless of race, creed, color, or national origin, the housing bureau is acting in accordance with the Fair Housing Practices Law of Massachusetts (1959).

Landlords who wish to list rooms, apartments or houses for rent or sale, may do so free of charge by contacting the Off-Campus Housing Bureau, TW 4-6000, ext. 437. Questions may be directed to the bureau or to Mrs. Myron Rosenblum, VO 2-7036.

Yours very truly,
Mrs. Myron Rosenblum

Civic Assn. To Selectmen: Hold Hearing

To the Editor:

Open Letter to the Board of Selectmen:

We of the Wayland Civic Assn. feel that our last request was not specific enough.

Simply, this is what we are asking of you:

1. That a public hearing be held prior to your approval of the workable program.

2. That a public hearing again be held prior to your approval of the area planning and survey report.

We ask this of you: a) because the townspeople, at the last annual Town Meeting, unanimously requested that a public hearing be held on the workable program, and b) because your failure to accept the responsibility of holding the public hearing could be construed as being a breach of the trust that the voters of the town have placed in you.

The planning Board has spent approximately four years in preparing their long-range program, a part of which will be included in the workable program.

The short time that it would take to bring about a public hearing certainly would not jeopardize a program that has taken approximately four years to reach its present state.

In conclusion, we sincerely hope that you will comply with our requests and allow the townspeople to review the workable program and the area planning and survey report at public hearings prior to their approval by you.

Please enter our requests in your minutes with the properly carried motions.

Very truly yours,

Board of Directors
Wayland Civic Assn.

P.S. The following is the resolution presented at the annual town meeting and which the townspeople voted to have on record:

"Resolved that it is the sense of the people at the Town Meeting that the Urban Renewal Authority singly, hold a public hearing before the workable program is submitted to the state and Federal authorities.

Notice of this hearing to be published at least two weeks prior to the hearing in a local paper. If the majority at this hearing are opposed, it is our wish that the workable program be submitted at a town meeting for the town's approval before being presented to the state and Federal authorities.

We realize that according to the urban renewal laws, this is not required, but we hope the board will abide by the resolution.

For Us Suburbanites

Every so often someone tries to do what no one thinks is possible. And often that someone succeeds against odds.

This week we've noticed a little magazine called "1776" which is making its debut hereabouts, put out in the western suburbs of Boston for the suburban dweller west of Boston.

Problems, poetry, politics all mix here. For one amusing bit: an article on swimming pools and how to tell whether you've been invited for a noontime dip or an early cocktail party.

The publisher, Frank Anthony of Stow, says he's opening its pages to writers who have something to say and to readers who take time to listen.

The magazine, he says, is "dedicated to the principle of our original American Revolution". And not all within its covers is settled and secure.

The first two articles are pro and con pieces on the Peace Corps--the pro by Adele Seronde, daughter of former Secretary of State Christian Herter and the anti by Gwen Bell, Harvard professor in city planning and as a Fulbright Scholar a traveler in many of the regions eyed by the Peace Corps.

Included, all for the price of $3 for 12 successive issues (out at no pre-arranged time), are reviews of cultural events, recommended dining spots and a calendar of events--all "to create a public forum and source of information to be used for the benefit of those at home who are faced with raising a family and in keeping themselves informed on cultural and political matters."

Quite an effort. And after looking over the first issue, we'd say it's a welcome event to have someone with skill in the area writing for us--that peculiar breed that inhabits suburbia.

Hurrah for The Cats

To the Editor:

Am very glad to note that the Ellen M. Gifford home is putting up a good fight.

I had every intention of writing long before this on their behalf.

I wish they could move next door to me! It would be an improvement Waban could well stand. At least cats don't throw candy papers, cigarette packs and beer cans on respectable people's front lawns, and I know the Ellen Gifford home from days past when several very fine people from Waban served on the board.

Very truly yours,
Rachel Anderson

Letter To The Editor

Birchers Not 'Hate' Group Study Only

To the Editor:

As an occasional reader of The Crier, I find your editorial re the John Birch Society surprising in its naivete and reflecting the writer's lack of background on his subject.

The completely unsubtle insinuation that this organization is a "hate group" runs throughout the entire editorial. (Note the use of the word "hate" some five times and such other innuendoes as "angry", "all riled up", "stir the animal" and "get Earl Warren.")

This charge, so unfair and untrue, in itself exposes the lack of study into the J.B.S. Even Life Magazine, in a highly critical editorial, agreed that the Birchers did not fall into this category.

As far as the essay contest is concerned, the title is "Grounds for Impeachment of Earl Warren". A spewing forth of "hate" (as you call it) would never get anyone impeached and it is pretty obvious that the society means business along this line.

According to Mr. Welch, (your writer spelled his name incorrectly) the contest was to promote a "lot of reflection, study and bull sessions" on college campuses and to provide an "intelligent combing" of the entire subject.

The judges of the contest are men of a calibre that would not be swayed by an outpouring of villification rather than facts substantial enough to use in impeachment proceedings.

Thus, it would seem to me, that your writer misses the mark by a rather wide margin as far as editorial integrity goes.

We hope in the future that he will be fairer in his treatment of the J.B.S. whether or not he agrees with its general or individual goals.

Daniel F. Callanan Jr.
Haven Lane, Wayland

Ed. note -- We're sorry. We thought we did more than insinuate that the Birchers were stirring up hate. We thought we said so flatly.

As for impeachment, we were not aware there was any one way to achieve this. But we do not think the Birch-rodders are serious about impeachment -- only in kicking up a fuss in which someone might get hurt.

Christian Science Service

WESTON -- Strong assurance of man's God-given right to conquer every form of evil will be given Sunday at First Church, Scientist, Weston and in all Christian Science church services.

Paul's striking words to the Romans (8) are included in the Bible readings in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Man": "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? . . . Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us."

A correlative passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy states (pp. 303,304):

"Spiritual man is the image or idea of God, an idea which cannot be lost nor separated from its divine Principle. When the evidence before the material senses yielded to spiritual sense, the apostle declared that nothing could alienate him from God, from the sweet sense and presence of Life and Truth."

Man was made of social earth.

Good things come in small packages

We make no bones about it. Ours is a "local" agency. We want it this way, and so do our clients. They figure they're spending good money for all kinds of insurance protection, so naturally they want someone they can get to know and trust. More important, they want this someone johnny - on - the - spot if trouble strikes.

"True", you say, "but the big city agency can give me a broader choice of companies and coverages".

"Not so!", say we. Only the very largest insurance agencies in Boston can match the quality and scope of the companies we represent.

Right about here we should probably recite our company list -- but that would smack of name-dropping. Suffice it to say that we write policies for only the cream of the crop in this business.

And remember, we offer you a relaxed, head-to-head relationship that inevitably buys you the best possible insurance program at the lowest possible cost.

C.D. Chief Warns Public Against 'Fallout Fakes'

FRAMINGHAM -- Play safe with safety -- even fallout shelters.

That's the warning given this week to well-meaning householders anxious to meet the urgings of the Civil Defense authorities to construct fallout shelters on their property.

The warning came from Maj. Gen. John J. Maginnis, director of the State Civil Defense Agency, who pointed out that:

--Unethical or ill-informed persons were trying to capitalize on the upswing in interest in these shelters.

Most builders and suppliers, he said, are competent and ethical, and hundreds of them have consulted the C.D. agency during the past three weeks to check their plans against C.D. standards.

Gen. Maginnis added:

"However we have received reports that a few unscrupulous or poorly informed promoters have been misrepresenting their products.

"One thing the public should bear in mind is that the shelter plans furnished by the Massachusetts Civil Defense Agency are for FALLOUT shelters -- not for blast centers."

The prefabricated shelters being sold commercially with Federal Civil Defense acceptance have been accepted for fall-out protection only.

Gen. Maginnis said blast shelters cn be built but pointed out that this is a much more complicated and expensive proposition.

--Any citizen planning a blast shelter should get his information from the State C.D. agency.

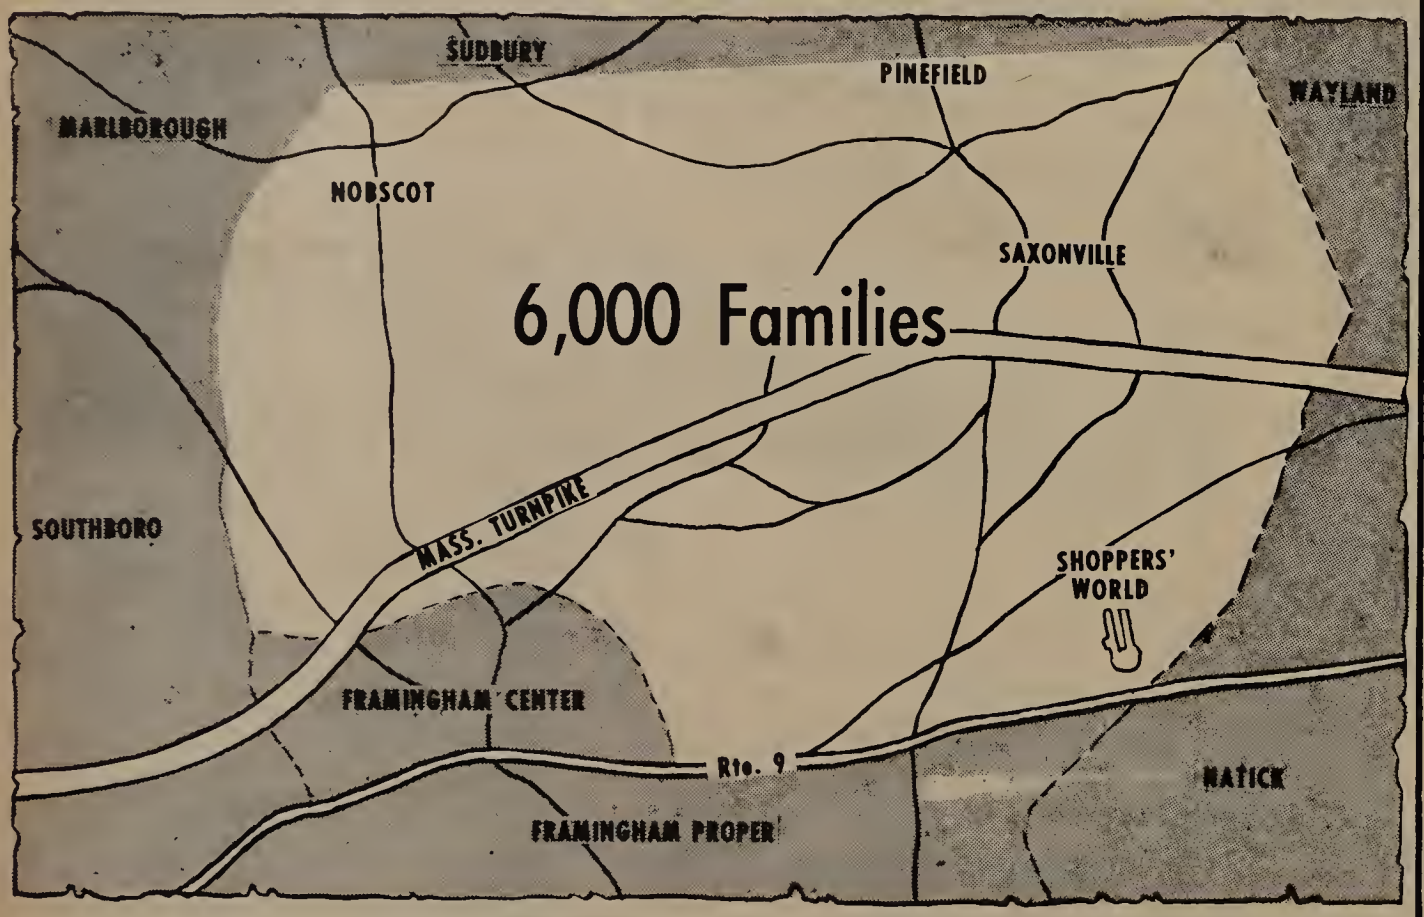
Also -- "Beware of 'protective' suits or clothing against radioactive fallout," he said.

"They offer little or no protection. No such garment has been accepted by Federal Civil Defense for public use."

Masks for protection against chemical or bacteriological agents will be available in the near future at fairly low cost, Gen. Maginnis pointed out.

Where real trouble crops up is with the rentpayer. He has no place to build a shelter for his family.

"We have advised persons in this position to band together and seek agreements with their landlords on some provisions for basement shelter for all occupants."



Another worry: adequate warning at the local level. This is a local responsibility, said Maginnis. A home warning device is available (NEAR) but will not be useful until power companies install gadgets to allow a special impulse to pass over the wires.

Things have come to a pretty pass, haven't they, when mothers and fathers are writing to a 10-year-old boy named Henry for advice on how to raise their children.

Things aren't tough enough getting the little darlings in for supper on time but what we've got to call on one of their own for the know-how.

Like this mother who asked about he son, 10, who just wouldn't keep clean. What to do? And says Henry: don't worry, I don't keep clean either, except in pictures.

Imagine a junior Dr. Spook yet! It makes us wonder what will turn up next. Maybe these youngster columnists will supplant the Ilg & Ames and Dr. Spook. Your daily paper and your favorite women's magazine will then feature the cherubic smile of some juvenile (in color probably) dispensing advice to the harried mother:

"Don't worry, so he didn't return the family car. Let him get out on his own for a while and learn about life. Besides walking 10 miles to the city every day will do the Old Man good."

Of course, this is only another variation on the theme of Bringing Up Father.

And the suburban father who's home only between business trips and cocktail parties won't mind anyway. He just won't have time to listen to this pint-size psychiatry.

What this is apt to do to teachers is another thing entirely. Teachers are not quite up to this line of reasoning and there may be a fight before the fourth-grade ruler-wielder decides to ask:

"I have one little fellow who's always pulling the pigtails of the little girl in front of him, tripping me up as I go down the aisle and never on time. I hate to curb his expression. Besides he's a dead shot with a slingshot, especially when I'm not looking."

Keep plugging. And if you want our advice: don't writer to one of the little juvenile pediatricians until you've tried everything else--including justifiable homicide.

School opening. Drive carefully. Might look at it this way: Be careful these youngsters are the taxpayers who'll be footing the bill for our social security.

A friend of ours told us about a spinster relative who lives in Boston with her dog -- or did until the animal died recently on a Sunday.

She called up the Animal Rescue League for help in burying it. Sorry, not until Tuesday.

"I can't wait two days with this dog."

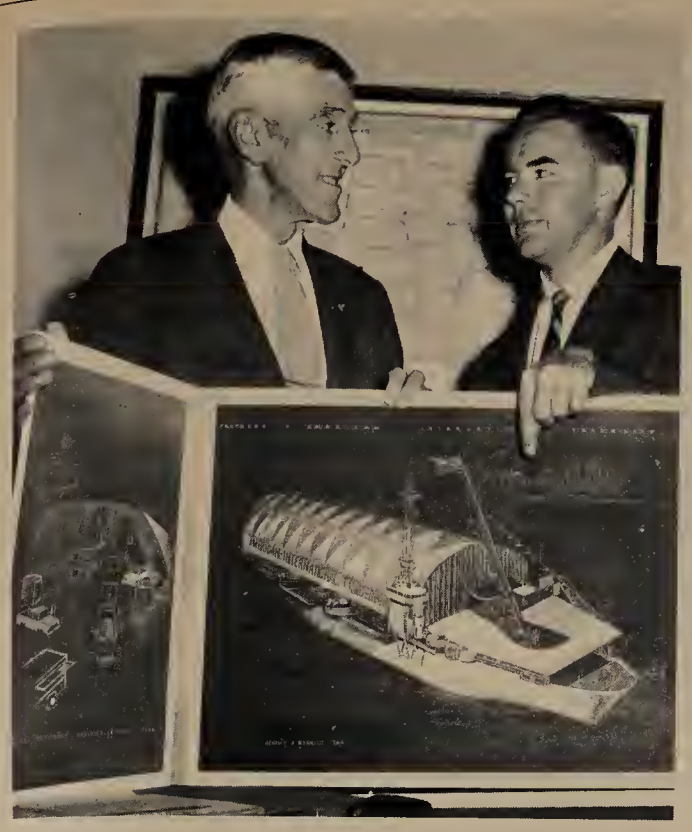
"Well, bring it down here."

"Can't. I haven't a car."

So next she tried a relative who lived in West Somerville. Got pretty much the same answer, except that he suggested she put the animal in a suitcase and come over by MTA. He'd meet her.

She agreed, and when she was struggling through the Park st. station, a man stepped up with a helpful smile on his face:

"That's a pretty heavy bag for a lady like you to be carrying. Let me give you a hand."



With only a slight demurral, she turned it over -- and quick as a flash, he sprinted off with the heavy bag and disappeared . . .

School is opening. That means teacher once again gets a chance to simultaneously mark junior and hint at what's wrong with mother and father.

Pessimist: one who's looking for someone worthwhile by tracing his family tree. Optimist: one who dreams that the big wheels are coming -- in the generation just ahead.

WESTON MAN CONSULTS with Sen. Saltonstall in Washington about a dramatic proposal for a floating trade fair. Dana M. Herbst of Weston learned the Massachusetts senator had joined Sen. John Sparkman (D-Ala.) to make it possible for a converted aircraft carrier to visit underdeveloped countries, displaying American industrial achievements. Mr. Herbst is president of the American International Tradeship, Inc., of New York. What's required: new powers for the U.S. Department of Commerce.

Magazine Salesman Problem in Weston

WESTON -- Persistent magazine salesmen are becoming a considerable problem in town, police report.

Many of these salesmen are legitimate, they point out, but many others sport a fake foreign accent or are noted for some disability. They all have a pitch: help me get the points to win the contest to work my way through college.

An old line but when coupled with persistent -- I-won't-leave salesmen, it makes a problem for housewives and elderly persons home alone, police say.

Suggestion: When annoyed by a salesman or in doubt about him, call police to learn if the salesman is registered at the police station.

Northeastern Acquires Weston Estate

WESTON -- Northeastern University has acquired a 35-room estate on Cliff rd., Weston, for adult programs of study, Northeastern's President Dr. Asa S. Knowles has announced.

Located near the Wellesley-Weston line, the estate, known as the Peirce Estates, was built in 1938 at a cost of $450,000 and was last occupied by Mrs. Edith Babson Mustard.

The estate has been named by action of N. U. trustees as the Henderson Center for Continuing Education.

Ernest Henderson, president of the Sheraton Corp. of America and a trustee of Northeastern, purchased the property for the university.

Programs of study for adults will be offered in the Peirce mansion which will be named Henderson House beginning with the 1961-1962 academic year.

Conferences, workshops, and short courses for men and women in business and industry will be given by Northeastern's Bureau of Business and Industrial Training, University College, the Department of Special Services, the Office of Adult Education, and other departments and schools of the University.

Henderson House will accommodate 35 people overnight and several conference groups could be held simultaneously. Three conferences with approximately 50 participants may be held at any one time in the facility.

Contributions of equipment, furniture, and other facilities have been made by Northeastern alumni, trustees, and other donors to cover the $100,000 cost of the center.

Programs of study for undergraduate students will not be conducted in the Center while those that will be given will supplement the educational offerings of the other educational institutions already located in the Wellesley-Weston area.

Dr. Albert E. Everett, dean of the Center for Continuing Education, will be the director of Henderson House.

St. Julia's of Weston Doubling Its Size

WESTON -- St. Julia's Church is undergoing an extensive expansion and remodeling operation. The work is expected to take about a year. It started last March, and completion date is shortly before next Easter.

The size of the Church is being doubled, as is its seating capacity, which will be 600.

In the basement will be a large hall, 65 feet long and 40 feet wide, which will be used for parish purposes.

There will be a large sacristy. The rectory has been moved from its former position behind the church, in order to increase the parking area to a capacity of 80 cars. It now stands directly across the lot from the church.

It is hoped that by the time the alterations are completed, sufficient contributions will be on hand to allow the installation of a set of chimes. PATTERSON

Damn Yankees: Winning Show; Best Bit of Music You Can Get

By ANNE HOCKING

When Douglass Wallop dragged old Dr. Faustus out of the closet, dusted him off and dressed him up in modern day baseball uniform, it caused enough stir in literary circles to be selected as a Book of The Month under the title THE YEAR THE YANKEES LOST THE PENNANT.

But Faust and his chum Mephistopheles have rarely missed an opportunity to be set to music in any age so heaven forbid that they should say "by me" to the Twentieth Century -- and a good thing too. DAMN YANKEES is as satisfying fare as you can get in musical comedy today.

Richard Adler and Jerry Ross wrote the music and lyrics. George Abbott collaborated with the author on the book. And Carousel Theatre presented a fine fresh production of it all last Monday night six years after it opened on Broadway.

Nothing has faded nor did the substitutions for the original Broadway cast seem at all in the nature of second string. Julie Newmar as Lola, the devil's temptress, was billed as having a fabulous figure -- no overstatement; nor is what she can do with it any less fabulous. But what is amazing is the protagonist's will to resist her.

Stephen Douglass the latter-day Faust, Joe Hardy, billowed the tent with as rich and exciting a baritone as we've heard all season. And Gabriel Dell as Mr. Applegate, the irresistible emissary from below was irresistible.

You might expect any story concerned primarily with baseball to be a bit he-man like in texture. It is, in fact it's a bit of a jolt when a dozen or more striped knickers suddenly break into a song and dance routine. But a pleasant jolt. There was about all the dance an easy masculine grace just unstudied enough to be both convincing and amusing. David Tihmar again was responsible for the choreography.

This musical is not one you're inclined to dissect.

Its elements, lines, lyrics, music and dance are all smoothly coordinated into a fast moving, sparkling two hours alternately switching from the vulgar to the virtuous so swiftly you can't keep pace with your own reactions.

But you leave the theatre, as you do a good friend, feeling a whole lot better about everything . . . even damnation and baseball.

Next week Carousel is winding up a very successful season with Patrice Munselin KISS ME KATE.

Skill that guarantees satisfaction in repairing the delicate mechanism of your fine watch.

Weston Meeting in November On Two-Precinct Voting Setup

WESTON -- A special town meeting to decide whether Weston will be divided into two voting districts will be held in November, probably on Nov. 14, according to J. Ward Carter, town executive secretary.

The plan for the division, drawn up at the selectmen's request, recommends that Weston be split into two voting districts--with Precinct One located north of Rte. 20 and Precinct Two south of that line.

This would mean that 2162 voters would be in the first district and 2307 in the second.

Probable polling places: the Town Hall for Precinct One and the old high school for the second.

What brought about the proposal for a change was the hour-long wait that most voters experienced in last fall's presidential voting when there was insufficient room in the Town Hall to process them all speedily.

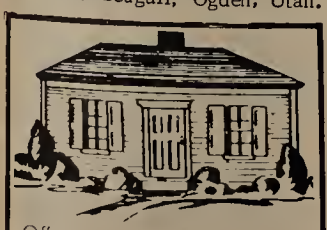
Steal-the-Boat Weekend Brings Out Extra Police

WAYLAND -- This is steal-the-boat weekend.

Local and state authorities will be on the lookout this weekend for stolen boats, according to Registrar of Motor Vehicles Clement Riley.

It seems that boat thieves, aware that the boatowner in a hurry to get the family packed and back home on time frequently forgets to take his boat along. That's where they move in.



They're bold, too, according to Riley. They load the boat on a trailer in broad daylight, always with a feasible excuse at hand if the camp neighbors get curious.

So police will insist that you prove ownership of that boat you're bringing home -- if they stop you this weekend . . . and they probably will.

The Great Debate Over Cats --

Mr. T: Is there anything in the rules or regulations that says you have to take "orders" from Mr. Kilburn?

Mr. Mac: That's my orders. Have you see him. I'm not to say a word to you.

After some more palaver, Mr. Tougas learned that Mr. MacDonald had not yet approved the building plans and they moved inside the Town Hall to look these over.

According to Mr. MacDonald, they were in order.

Mr. T: Then we'd like our building permit.

Mr. Mac: You'll have to see Mr. Kilburn.

This go-round continued for another few minutes until Mr. MacDonald informed his visitors that he had on his desk a letter to them in which he was returning their application and their $10 fee.

Mr. T: I won't accept it. I have the receipt for the application and the money. If you want to send the $10, that's just a donation. Not legal.

This got nowhere and Mr. Tougas asked under what bylaw Mr. MacDonald was refusing to accept the applicaton.

None was cited and Mr. Tougas again asked how it was that he couldn't get the permit while Mr. MacDonald was on vacation. Hadn't some been issued -- and how many?

Mr. Mac: Oh, about 9 - 10.

Mr. T: Did any of them have to see Mr. Kilburn before they got their permits?

Mr. Mac: None of them.

Mr. T: Then why me?

Mr. Mac: I'm just returning it, that's all. You can call Mr. Kilburn and find out.

Later Mr. Kilburn told the Town Crier that he ruled that the new bylaw was in effect even though it was not yet on the books.

"That's legal technicalities," he explained. "We are acting as if the law is on the books."

The issue there is this:

If the zoning amendment is on the books, then the cat shelter group must apply to the Board of Appeals for a permit, since all "charitable institutions" must take this step.

But if the law is not on the books, it may be, as the opponents argue, that they may still come in under the old law -- or as if the old law were still on the books and not in dispute.

That may be decided in the courts, since the Gifford group is expected to take the town back into Superior Court on a charge that town officials have taken evasive, delaying action when the Gifford group tried to follow the court's directive to get another permit.

Part of the windup argument between Mr. Tougas and Mr. MacDonald the other day centered around the question of whether or not Mr. MacDonald was refusing to issue the permit.

Mr. MacDonald refused at least a dozen times, to say that he was refushing, despite close questioning by Mr. Tougas. Later Mr. Kilburn said: "Of course, Mr. MacDonald was refusing to issue the permit on the grounds that the law now requires them to go to the Board of Appeals.

Weston, B&M Agree on Repair To Improve Conant Rd. Bridge

WESTON -- Work will begin, probably in another month, to make the Conant rd. bridge over the B & M tracks safer for traffic, according to J. Ward Carter, town executive secretary.

Conclusion of the rebuilding of the bridge will find it certified by the railroad for 15 tons.

The six-ton limit has meant that the bigger fire trucks have not been able to use the bridge on their North Weston runs.

Since the spring of 1960, the town and the ralroad have been trying to find a way to make this bridge carry its weight. At that time, the B & M refused to take responsibility for vehicles of greater than six tons.

Under the new agreement, according to Mr. Carter, the town will pay the full costs of current rebuilding and share with the railroad all maintenance costs.

What the rebuilding will accomplish:

The railroad will replace the beams and stringers and replace the deck, and raise both ends of the bridge.

For the town's part, it will raise the approaches to the bridge for 100 feet on either side.

These changes will mean that visibility will be improved on this up-and-over bridge. Residents have long complained that the visibility made for some close shaves in traffic.

Wooden railings will be replaced by a chain link fencing.

Weston Boy in Avon School

WESTON--Robert W. Blakeley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald W. Blakeley Jr. of 479 North av., Weston, will enter Avon Old Farms School in the third form, Sept. 13. His brother, Gerald 3d, will return on Sept. 12 to enter sixth form.

Avon Old Farms is an independent secondary school for boys located on 1200 acres of wooded land in the town of Avon, Conn.

Safe Milk A Century's Struggle

THE LIVING PAST

by

Howard S. Russell

The bottle of milk that you found on your doorstep this morning, or that you brought from the store: so simple and common a thing it seems, so safe and healthful. Yet its healthfulness and safety are actually a remarkable achievement, so remarkable that I can avow that if this article had been written in 1861, instead of today, and if each of my readers had been born only a century earlier than you were, a substantial proportion of you, my readers, and your children would no longer have been alive to read it.

That is how much of a scourge such milk borne diseases as tuberculosis and typhoid fever were in the early 1800s.

Since you are alive, perhaps you will be interested in how milk, with its truly remarkable potential as a germ bearer, came to be such a safe food; and considerable of the story has to do with our corner of the United States.

It is just over a century ago that this state of Massachusetts, so often an innovator, passed the first pure milk law on this continent, and, I believe, in the world. After three years, to make it effective, the legislature authorized milk inspection by cities and towns and in 1859 Boston instituted the first milk inspection anywhere.

Those middle years of the 18th century were an era of notable innovations in the dairy field. The ice cream freezer had been introduced in 1854. In the same year railroads began to ice cars to bring butter to Boston from Vermont. In 1856, down in Connecticut, Gail Borden learned how to condense milk successfully. Meantime in 1855, a farmer over here in Belmont brought into the county the first of the black and white Holstein cattle which now supply so large a proportion of our milk. In 1858 the Massachusetts legislature directed the Cattle Commission to investigate tuberculosis in cattle.

The new Massachusetts milk inspection law was not designed especially to control milk-born diseases. Though in some previous years half the deaths in a city such as Lynn were caused by "consumption", people didn't blame tubercular cows. They suspected such things as hot rooms, lack of exercise, even lack of bathing. Another quarter century was to pass before Koch discovered the tubercle bacillus. Nor did they connect milk with such scourges as typhoid fever.

Instead it was moral shortcomings that lay behind the move for milk inspection. To cool milk in those days, it was the practice to lower the cans into the well or spring. The suspicion was common that water sometimes seeped into the milk, either on the farm, or while it was under some dealer's care on the way to the city.

Since in this period much of Boston's milk came from the ring of towns such as Weston and Wayland within twenty miles, teaming distance, we are happy to know that a state official a few years earlier had called the Boston milkmen "in general a respectable class," including "substantial farmers". But over in New York, he says, "with the exception of a few establishments, where a sacred pledge of pure milk is given . . . it is a very general rule to add one quart of water to every four quarts of milk."

At any rate the purpose of the new Massachusetts inspection law was to detect adulteration in milk, and to punish offenders.

This was the first of a whole century of struggles, and final victories, to bring milk as a food to its present high standard. After Louis Pasteur discovered that a certain degree of heat, short of boiling, killed most milk bacteria, it took many decades to get pasteurization accepted.

Though a pioneer in inspection for cleanliness of barns and milk utensils in the eradication of tuberculosis in cattle, this state lagged. As the chief market for cattle in New England, Massachusetts, especially this eastern section, was riddled with tubercular cows. It was only about three decades ago, against the formidable opposition of wealthy and politically influential cattle dealers, that our herds were cleaned of tubercular animals. Thousands of cattle had to be killed in this country alone, the loss borne in part by the farmer, but the bulk of it by state and nation. In one depression year, when dollars were hard to come by. Massachusetts spent three-fourths of a million in payments for diseased cattle that had to be slaughtered.

Here, today, however, your milk is not only safe, it is a bargain. Its price is only three or four times what it was a century ago when the wage for a whole day's work was from 75¢ to $1.25, but as to healthfulness there is no comparison. Today milk comes from healthy animals, kept under clean conditions, fed on a ration far more balanced scientifically than that we humans eat. And it is pasteurized and refrigerated to keep its bacterial count at a point so low that it would have been incredible even a quarter century ago.

Something About Birds

By CHARLOTTE E. SMITH

WESTON -- A broad-winged hawk was seen and heard on Aug. 17 by Mrs. H. Ecker, Spruce Hill rd.; P. Olander and D. Bolton, Circle dr., have had excellent looks at the immature broad-wing in their neighborhood as it perched in trees nearby.

On Aug. 20 Mrs. L. S. Hayes, Gypsy Trail, saw a red-breasted nuthatch enjoying the bird-bath in her yard, and another was heard calling on Aug. 23 by C. E. Smith, Westland rd. The Gorleys, Boston Post rd., have been seeing a large flock of immature robins "worm-hunting" on their lawn and feeding on honeysuckle berries.

Mrs. H. P. Morton, Chestnut st., says that her house wrens have raised two families and are feeding a third. Six pairs of barn swallows nested in the Ellistons' barn on South av., and another in the barn next door. All raised young successfully and at least two pairs had second broods.

Rose-breasted grosbeaks (Fales & Smith) started to show signs of molt the last week in July and stopped coming to feeders after Aug. 6. None was seen again until Aug. 21 when a male (color-banded May 30 and a regular visitor thereafter) appeared at Fales' feeder looking very different than in its breeding plumage of black, white, and rose.

The rose patch had faded to pale pink, the white breast was dingy and streaked with brown, most of the black feathers on the head and back had been replaced with brown, and a light streak showed on the top of the head.

On Aug. 18, Mrs. Morton saw a pileated woodpecker working on a dead elm behind her house -- and this brings to mind a recent book on European woodpeckers (Weston Library has a copy) called "Windows in the Woods" which may be of interest.

Its German author, Heinz Sielmann, found a unique way of taking extraordinary pictures showing woodpeckers inside the nesting cavity, among them the black woodpecker of Europe which is the same size as our pileated and apparently similar in habits.

The newly-hatched young are an amazing sight!

Robert E. Slater Named to Board of U.S. Exposition City

WESTON -- Robert E. Slater of 12 Columbine rd., senior vice president of John Hancock Life Insurance Co., has been appointed to board of directors of the United States Exposition of Science and Industry.

The group is made up of representatives of major U.S. industries and is working with the Department of Commerce.

Its aim: to tell the story of competitive enterprise in this nation by means of a planned exposition city which will be built and operated by a private, non-profit organization. The exposition is expected to open in 1967.

Plans call for building the city on a 300-acre site on the Potomac River, near Bolling Air Force Base.

The plan has been endorsed by President Kennedy and Secretary of Commerce Luther B. Hodges.

Mr. Slater is a Fellow of the Society of Actuaries and a graduate of the Advanced Management Program of Harvard Business School.

He joined John Hancock in 1946 and in 1959 was the employer representative to the International Labor Organization at Cologne, Germany.

He is a member of the Weston Finance Committee.

Frankly, the scientists are getting ahead of the popular imagination.

Ex-Marine, 21, Fatally Injured In Wayland Car-Truck Crash

WAYLAND--A young ex-Marine driving a small foreign car was fatally injured in a car-truck collision on State Road, West, Tuesday about 2:49 p.m.

Henry M. Goff Jr., 21 of 20 Center st., Natick, was taken from the scene, just west of the Sudbury River bridge to Leonard Morse Hospital by Chief Ernest Damon and Officer Tom Murray.

His car was almost a total wreck, flattened and crushed in front.

Also severely shaken up in the accident were Douglas Hatfield, 22, driver of the truck and his father, Augustus M., 55, an electrician living at 63 Concord rd., Wayland.

It is thought Goff may have fallen asleep at the wheel and was unable to avoid the truck.

Witnesses said the car veered sharply back into the righthand lane at the point of contact.

The force of the contact sprung the doors and crushed the little car and sent the Hatfields' truck off into the ditch.

Goff, a Natick High School track star, had just been discharged from the Marines where he made an outstanding record, according to friends.

He was about to attend college in Boston.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Goff Sr. His father is an insurance man in Boston. He also leaves a sister, Mrs. Anne Johnston of Sherborn.

Goff had been employed at the Raytheon Company during the summer.

The Hatfields were taken to the hospital in the Wayland Fire Department ambulance.

Goff died at 3:30, scarcely three-quarters of an hour after the accident, without regaining consciousness.

Wayland Man Cut – Car Levels 14 Cement Posts

WESTON--Edward Perry of 3 Stanton st., Wayland, escaped with a scratch when his station wagon plowed up 14 cement posts on Rte. 30 at the Natick line last Saturday at 2:25 a.m.

Perry told police he had dozed when he woke to find the wagon ramming the posts. Police said the car was smashed on all sides and top, and came to rest against the 14th post. Perry had a cut on his right hand.

Truck Tips Over, Driver Unhurt

WESTON--Philip M. Biagi of Needham escaped without injury when his half-ton panel truck flipped on its left side as he was leaving Rte. 128 at Rte. 30 last Thursday about 6:15 a.m.

Biagi told Weston police that his front wheels locked on the turn and turned the truck over. Damage to the truck was extensive.

Phillip Moelier, 21, of Topsfield was shaken up Saturday at 6:30 a.m. when he lost control of his car and it snapped a utility pole on Oxbow rd. The front end was extensively damaged.

On Tuesday, Aug. 29, at 9:07 p.m. cars driven by Clyde E. Armstrong of Weston and Gladys Powers of Lynn were in collision at the Rte. 20 traffic lights. Both were shaken up and both cars were damaged extensively in the rear-end collision.

Weston Mulls First Fallout Shelter: Taxes? Zoning Laws?

WESTON--Weston is about to set a precedent.

The first request for a zoning variance to build a fallout shelter poses some problems.

And town fathers hope to have some of the answers shaping up by Monday, Sept. 25, when Winsor L. Chase of 241 Glen rd. has a hearing before the Zoning Board of Appeals on his fallout request.

"Since the fallout shelter is a structure it must come under the zoning bylaws," said J. Ward Carter, town executive secretary, in explaining the reasoning thus far worked out by the Board of Selectmen.

Some order must be preserved seems to be the idea.

But over and above the extent of a variance for a fallout shelter, lies the question of taxes.

There -- Weston and Wayland, too -- have not arrived at an answer yet.

Sure, a fallout shelter is a cold war necessity in a sense.

But there's no dodging the fact some homwowners may build a "shelter" for a playroom. So, would that be protection or fun?

Thinking in the suburban towns around here seems to be that some sort of state law should be written to make tax charges uniform.

There is some talk of giving substantial or complete abatement, depending on how much the shelter is utilized for other activities, but this is something best worked out at the state level.

At any rate, Mr. Chase is asking for a variance to allow him to construct a fallout shelter where the setback from the northerly lot line will be less that the minimum required under the zoning bylaw.

Weston Postman Retires

WESTON -- John R. Christian, for the past 10 years a letter carrier in Weston retired Aug. 3 after 35 years in the postal service. For 20 years he was a member of the executive board of the National Assn. of Letter Carriers.

Mr. Christian lives on Everett st. in Allston. He delivered mail on the south side of Weston.

Wayland Center Mite Too Busy for Newton Driver, 92

WAYLAND -- There are days when it would be better to stay at home -- and an aged Newton man came to that conclusion in Wayland Center last Thursday.

Charles O. Bowker, 92, of 518 Walnut st., Newtonville, had a rough time on Cochituate rd. when first his small sedan collided with a large front tire of the fire department's ladder truck.

Reversing, Mr. Bowker made contact with a cement truck.

No one was hurt, neither truck suffered damage and Mr. Bowker's car made it from the scene without help.

Two Weston Youths in Haste Repent at Leisure – on Road Gang

WESTON--It was a great weekend, but they paid for it with pickup duty over a subsequent four-day stretch.

Two Weston youths found guilty of dumping rubbish on Brown st. in their hurry to get away for the weekend were ordered to pick up all litter along Brown and Wellesley sts. clear to the Wellesley line when arraigned in Waltham District Court.

"And that means every last bottle, scrap of paper and stray hairpin," said the judge in giving them a "break." (They will have no court record.)

But for others who are caught dumping rubbish along town highways, the pickup penalty may be waived in favor of a fine.

Police Chief Frank O. Shaw said police have noted an increase in littered streets and he warned residents that rubbish en route to the dump is supposed to be covered.

Authority Agrees on Hearing, But Chides Civic Assn. Critics

WAYLAND -- Renewal worries continue to plague this town 18 months after it voted authorization of renewal and redevelopment.

Doubt as to just where the renewal and rehabilitation will make its biggest efforts provides most of the ammunition for a long-standing row between the Wayland Civic Assn. and the Wayland Redevelopment Authority.

The latest in this battle came this week with the WRA announcing that it has asked the Board of Selectmen to hold a special hearing when the Workable Program is being submitted.

The announcement came in the form of a special open letter to the civic association.

The letter, signed by Chairman Harvey C. Newton on behalf of the Authority, chides the association:

"It is most unfortunate that your organization has found it necessary to formulate what one of your directors described as "a program for harrassment of the Authority".

Then the Authority letter reminds the association that the blame for any failures may well rest on it.

"If, by your continued harrassment," says the Authority letter, "you delay the undertaking of a detailed study and the preparation of plans, you must assume and bear the full responsibility not only to the town, which at town meeting

'Student' Proves Apt Learner As Aide in Weston Town Hall

WESTON -- The newest member of the Weston town hall team is a 31-year-old former bank teller with a keen interest in town government.

He is James H. Fithian of 92 Columbia st., Malden, new assistant to the town executive secretary and town accountant, J. Ward Carter.

Mr. Fithian has a feeling for accounting and government that speeds him through his daily tasks with machine-gun rapidity.

"I can't imagine finding a job that intrigues me so much -- and in such impressive surroundings," said Mr. Fithian.

He is studying nights at Boston University to earn a degree he never thought he'd get around to until he found his interest in accounting in the navy.

It was just chance that led him to find his chief interest.

'I had an extraordinary lieutenant commander in the supply corps," he recalled. "He knew just about everything about accounting and he had a way of making you feel it, too."

Mr. Fithian had enlisted in the navy before he'd completed high school in Philadelphia but the navy work led him to get his diploma and immerse himself in college studies once he got out in 1952.

For those who have met him at his work in town hall, it is evident that he can meet the public -- even a new one -- as if he'd know them all his life.

"It's the bank work that makes meeting people easy," he said.

"I always felt it didn't take any more effort to pass the time of day

Something About Birds

By CHARLOTTE SMITH

WESTON On the evening of Aug. 24, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Gross, Westland rd., were surprised to see a male golden pheasant cross the road in front of their car on Ash st. near South av.

Barn swallows which nested at the Ellistons. South av., have not been seen since Aug. 25; and the third brood of house wrens reported by Mrs. H. P. Morton, Chestnut st., left the nesting box on Aug. 29.

A green heron was observed on Aug. 26 at 80 Acres, Lexington at (Smiths). Red-breated nuthatches continue to be reported (3, Smith; 1, Gates, Aug. 29), and on the same day a brown creeper and a young male redstart were seen (Smith).

On Aug. 29, in advance of a thunderstorm approaching from northwest, an unusually large number of migrating nighthawks was seen over Weston between 6 and 7 p.m.

Enters RPI in Fall

WESTON -- Gerard J. Leone, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Leone of 510 North av., Weston, will enter Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, N. Y., this month. The Rensselaer freshman class of 825 comes from 31 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and 12 foreign lands.

Blackbird Explosion in Northeast Worth Amateurs' Notice; Nighthawks in Profusion

Dr. W. A. Elliston was first to report this flight, seeing 30 birds in 10 minutes between 6:15 and 6:25 the Saunders family on Ellis rd. saw a group of 10 at about the same time and another smaller group of 4 - 5 which flew low over a wet area near their home to feed on insects, then rose to continue their flight.

After these reports were received, C. E. Smith saw 5 at intervals of about half a minute just before 7 p.m. when rain started and no more were seen.

During the summers of 1960 and 1961, many Weston observers have reported increasing numbers of "blackbirds" (especially grackles and cowbirds, but also starlings and, to a lesser degree, redwings).

During migration, large flocks of these birds are always seen, but the increase of breeding grackles in particular has been very noticable here. It is interesting to read, therefore, in Audubon Field Notes published by the National Audubon Society in New York that there has been a "blackbird explosion" in northeastern U.S. south to the middle Atlantic states.

The compilers of the report for our region say that the whole problem "provides a profitable field of study for the amateur, individually and cooperatively" and there is particular interest in the effects of the increase in cowbirds.

Enters Wentworth

WESTON--Lee E. Munson of 170 Winter st. will begin studies in architectural engineering technology this fall at Wentworth Institute, Boston.

Former Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks is chairman of the board of trustees at Wentworth, one of the largest technical institutes in the United States.

Gone Forever...

Weston authorities deserve praise for their handling of the Conant rd. bridge problem. Its repair means:

1--Loaded school buses will soon be able to go over this rickety bridge, until now guaranteed only for six-ton minimum loads.

2--Fire trucks, too, will once again be able to use the bridge.

3--With 100 feet of clear passage on both approaches, motorists should be able to cross this up-and-over (some say, up-and-at-'em) bridge from their list of road hazards.

Other towns, like Sudbury, might take note.

Faced with this driving hazard and the Boston & Maine Railroad's inability to live up to its side of an old bargain, the town decided it was cheaper in the long run to step in and pay the full repair bills.

We think so, too. And we'd just like to put up for consideration this thought:

The bridge problem entails recognition of the fact that times are changing. Time was when the railroad was willing and able to meet its obligations.

But those times are past, and to expect that somehow they should still be with us is to miss the needs of the present.

Towns like Weston are apt to pick up some odd added expenses from time to time as relics of the past fade away. And we must expect, in the interests of good goverment, that towns be ready and willing to assume any obligation that is vital to its inhabitants.

The Time Is Now

The time is now. Get the family together around the kitchen table tonight.

Why put this off when delay this time could mean tragedy . . . even for those of us who live in ranch houses?

We're talking about fire safety. Primarily, about what to do when fire strikes our homes. You'd be surprised, so few people know what they'd do -- or even what should be done.

Go ahead -- think for just a moment when you last rehearsed your family on fire safety.

This is one place where habit counts:

For example, think twice now about the correct and the quickest way to call the fire department. You will scarcely have time once the fire does strike suddenly -- and your child's life may be in the balance.

As a matter of fact, we're indebted to Fire Chief Francis J. Hartin of Wayland for these timely reminders -- and for these guidelines that you'd do well to check in your family tonight.

1--Keep very young children -- two and under -- in sight and in mind at all times. They need 100 percent protection from fire.

2--Teach the older child to respect fire -- and how to use it safely. Remember: the child always learns best by your example.

3--Check with your fire department on how to keep your home free of fire hazards -- especially the play area.

4--Know the right way to escape from any building in an emergency. And train your child to be just as ready to do the same.

5--Think this through now, so it becomes a habit.

6--Be ready to understand and cooperate with your fire department in all of its fire safety activities. Make it easier for them to save you, to save your children, from fire.

When you come right down to it, there just seems to be so many things to remember these days. But can you think of an alternative . . . if you want to protect those dear to you?

It gives me great pleasure to see we have a good "fightin" editor on the Crier.

I was pleased to see your recent editorial on the John Birch Society -- but I am chortling with glee at the Ed. note after the letter to the editor re the John Birchers in today's (Aug. 31) Crier! Bravo, sir!

Letters to the EDITOR

Birch-Rodders Defended

To the Editor:

Upon my return, I read your editorial in the Aug. 17th edition, entitled "The Birch-Rodders". It thoroughly disgusted me and I consider it a rather abject presentation by either a blind or totally ignorant or totally incapable editor . . .

First of all, Mr. Editor, if you didn't realize it or just refused to see the situation as it exists, we are and have been at war -- total war -- with the communist ideology for some 44 years. The avowed purpose of international communism is to destroy our country, the people who believe in it and in its way of life, and they have never deviated from that objective for one second . . . Mr. Khrushchev has been carrying on this policy with vigor.

When you are at war, you hate and you hate with a fury. The Holy Bible says there is a time to hate (Ecclesiastes 3, vs. 1-8). Of course to myopic inteliectuais that is not the way to win but then they cannot even remember World War II, can they?

I hate communism and everything it stands for or ever will stand for and I hate it with a passion and a fury -- and, furthermore, I'm proud of it.

I love the United States, its constitutional way-of-life and the free enterprise system, "Jeffersonian liberalism" and, above all, I love and cherish freedom and liberty.

Obviously, what I love and hate are the antithesis of one another and just so is international communism and the free, republican form of government under which we live . . .

You take Mrs. Louis F. McGee to task for not allowing an African student to enter Portsmouth (N.H.) High school, tuition-free. Hats off to Mrs. McGee. I would expect my school committee to do the very same thing.

Money doesn't grow on trees and taxes are high enough already without more free handouts and doles.

There are all sorts of philanthropic organizations and other groups ready, willing and able to send deserving people like this African student through school -- with tuition paid but I see absolutely no reason whatever for allowing anybody to go through the taxpayers' pubiic school system tuition-free.

And your statements about "this in a period when America's efforts to maintain its position abroad depends in part on such friendly efforts by small-town America."

Come and cry on my shoulder... Balderdash and poppycock . . . The only way America is ever going to maintain its so-called position in the world is through a show of strength and determination on the part of our people and government and a definite stand for our way of life and against communism. . .

Part of your statement in answer to the letter from R. N. Ober -- "We have long since left that gimmick to the Reds" (ed. note -- blaming all our ills on one person or cause) -- was most enlightening.

We certainly have left or given such gimmicks to the Reds and with it a lot of other things such as entire nations, hugh amounts of money, human lives -- over a billion -- freedom and liberty, to name just a few.

I have no reservations about what the Birch Society is fighting -- communism -- and I believe they are one of the few reaiiy true dedicated American organizations presentiy in existence doing so . . .

The Birch Society doesn't go after anybody, as you so faisely infer. They try to present the facts as they are and awaken lethargy which exists in so many peopie. Francis W. Perry does the same thing with respect to corruption within our state government. Is this so wrong?

Start reading and studying some of those books and publications and if you do so, unbiased, and if you follow a newsman's procudure of checking into the matter personally and thoroughly, you will most assuredly find out that the ideals of the John Birch Society are 100 percent pro-American.

You won't get very far just "studying the Birchers". You had better start studying what they are fighting and the overwheiming evidence to back it up.

We can survive the fall-out but not the sell-out. . .

Yours truly,
Miiton W. Heath Jr.
Wayland

Ed. note -- Thank you for your comment. But don't forget: hate is like a speeding car with a blowout.

Men of the World

One of his friends once said of Larry Fuchs that he had the face of an idealist, the mind of a scholar and, at times, the approach of the practical politician.

We'll submit that that is a meaningful combination for a person who will be leading a Peace Corps mission, as Dr. Fuchs will in the Philippines for the next year or two.

Maybe it's worth a thought, whether one is in favor of the Peace Corps, or not.

Dr. Lawrence H. Fuchs

For like it or not, for the next few years this nation will be sending emissaries abroad to the underdeveloped nations, presumably to help these sensitive new nations help themselves. That is a fait accompli.

And if that's the law of the land (permanent status has just been granted by Congress), then we must have the most adaptable persons representing us.

The task, as set up by President Kennedy, calls for a measure of idealism. And we submit that a group like this in which restless American intellectuals can invest their idealism is a healthy condition for the country.

But not everyone can be young and idealistic in these ventures. Idealists have a way of getting their intellectual arms twisted if they don't watch out.

Perhaps one safe caution against such a happening is the placement of practical persons in the machinery. One danger of Practical Persons often is, however, a tendency to downgrade idealism, the spark of the movement.

So we believe that a measure of idealism, tempered by practicality and the perspective of the scholar can add something to this get-acquainted movement. When these elements are in one person, we would argue, so much the better.

No one who knows this young Brandeis professor of government (he's on leave as dean of the faculty of arts and science) would say that Dr. Fuchs leans too much in any of these directions.

As an idealist, he has devoted himself to education. Not just of well-intentioned college students. But also of adults, young and old wherever they may be as long as they had one smidgeon of desire to know more about government and politics. He has even helped to found a Democratic committee in Republican Weston.

As a scholar, his work on elections and election habits is so perceptive that even the politicians find it a useful reference. And in the political field, Dr. Fuchs has long been active among politicians on the local and national level.

Certainly the fate of the Peace Corps and of our efforts do not rest on Larry Fuchs alone. But they do rest on men like him -- idealistic, scholarly and practical men of the world.

ALA Considers Highway Hypnosis

"Highway hypnosis" is a growing cause of highway accidents. The conditions of driving on straight, winding expressways is conducive to motorists becoming drowsy, and, thus, dulling their reflexes. The Automobile Legal Association gives some suggestions on how one can combat "highway hypnosis."

1--Pull you car off the pavement and rest on the first sign of blurred vision or heavy eyelids.

2--Start your trip weil rested. Fatigue deteriorates your entire driving ability.

3--Move your head and eyes constantly and don't focus sharply on any object unless it's necessary.

4--Stop frequently and eat small meals instead of one big one just before or during your trip.

5--Try not to drive long distances at night when the danger of hypnosis becomes much greater. Darkness relaxes some drivers too much. Keep your instrument panel lights turned down to reduce their hypnotic glare.

6--Vary your speed frequently and don't follow the same car too long.

7- Keep fresh air curculating in your car and play the radio.

8- Whistle or sing to yourself and keep thinking of how you would react to emergency conditions should they arise.

Bits & Pieces

We think we've come up with what's missing in our foreign aid program. Expounding to the press in a remote Burmese village, the director of the Harvard Glee Club, said of its global tour of out-of-the-way places:

"Our purpose is to bring Harvard Glee Club singing to people who have never heard it before."

Everybody has his contribution.

You may have noted that the MDC is working hard these days...to get a bomb shelter for its top personnel. Of course, MDC means Most Deserving Citizens.

And speaking of vacations, one couple we know went into the sports goods store in the first part of July to get "just the right kind of sun hat" for father. When they walked out two hours later, they had signed up for tent, stove, blankets, cots, mosquito netting . . .

They turned it all into the best summer ever in Canada.

See where the obituary writers recalled that famous interview with Charles Coburn when he was 80. Said the writer:

"Coburn gets up early, jumps right into a story conference, a string of appointments, has dames for lunch, goes for a walk, dines out, dances till midnight and plays cards 'til dawn."

No wonder he died at 84.

"BEST IN TOWN & FOR MILES AROUND"

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

They Digged and Heaped, Laid Stone on Stone

"Something there is that doesn't love a wall," pondered Robert Frost, New England's poet.

And, in our towns, besides the natural forces of gravity, wind, and frost that he had in mind it is apt to be the real estate developer, whose bulldozer levels everything.

Or the newly suburban lawn builder whose ideal it is to have his property an exact copy of the unseparated level greens in front of the houses on Commonwealth Av. Newton.

Yet a wall may be a truly attractive feature even of a suburban homestead, a protection for children and pits, and a boundary marker much less expensively maintained than the post and double rail fence now appearing so often.

It is worth recalling how necessary and valuable stone walls were during our first three centuries.

"Building stone walls," wrote Dr. Samuel Drane in 1822, "is not the only way to clear ground of a bad incumbrance; but when the fence is made, it is certainly the best of all fences...if built with good stones, a wall will stand many years without any repairing...

"Future generations will bless themselves, if they have materials on the spot to build fences with, when wooden materials must unavoidably be scarce....and very costly."

Far from a hindrance to be done away with, the presence of stone in a town used to be held out as an advantage. Wrote the historian of a Worcester County town in 1793.

"There is a sufficiency of stone, perhaps on every farm, whereby it may be walled in."

"There is a great supply of valuable stone for walls and building," commented a booster for a Connecticut town in 1837.

That is is possible for man to do a great deal more is nowhere better demonstrated than in that handsome example of fieldstone masonry, Weston's First Parish church. Weston has an ample supply of stone, certainly.

There were plenty of places however, where the soil was sand or clay, as it is in much of Cochituate, and the stone of which walls were to be made had to be hauled long distances, on stone boats and drags.

You might imagine that building walls would have been a good job for winter, when work on the farm was slack; but have you ever tried to pick up a rock out of frozen [illegible]

Hence we find a farmer diarist recording, on July 31, 1736:

"I laid the foundation of a Stone wall. Dug a Ditch about a foot Deep. Lay it in that it may not be undermined."

On Aug. 12, another year: "I was at home Placing some great Stones and beginning the Wall."

On another year's Sept. 3, he counted that he has laid 203 feet of wall by that time.

Ed Farrar of South Lincoln once told me that the stone wall near the old house on the Wayland rd. was laid by a man who had to haul the stone a mile, then build it. The cost, some time early in the last century, was $1.50 per rod, or a little less than ten cents a foot.

A dime was once a valuable coin!

A skilled stone wall layer, like any other artist, was proud of his work; but not every helper on a wall was either proud or willing. When the British fleet was harrying the Southeastern Massachusetts and Connecticut shores during the Revolution, they made a raid on Dartmouth, now New Bedford.

There were "defectors" then, as now, though perhaps the secrets they carried were less valuable. One at Dartmouth, who had been employed by a member of the clan to which I belong, left the following message chalked on the barn door:

"I make no more stone wall for old Joseph Russell"

Like the quotation with which we began this piece, that also contains food for thought.

Women Voters at Conference Today

Members of the Wayland and Weston Leagues of Women Voters will participate in a regional conference, entitled A Day of Discussion, to be held at Tufts University today.

The Sears-Roebuck Foundation, the Adult Education Institute of New England, and the Leagues of Women Voters of Massachusetts, Maine and New Hampshire are joint sponsors of this conference.

Those attending from this area are: Mrs. Herbert Lipton, Discussion Leader Chairman and 1st Vice President; Mrs. John D. Quackenbos, Local Item Chairman; Mrs. Robert Donaldson, Discussion Leader; and Mrs. Warren T. Eriksen, State Item Chairman, of the Wayland League; and Mrs. Richard Berry, Local Item Chairman; Mrs. Gordon Brownell, Unit Organization Chairman; Mrs. J. Bruce Dougherty, Voters Service Chairman; and Mrs. Eric Reissner, President, all of the Weston league.

On the previous day, September 6, a conference convened by the National League of Women Voters for local League leaders was attended by the following members of the Weston LWV: Mrs. Burton A. Bromfield and Mrs. Earl Eames, Co-Chairman, Foreign Policy; Mrs. Marion E. Hines, Legislative Chairman; and Mrs. Eric Reissner, President.

About 20,000 students are registered in public vocational schools in Massachusetts.

Austrian Organ Installed At First Parish, Wayland

WAYLAND -- A new pipe organ is being installed in the First Parish Church, Wayland, to be heard by the congregation for the first time early in September. Regular 11 o'clock services at the church will resume Sunday, Sept. 10.

Manufactured in western Austria by the Rieger Organ Co., the new instrument reached Boston by ship and is being placed in the First Parish Church by Winfred Albiez, Rieger engineer.

Mr. Albiez came to Wayland directly from Port Au Prince, Haiti, where he had been since May, installing a new organ in the Episcopal Cathedral.

Wayland's considerably smaller Salzburg Model Rieger Organ, consisting of 11 stops, will, it is hoped, be completely operational early in September.

A new organist will also join the First Parish Staff this fall. Mrs. Charles Brock, who received the M.A. degree in organ at New England Conservatory in June, will become permanent organist and choir director, succeeding R. Clifford Orr who resigned almost a year ago after several years of faithful service.

During most of last year temporary organists, or talented members of the congregation, served the parish.

Mrs. Brock and her husband, a student at Harvard Divinity School, came to New England from Erie, Penn., where Mrs. Brock was on the music staff of a large Presbyterian church.

Marines accompanied Commodore Perry's expeditions to Japan in 1853 and 1854.

Corvettes Fight Hard But – Knocked Out of World Tourney

PORTLAND, Ore. -- The Cochituate Motors Corvettes got a one-two punch that knocked them out of the world championship girls' softball tournament here Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 26, 27, but got rave notices for being the youngest team in a tourney of veterans.

None of the Corvettes is over 25. And none have played in the top tourney before, while many of their competitors have been in five or more of these finals.

The knockout blow on Sunday was dealt by the Minneapolis Comets, 7 - 1. Carol Marshall was met with four solid blows and five runs in the first.

The Corvettes gained their only run of the tourney in the fourth when Sylvia Beaudoin singled Joyce Letourneau home. Sylvia connected two of the Corvettes four hits.

Howard Phillips kept the girls on for the rest of the tourney. The added stay enabled them to pick up many tips from the veteran teams -- and to enjoy sightseeing in Oregon.

Claypit School Bids Going Out In Late September

WAYLAND -- The Claypit Hill School addition bids will go out about the end of September, according to Chairman John Arnold of the School Board.

He said the committee hoped that bids would be opened in time for breaking ground on the addition before winter.

The department will make renovations soon in the cafeteria of Cochituate School to make this over into an all-purpose room like those going into the newer buildings.

Free Pancake Breakfast Saturday at Wayland Coop

WAYLAND -- Come on over, it's free. The pancake breakfast served by Aunt Jemima this Saturday at The Co-op, Inc. in Wayland.

This pancake jamboree will be served 9 - 2 at the Wayland Village Shopper.

LITTLE BUT MIGHTY WANT ADS

Kiss Me Kate Un-Missable

By ANNE HOCKING

It's darned encouraging! Don't miss KISS ME KATE if you want to see what can be done with a lousy idea.

Of course we are all more or less willing to admit at times that life is a matter of making the best of a bad job, but here you have your bad job at its really sparkling best.

It seems that a certain set designer, Lemuel Ayers, and an idle producer, Saint Subber, decided one night while in their cups that nothing would do but that THE TAMING OF THE SHREW be made more digestible for the American public with the addition of a little music.

Thank heavens someone stumbled over Cole Porter before the idea reached full flower.

Anyway, here it is 13 years and 2000 - 4000-odd performances later at Carousel with Patrice Munsel pulling out all the stops.

We won't go into the plot -- read the original some night on top of an over-indulgent dinner and it will all come to you before the rosy-fingered dawn.

But what you won't get is the quality of Miss Munsel's voice nor the occasional rousing melody such as Wunderbar she lends it to.

Miss Munsels voice gives one a feeling a warm security, like a couple of cords of wood stacked up in the shed against the winter and a closetful of preserves in the cellar. Real old time singing -- of course she comes from the Met and all.

And her leading man Bob Wright is no slouch either. Someone's been neglecting him.

Then we also had Betty Ann Grove who was supposed to be pretty sexy and I guess she was because she came in for a number of encores, only I didn't think so.

And a couple of guys called John Smolko and Tom Pedi who were someone's idea of Shakespeare's comic relief. The Bard never was too long on comedy or relief, but as I say, here we are making the best of things and these fellows certainly did their share. According to the program, the latter has been around a while in all the best shows.

The dancing was gay as usual, only passably imaginative but all a trifle unrehearsed. The whole company had a way of teetering perilously long after the final strain had petered out. The kind of thing one does in one's own living-room after an over-confident and flamboyant solo. Oh well . . .

19 Veterans Back – Football Looks Good at Wayland

WAYLAND--Football looks like one of the better subjects (of conversation) at Wayland High as 19 varsity footballers returned last week for practice.

Led by quarterback Dwight Perodeau, the squad of 35 has been going through light drill under Coach Ralph Salvati at the high school grounds.

The first game is with Marshfield (away) on Sept. 30--and the chances are the Warriers will better their 4-3-2 record this year, if....

Salvati is doing considerable work in building anew. Possible starters, in addition to Perodeau, are Alan Arnold, Bob Kent, Ken Houghton, Glen Dusseault, Bill Morris, Tony Bova, Brent Hazard and Bob Ferranti.

Ted Langley looks like a possible understudy for Perodeau. He has shown some passing ability.

The squad:

SENIORS

JUNIORS

SOPHOMORES

School costs in Massachusetts exceed $300 million annually.

Massachusetts contributes $61.5 million to local school costs. The latter exceed $300 million.

Renewal Worries Still Plague Wayland

made it clear that it wanted the Authority to proceed, but to residents of the Dudley Pond area who would like to know as soon as possible how the plans will affect them."

This is the sharpest language the Authority has used in any formal communication with the association to date.

The Authority's letter was written in reply to a civic association letter of Aug. 2 -- nearly a month before.

In it, the Authority concedes the main point sought by the WCA -- namely, a public hearing before the selectmen on the Workable Program.

Only two weeks ago at a selectmen's meeting, the WCA representatives had pressed for a commitment from the selectmen to this end.

At that session, some of the differences that have marked the meetings of the WRA and WCA were evident.

Members of the civic group were asked to show more trust in the renewal authority and Authority member Lawrence Fordham said then that although the Authority was not required to do so, it probably would hold a hearing.

As in most encounters, members of the WCA were not satisfied with this assurance and demanded that the selectmen guarantee a public hearing.

Most of the trouble centers around the suspicion held by most civic association members that much of the renewal work will be done in the Dudley Pond area where many of them have their homes.

They feel the Authority has been less than candid in its discussion of just where in Wayland renewal will turn up.

On the other hand, Authority members, especially Mr. Fordham, have pointed out there will be no bulldozing and no major steps without public approval.

As the Authority points out in its latest letter, the Workable Program "simply consists of information about the town with particular reference to the existence and enforcement of its zoning ordinances and building codes, planning and other information about community improvement activities."

Renewal Authority: OK Let's Have Hearing in Wayland

Aug. 31, 1961

To the Editor:

An open letter to the Wayland Civic Assn.:

This will acknowledge receipt of your letter dated Aug. 2d., 1961.

As you know, at the recent special town meeting, the town rejected an article declaring that there is no need for urban renewal in Wayland and calling upon the Authority to dissolve itself.

At the same time, the town made it clear that it wanted the Authority to make a detailed study and prepare plans for the improvement of various areas in the vicinity of Dudley Pond.

In order to do so, the Authority has to file with the applicable Federal agency a so-called Workable Program and an application for a planning advance.

The Workable Program simply consists of information about the town with particular reference to the existence and enforcement of its zoning ordinance and building codes, planning and other information about community improvement activities.

Since the Authority could not proceed beyond the planning stage without further action by the Board of Selectmen, the Planning Board, Town Meeting and State and Federal agencies, there should be no reason for your association or its members to oppose the Workable Program.

It is most fortunate that your organization has found it necessary to formulate what one of your directors described at a recent meeting as "A Program for Harrassment of the Authority."

If, by your continued harrassment, you delay the undertaking of a detailed study and the preparation of plans, you must assume and bear the full responsibility not only to the town, which at the town meeting made it clear that it wanted the Authority to proceed, but to residents of the Dudley Pond area who would like to know as soon as possible how the plans will affect them.

The Authority has made every reasonable effort to cooperate with the association and its members and to keep them informed, and it will continue to do so.

In order that the town may be fully informed as to what the Workable Program is, we have requested the Board of Selectmen to hold a public hearing before approving it.

We hope that your organization will attend the hearing with an open mind and act in the best interests of the town.

Very truly yours,
WAYLAND REDEVELOPMENT AUTHORITY

Wayland Building Permits Off in '61

WAYLAND -- Despite the growth of some upper-bracket developments in recent months, the volume of new building for the first eight months of 1961 has fallen off, according to Building Inspector Homer MacDonald.

There were nine permits for new homes issued in August, bringing the year's total to about 60.

But - in the past several years there has been an average of 140 new home permits a year.

Unless there is a burst of new building in the closing months of the year, regarded as unlikely, the 1961 total will fall far below that of recent years, according to Mr. MacDonald.

Nearing completion:

--The cleansers at Rtes. 30 and 27.

--The Catherine Barton Nursing Home, one-floor nursing home which has many outstanding features for protection, worked out in cooperation with the town fire and building departments.

EARTH-SHAKING CRASH . . . and no injury to Franklin Loatman of Bridgeton, N. J., driver of this trailer truck which smashed into the bridge abutment on the eastbound lane of the toll road at the Oak st. overpass, Weston, Tuesday morning, giving Weston commuters a scare. Cab, trailer, wheels and cargo parted company, littering the highway Bridge pillar was "chewed up" (left in photo). Truck out of Boston is owned by Cross Trucking Co. (Larry Forman Photo)

NO ONE...

Passes School Bus Now

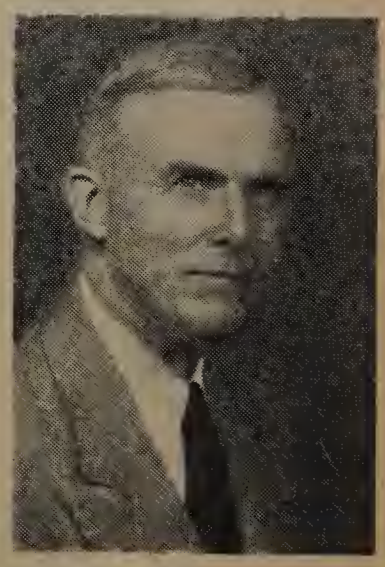
Better get it straight before it's too late: Now when a school bus stops, no one moves until the bus does.

This is the new law. And it differs from the old one which allowed you to drive past a halted school bus, once you had come to a full stop.

You can still move on -- if the driver gives a clear signal. Or if the blinker lights are no longer flashing.

The law:

"When approaching a vehicle which displays a sign bearing the words "School Bus" and is equipped with front and rear blinker lights which are flashing and which has been stopped to allow passengers to alight from or board the same, a person operating a motor vehicle shall, except when approaching from the opposite direction on a divided highway, bring his vehicle to a full stop before reaching said school bus and shall not thereafter proceed until such school bus resumes motion or until such person is signaled by the driver of the school bus to proceed or the blinker lights are no longer flashing."



AND THIS IS THE MESS -- Bottles and empty cartons littered the toll road after this bridge-shaking crash shattered pillar on Oak st. overpass in Weston early Tuesday. Truck driver was uninjured. Mess took most of day to clean up.

Introducing – Another New Slant ... On the Civil War – by an Expert

With the thought that probably no other conflict in modern history has been at one and the same time so thoroughly documented and so outrageously romanticized, we offer here the first of a series of vignettes on the American Civil War.

This is a new approach written on a centennial week-by-week basis and new also in that you will be taken behind the headlines for the raison d'etre of the chronicaled events, and new above all because here is the war as seen from New England's eyes.

We will not burden the work by calling it scholarly, yet we must claim for it a distinction in accuracy and painstaking research so often lacking in similar look-backs at the great war. The material is written with no pretense at pedantry but it is written with a very healthy respect for the facts.

The author is Mr. Southworth Lancaster, born in Worcester, educated at Harvard and who served with the field artillery on the Mexican border in 1916, and with the 26th division in France 1917 - 1919. He was later on special duty with military police. He was also detailed to transportation service in the U. S. Army, 1937 - 1939 and was a member of the faculty at the Naval supply School and Air Force Statistical school, 1942 - 1945.

He is a member of the company of Military Collectors and Historians and has published large numbers of articles on military subjects and has lectured on military subjects. He is a resident of Cambridge.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

The Wolf at the Door

According to the Boston papers, some folks thought they saw a mountain lion in the wilds of Sudbury recently. Which reminds us that Sudbury and all New England were once the hunting ground of a number of large predators.

Within a century, says Sudbury's historian, Alfred S. Hudson, writing in 1887, bears were killed right up there on Green Hill. Earlier still, while the only settlement called Sudbury was on the east side of the river, now Wayland, wolves were so plentiful that the town offered a bounty for killing them, in 1646, and respeatedly thereafter.

Talk about "upsetting the balance of nature": the wolves must have been happy to see the English settle here, for the hogs, cattle, (especially calves) and the sheep brought in by the newcomers offered a much appreciated addition to their accustomed diet, and they throve on it. With their coming, in the verse of a 17th century rhymester.

"Wolves only wont on lesser beasts to fall .
On great ones prey by day and eke by night."

"Wolves did much hurt to calves and swine between Charles River

Police Probe 2 Wayland Breaks

WAYLAND - - Wayland police are working on leads in two recent restaurant breaks here.

Chief Ernest Damon believes the thief or thieves may be the same who entered the Red Coach Grill about three weeks ago, rifling a cigarette machine.

Two breaks were discovered early Saturday by Officer John Phylis at the Red Coach Grill and at Robinhood Ten Acres.

He said entrance to the Red Coach had been made through a first-floor window. At Ten Acres, the intruder had gotten in through a second-floor window.

In both cases: an undetermined amount of money had been taken from cigarette machines.

Weston Schools Open, Enrollment Up 98

WESTON -- Corridors again buzzed with the sounds of youngsters' voices as the Weston schools began their 1961-62 season last Thursday.

Much to the immense satisfaction (and relief) of all concerned, the new high school was ready to receive its enrollment of 546 and the junior high school (old high school) was gleamingly refurbished for its 353 entrants.

Total enrollment figures for this year, still incomplete, show 1756 students compared with 1658 for grades 2 through 12 last year.

Administrational gears began grinding last Tuesday when new faculty members gathered in their respective schools for conferences with principals and senior department members.

Tuesday night marked the beginning of a new tradition. All faculty and administrational personnel, as well as members of the School Committee gathered for dinner in the Junior High School cafeteria to hear welcoming addresses by Anthony Brackett, school superintendent; Dr. Robert H. Marden, chairman of the school committee, and Chester Towne, chairman of the Teachers' Association and principal of the Woodland School.

Chairs and desks were dusted, textbooks counted and registers compiled as the staffs of all Weston schools readied their facilities on Wednesday. Bell and lunch schedules were formulated and checked, locker combinations tried and retried, and paper supplies stored for a busy year.

Twenty shiny buses carried this year's scholars to the front doors of their schools early Thursday morning. The day's activities included assemblies to meet old and new teachers, allocation of books for the year and fallout and fire drills. An abbreviated class schedule was followed.

By Friday, all the "lost souls"

Reservists Job Rights Safe, Says Saltonstall

WASHINGTON--If your a Reservist and being called back into service next month is your job-protected?

The answer is yes, according to Sen. Saltonstall, who says:

"The office of the Senate counsel has studied the matter and assures me that the jobs of these men are protected by the Universal Military Training and Service Act of 1948.

"It appears to give full protection to me called up in the National Guard or Reserves or inducted under Selective Service, to those volunteering and to those whose terms of existing service have been extended."

As for a legal question about men who have been in service for one four-year term and are now on a second four-year term, the U.S. Labor Department has filed legislation designed to protect the job rights of such men also.

The senator indicated that he would cooperate with Sen. Richard Russell of Georgia, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, to secure early passage of the bill.

Labor Day

(Guest Editorial: From WBZ - TV and radio)

We celebrate Labor Day. And appropriately enough there's little public ceremony to mark the occasion. Instead, either at home or off on a trip, most of us simply enjoy the many pleasures of modern American living.

There are still shameful pockets of poverty across the country, but generally we Americans have never had it so good. Much of the credit for this prosperity and the time we have to enjoy it must go to the American Labor movement. Perhaps the best tribute to those who started that movement is to enjoy the holiday to the hilt.

But this is only one day of the year. With the great strides in our economy, average weekly work time has been cut drastically, from 70 hours down to 40 hours or less.

The work week has fallen from six days to five, and some economists see the three-day weekend in the not-too-distant future. Now there are holidays and leisure time for everyone throughout the year.

We'd like to suggest that the American public use at least a portion of this new leisure time for the public good. This effort could well be regarded as our repayment to a society which has treated us so well.

This repayment can be made in many ways.

There's a great shortage of volunteer help in most of our communities today.

People are badly needed to work in hospitals and homes for the aged, for various religious and civic organizations. They are needed to guide youngsters in groups such as the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts and the YMCA.

Nor should we overlook the political world.

One of the problems confronting both local and state governments has been the lack of popular participation in politics. The tendency in the past has been to let George do it, and our Georges unfortunately haven't been doing it very well.

We must all share responsibility in the democratic process.

And this means more than just intelligent voting; it requires continuing interest in the affairs of government, participation in political life.

There's been increasing concern across the country about the lack of national purpose, the decline in our public and private morality. It would be silly to look for a one-shot cure to these problems. But undoubtedly they are based on selfishness. Improvement will come only when people start to think more of the needs of their community and their fellow man.

This is a challenge for us all on Labor Day, 1961.

Letters to the EDITOR

Case of Mistaken Identity

To the Editor:

Most of your readers were not born here but came here to enjoy the benefits and satisfactions of living amid acres of green grass and stately trees where good people with good churches, schools and manners had lived together for more than two centuries in peace and contentment.

Recently you suggested to us editorially that since we are a part of "the larger community" we should welcome the noise of factories, truck-distribution centers and houses packed snugly sie by side as "progress" brings them to our very door.

I respectfully ask you to withdraw the finger you thus have pointed at us who love this pretty and peaceful town, who have put our hearts and our lives into it.

Remember that in choosing to keep this a place of homes and people where in our leisure we can not only escape the bustle, noise and tensions of our factories and offices but can simultaneously guide our children to work and play in clean, friendly and wholesome atmosphere, growing up to love this town as we have done, and do, we are but exercising one of the basic, and perhaps the most precious rights of freedom . . .

Yours sincerely
Harold G. Travis
Saddle Hill rd., Weston

Ed. note -- Our editorial finger was waving in concert with yours. It stressed: "A commercial or industrial zone ought not to shoot up in one town, when across the imaginary town line there are exclusive residences." And it added that Weston was "threatened" with a similar problem in the Norumbega Park plans for change.

If the "one community" concept prevailed, Waltham city fathers would have thought twice, as would Newton's, before entertaining changes harmful to their neighbor, Weston.

100 Years Ago ... in the Civil War - I

No One Knew What to Do

By SOUTHWORTH LANCASTER

Sept. 10 - Sept. 16, 1861

THE NEWS: Massachusetts to date has organized 18 infantry regiments, besides artillery and cavalry units . . . Many are on duty along the Potomac. Boston's "Fighting 9th" reports several men wounded on outpost duty. The 15th Regiment (Col. Devens) is stationed near Ball's Bluff, Va. . . . Sept. 10th a Southern force drove off three Union brigades at Carnifex Ferry, W. Va., but withdrew under threat of counter-attack. Skirmishing at nearby Elk Water and Cheat Mountain followed.

Gen. Robert E. Lee commands Confederate troops in this region, facing Union Maj. Gen. Rosecrans . . . Brig. Gen. U. S. Grant's plan to capture Columbus, Ky., Mississippi River key point, is disapproved by Maj. Gen. J. C. Fremont, Department Commander.

Sept. 12, 14,000 Missouri state troops under Maj. Gen. Sterling Price, begin siege of Lexington, Mo., held by Union Col. J. A. Mulligan with mixed force of 3000 . . .

Sept. 14, Confederate privateer Judah destroyed at Pensacola by boats' crews from U. S. Frigate Colorado . . .

Sept. 15, Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston assumes command of all Confederate forces west of Alleghenies. President Jefferson Davis appoints Atty. Gen. Judah P. Benjamin as Secretary of War.

BEHIND THE NEWS: After Bull Run, fought on both sides by hastily-mobilized militia and volunteers, North and South began serious task of organizing new armies. Military action was largely confined to jockeying for position along the Mississippi and in Virginia-Tennessee.

Engagements scarcely rose above the dignity of a skirmish.

Lt. Gen. Winfield Scott, old and sick but still valiant, was the supreme Union commander. Maj. Gen. George B. McClellan, summoned from apparent successes in West Virginia, headed the troops around Washington which was the chief concentration point.

In the South, Jefferson Davis acted as military chief, directly controlling the several Confederate armies . . .

The real leaders were still in subordinate posts.

While jealousy and back-biting had already emerged, Southern generals on the whole were selected on the basis of military qualifications; in the North, political influence was still a factor . . . The South had no navy and was forced to concentrate on raiders and commerce destroyers. Long-range Union strategy -- Scott's famous "Anaconda Plan" --contemplated initial blockade of Atlantic Coast as far as Florida, later extending through the Gulf and up the Mississippi, but this was still in the formative stage . . . Both governments lacked experience in military planning and execution.

Most Deserving Citizens -- So Right

To the Editor:

You're right! Absolutely correct!

Insofar as our fallout shelter plans are concerned, MDC does mean Most Deserving Citizens (Bits & Pieces Sept. 5 edition).

And who are those "most deserving citizens"?

They're the men who man our eight police divisions -- the men upon whom we'd depend to maintain an emergency communications network from underground - the men who, after the danger of radiation had become minimized, would help the area to become rehabilitated.

And, too, the men who are a key part of our vast water distribution and sewer disposal and treatment facilities -- the same men whom you and I would rely upon to reactivate these services after an enemy attack had subsided.

Yes, these men during and after a time of emergency would constitute our top personnel. In fact, they do now. So do all of the hundreds of dedicated career employees who make up our entire staff.

So, because I'm certain you must've had this in mind when you penned those few lines, I think you're to be congratulated for recognizing their potential during time of disaster. They're all 'Most Deserving Citizens."

Cordially,

John H. Luttrell
Director of Public Information MDC

Ed. note -- Touche.

Attention: Cat Owners

BOSTON - Dr. Gerry B. Schnelle, chief - of - staff of the Angell Memorial Animal Hospital urge all owners of kittens to help combat the disease of panleucopenia by vacinnation and by consulting a veterinarian at the first sign of illness in their pets.

Symptoms to watch for are depression, vomiting and complete loss of appetite. This disease is prevalent in cats up to one year of age and the mortality rate is high.

Likes Crier Position

To the Editor:

The Town Crier deserves congratulations not only for its fine reporting of the local scene but also for its editorial commentary which has attracted such vigorous personal expressions on important subjects.

I hope you will continue to stimulate us on matters political, philosophical, social -- or even artistic -- so that we may know each other better and so that we may perhaps develop a sense of community which is now rather lacking.

The editor deserves special mention for his spunk; he is pertinent, fair and stubborn.

About all one can do with the latest Phillippic (Sept. 7 issue) is to warn against confusing people with symbols, or words with reality.

Perhaps some of us have reached such a high and symbolic level that it is time for some re-education, starting with a first-hand study of human life where money and liberty have no meaning for a lack of food, then working up through the Bible and not neglecting its Christian part, and finally finishing up with Jefferson in the original with some thought as to how we might help people of other nations to "water (their) tree of liberty with the blood of (their) tyrants" instead of our hanging them all together.

ROBERT S. STURGIS
5 Doublet Hill rd.,
Weston.

Ed note -- Thank you. About those Phillippics: often we've been tempted to say in reply that Orwell has been anticipated by 20-odd years and 1984 is upon us with its "newspeak" wherein words are drained of their original meaning and a totally different meaning is poured in to suit the user's purpose. Some plainspoken folks call that, even today, doubletalk.

Something About Birds

By CHARLOTTE SMITH

Robins, Flickers in Abundance; Juncos, White-Throated Sparrows Due

Flocks of robins are becoming more numerous, groups of flickers are conspicuous (a male was seen drumming on a metal mailbox with resounding results) (Smith), and Mrs. N. B. Saunders, Ellis rd., saw about 20 Baltimore orioles together recently. Three pairs nested in the vicinity, and it would appear that these families made up the flock. Pheasants have been heard crowing again, and Mrs. E. F. Foote, North av., saw seven young feeding in her yard recently.

A screech owl was heard calling on the night of Aug. 30 (Smith), giving the familiar tremulous "whinny" which is the regular call from now through the winter. Many bird books do not mention the seasonal difference in this owl's calls. During the mating and nesting season it is a series of mellow whistles all on one pitch.

A gentleman in Accord, N. Y., who has made a study of the calls of the screech owl, says that they have two distinct call periods: "the mating call starts in January and continues throughout the spring months to mid-summer; then the change-over to the "whinny" occurs and this becomes the regular late summer, fall, and early winter call, lasting until January when the calls are switched."

Some singing is being heard again, much of it by young males trying out their voices.

This is called "subsong" by the ornithologists and is unlike the full song of adult males in the breeding season. However, the quality and tone are often similar enough so that an identification can be made.

Mrs. L. S. Hayes heard a young kingbird giving this subsong, and C. E. Smith was able to identify an unfamiliar song by the typical oriole "chatter" which was interspersed.

Very little is known about song learning in our American birds. European bird students are far ahead of us in studies of this sort.

The hot and humid tropical air which was here over Labor Day week-end slowed down migration, but the next cold front from Canada should start birds moving again in large numbers. The first juncos and white throated sparrows often arrive by the middle of September.;

How $10. can get you $1200

One of the many fine insurance companies we deal with has come up with a new occupational accident policy that we think is terrific.

For just $10 a year you can get an extra $100 a month protection against any kind of on-the-job injury. The policy pays off no matter how much basic accident coverage you already carry.

So long as you are under a doctor's care and can't work, the cash will keep rolling in -- right up to $1200. You don't have to be hospitalized or shut in to collect.

And you can use the money any way you like: to work off the mortgage, buy groceries, pay the oil bill, anything.

We offer a wide variety of accident and health policies, because we try to tailor coverages to suit individual needs. But generally speaking, we believe this new policy is a steal for any man who wants some good, solid, extra protection without paying an arm and a leg for it.

Any time you'd like to talk over this $10 investment, you'll always find our door open.

Even Area Husbands Delighted

Courses for Young Wives, Tots Open Again at YW

NATICK -- Well, you'd think this thing was for the men the way they carry on about "Holiday From Apron Strings".

That's right this get-away-from-home program of the Natick YW has been going less than two years by the calendar but it's changed a lot of attitudes in homes in the Wayland-Weston-Sudbury-Framingham area.

As one of the leaders in this program, which offers daytime courses in those things the young marrieds would like to know, says:

"They (the men) have found that a day away from the children, shared with other young wives and mothers, does more for a girl than any tranquilizer -- and it costs less."

What it comes down to is this: The mother, busy at her courses in modern dance or teaching children to swim, drops her pre-school youngsters off at the playroom at 9:30 or 10 a.m. and picks them up from the trained playroom personnel about 2:30. Both mother and children are refreshed.

One of the more popular once-a-week classes is "Understanding Yourself" which, it turns out, has developed into a key to understanding the in-laws.

Others very popular in the Friday sessions are swimming, modern dance, figure control.

Begun in January 1960 because many suburban mothers did not care to travel to Boston whre a similar program had been going for five years, the original 12 has now grown to 70 at last count.

Registration is on now for the fall semester which runs from Oct. 6 to Dec. 1. And this year, because of an expected increase in enrollment, classes will be held in two locations: Trinity Church Fellowship Center at 99 Hartford st., West Natick and the Eliot Church Memorial Hall on Union st., South Natick.

Registration days are Sept. 22 and 29 from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at the YW. Fee: $16 for eight weeks, plus $2 for a YWCA membership.

Nice to know the Pentagon's on the job, Berlin crisis and all. Cool and precise. With some details altered at the principal's request, here's why we can be so optimistic:

Seems one of the Navy brass got a promotion recently that lifted him right into the Pentagon but his long-time aide, a rank too low to accompany him, was packed off to school for a brushup on latest strategy.

Deep in a critical seminar a week or so ago, the ex-aide was summoned from class: Pentagon calling . . . no delay . . . on the double.

Pentagon: This is Capt. G (the new aide). Where in blazes are Mrs. B's hurricane lamps?

Ex-aide: They were packed with all the admiral's belongings. Did you get the rest?

PENT: Of course. But those lamps. She's going to have a party tonight, and she's furious.

EX: All I know is they . . .

PENT: Oh brother, there's going to be hell to pay.

And so back to the Berlin crisis and the seminar which, incidentally was not on hurricane lamps.

Every so often we open our mail from Secretary of State Kevin H. White and this week we discovered that we'd almost overlooked Commodore John Barry Day (yesterday); Constitution Day and Senior Citizens' Day (next Sunday). There -- that'll give us all something to celebrate.

Local Researchers Host to Scientists From Dow Monday

FRAMINGHAM Fifty-three research scientists of The Dow Chemical Co. will meet next week at Dow's Eastern Research Laboratory, 875 Waverly st., Framingham, to discuss the role of basic research in the modern chemical industry.

Chemists representing Dow laboratories in all parts of the country will attend. Thirty-one scientists from the company's main research center in Midland, Mich., plan to be in Framingham.

This two-day colloquium, next Monday and Tuesday, will include discussion of research areas in organic, polymer, and biological chemistry. Dr. R. H. Boundy, Dow's director of research, will speak to the group following a Monday night dinner at Longfellow's Wayside Inn, Sudbury.

Ten chemists from the Dow Eastern Research Laboratory will serve as hosts for the colloquium. These include Drs. Fred W. McLafferty, director of the Eastern Research Laboratory, 29 Longfellow rd., Wellesley, and Frederick C. Leavitt, chairman of the Colloquium Committee, 47 Leigh st., Framingham.

Others from the Framingham laboratory include Drs. Horst G. Langer, 97 East Plain st., Wayland; William D. Gurowitz, 23 Oak Knoll rd., Natick; Robert W. Lenz, 365 Singletary lane, Framingham; Richard Waack, 17 Corrine dr., Framingham.

The Dow Eastern Research Laboratory was chosen as the logical location for such a meeting on basic research. This laboratory is engaged in fundamental studies in chemistry without regard for immediate application of results or commercially attractive products.

Long range approaches are sought to provide knowledge which may be the basis for useful items in the distant future or may solely be a contribution to the knowledge of the scientific community. From meetings such as this one will be harvested the crop of ideas and theories for future developments in many fields of chemistry.

The future housewife or astronaut may benefit in part from the scientific thought stimulated by this gathering.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

and Mistick." They even bothered Governor Winthrop. "The govenour, being at his farm house at Mistick, walked out after supper, and took a piece" (gun) "in his hand, for they came daily about the house, and killed swine and calves & c." That was in what is now Somerville, right where the increasing Northern Artery traffic rushes across the Mystic River from Boston toward New Hampshire and Maine.

Unlike the European tradition, there is no record of a wolf attacking any Wayland or Weston Red Riding Hood, let alone a man. But wolves were death to the meat animals which the colonists turned out to forage in the common pastures and woods: so that substantial bounties were placed on their heads and on those of other predatory animals. For many years, the Massachusetts Bay government offered a reward of one pound for each dead wildcat, and four pounds for a wolf's head.

When the ravages of the wolves reached the point where the colonists could stand them no longer, they organized neighborhood hunts. One such hunt in 1713 brought out 33 men and boys. Forty years later the townspeople of Lynn, Salem, and Reading, combined to clean the wolves out in that vicinity.

With the bounty, certain individual hunters did pretty well. One hunter in Harvard, twenty miles north of us, collected thirty-six pounds in 1732. He got rid of five wolves and sixteen wildcats.

In the next town, Lancaster, the selectmen paid a hunter for 16 wolf's heads in 1688. Down on Cape Cod, at Sandwich, the first town beyond the present canal, the end of bounty paying for wolves did not come until 1838, only a century and a quarter ago, when the last bounty was claimed.

Bears got into bad habits too. When berries and nuts and acorns were scarce, they went after pigs and sheep. Even such a prominent place as Hartford, capitol of the Connecticut Colony, was infested almost up to the Revolution. One day in 1766, when a Hartford hunter shot a big fat bear, they roasted the animal whole, to the enjoyment of everyone. Bear meat and bear fat were considered fine eating, but not even the Indians ate wolves.

In those early years, a neck of land like the town of Nahant, which could be sealed off from predators by a tight fence, reaching from the sea on one side to the sea on the other, was especially prized for cow and sheep pasture.

During the past century, the balance of nature here has been changing once more. Do you realize what great stretches of countryside in New England, even right here in our neighborhood, which were once cultivated fields and pastures, have reverted to forest? As a result, wildlife has been on the increase hereabouts, not decreasing. I leave that subject, however, to my colleague Will Ryder, who writes about it so interestingly.

Lowdown on Civil Defense Sept. 28: Shelters--Food--First Aid--Do's, Don'ts

WAYLAND -- Wayland residents are due for a shakeup in their thinking about Civil Defense.

"Too many persons throw up their hands in despair when they find out how much a blast shelter would cost," says C. D. director Francis Gallagher.

"But -- blast shelters are not what is needed. Fallout shelters are a different matter. They are sensible. They can be built. And they can give hope."

CHARLES E. GOODHUE 3d

To bring the Civil Defense picture into focus, Gallagher has called a public meeting at the Wayland Little Theater Thursday, Sept. 28, at 8 p.m.

Not only will Gallagher provide information on shelters, but there will be a speaker, films and displays that will help people on the following:

--Proper foods to set by for a shelter.

-Latest facts on fallout.

-Radioactivity discovery.

-Standard first aid kit for every family. In other words, what to do and how to do it.

Gallagher said this see-it-yourself plan should help residents get some matters clearer in their minds.

He stressed that the new first aid course starting at the Parmenter Health Center next month

Serving as district directors are: Richard Ober, Mrs. Homer Stanley Jr., William Dewey, Ralph Wolfe, Harold Gear, Bradford Schofield, William Bridge, George Bogren and E. L. Neufer.

Wayland Police Probe Store, House Breaks

WAYLAND -- Breaks in a Wayland drug store and in a private home in the Woodridge area are under investigation by Wayland police, according to Chief Ernest Damon.

An undisclosed amount of cash and goods were taken from the Village Pharmacy in the Village Shopper last Thursday night.

Chief Damon said the thief or thieves gained entrance by breaking a panel in a rear door. The store is owned by Paul Zeidel of 8 Robinhood rd., Natick.

Sometime between 11 a.m. last Saturday, someone broke into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Ela of Shaw dr., according to Chief Damon. No inventory of stolen articles has yet been filed.

Chief Damon said that a series of cigarette machine breaks has been reported in Greater Boston recently, including those at the Red Coach Grille and Robin Hood Ten Acres restaurants here.

Thieves apparently try to time the breaks, according to Chief Damon, about a day or two before collections. They haven't always succeeded, since collection men are trying to vary their collection days in order to frustrate this wave of breaks.

Helen C. Wheeler

WAYLAND -- Mrs. Helen C. (Carter) Wheeler, widow of the late John F. Wheeler of 51 Cochituate rd. died on Sept. 13 following a long illness.

Mrs. Wheeler, a native and lifelong resident of Wayland, was the daughter of the late Edward and Imogene (Moore) Carter. She was a graduate of Radcliffe College, class of 1906, and had taught Latin in Whitinsville High School.

Surviving her are two sons; John G. of Waltham, and Edward C. of Toronto, Ontario; a sister Miss Ethel W. Carter of Wayland, and two grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at the Trinitarian Congregational Church on Friday, Sept. 15 and interment was in North Cemetery.

WESTON -- Roger M. Burke of 24 Granison rd., has been appointed control and audit chairman of the 1962 United Fund drive in the Special Microwave Devices Operation of Raytheon Company's Microwave & Power Tube Division.

Car Snaps Pole In Weston, 4 Men Injured

WESTON -- Four persons were injured, two of them seriously enough for hospitalization, when a Leominster man's car severed a utility pole near 72 Church st., Sunday night.

Weston police said Vincent Boucher of 45 Laurel st., Leominster, was taken to Waltham Hospital with lacerations of the head and legs and transferred Tuesday to Leominster Hospital. He was the driver of the car.

Also taken to Waltham Hospital with lacerations were three occupants of his car:

--Fred Gallant of Leominster, released on Tuesday.

--Robert J. Martin and Joseph P. Alkin, both of Leominster, treated and released.

Police said the car was a total wreck.

Mr. Boucher told police his steering wheel had sudenly "given" and he lost control. The accident occurred about 10:30 p.m.

On Sunday at 4:58 p.m. Norman Cavanaugh of 5 Mechanic st., Newton, operator of a pickup truck, told police his truck, in some unexplained manner, hit a tree on Rte. 30, east of Ware st.

Police said he was taken to Newton-Wellesley Hospital and held overnight with injuries to the face and chest. The front end of the truck was wrecked.

BIGGEST WESTON DRIVE -- Plans for meeting the largest United Fund quota in Weston history are being made by this committee, chairmanned by Richard B. Lombard (center). More than 150 residents will solicit for the campaign beginning Nov. 3. Mr. Lombard's aides (clockwise): Mrs. Horace B. McQuire, John O. Nilan, Marshall Dwinnell, Edward Phillips, Mrs. William W. Gallagher Jr.

Wayland's Immovable Object, Heard House, to Budge--at Last

WAYLAND -- Wayland's immovable object, the Heard House, is about to be moved.

Just a matter of getting this in writing. And that's being done at the Town Hall now.

Richard Lincoln, president of the Wayland Historical Society, pressed the Board of Selectmen Monday for an order to instruct the tree warden to cut the necessary tree branches on Old Sudbury rd. under the supervision of the Davey Co.

Permission already granted, they told him.

Just as soon have that in writing, said Mr. Lincoln keeping in mind the firm objection of Ralph Heard and Ralph Weiland, two neighboring tree owners whose objections have been keeping the Heard House in place for upwards of three years.

Hence, the written instructions. An appraisal of the trees, with a view to a possible court suit, has already been made by the town -- and presumably by Mr. Heard and Mr. Weiland who just aren't talking.

Traffic Headache Exclusive Right Of Schools, Say Wayland Selectmen

WAYLAND -- What has always been the school department's business will remain so.

The Board of Selectmen voted Monday that traffic problems growing out of the extra traffic on a Claypit Hill School road and that cutting through the junior high school property will continue to be the exclusive rights of the school department.

The school board's original complaint: since traffic on the first was primarily town traffic and since cut-through traffic on the second were both providing hazards to the school children the town should take over responsibility for the first road and provide more policing for the junior high road.

This the selectmen refused to do.

Rush hour traffic seeking to avoid the Wayland Center lights has been "flowing over" the junior high road on which the department had recently spent $3000 for repairs.

Benjamin Howard, Wayland Salesman

WAYLAND -- Benjamin S. Howard, 55, of Draper rd., an industrial salesman for Snap-On Tools, Brighton, died Saturday evening after a long illness.

Mrs. Howard is a well-known local realtor.

Born in Dover, he moved to Weston and for the past 16 years has lived in Wayland. He had served in the U.S. Army and had been with Snap-On for more than 20 years prior to his retirement a year ago.

He was a member of the executive board of the Church of the Holy Spirit in Wayland and had been a member of St. Peter's Church, Weston.

Besides his wife, Elizabeth (Bennett), he leaves four daughters: Mrs. William Zimwalt (Elizabeth) of San Francisco, Calif.; Sara Bennett, Caroline McBurney

Waltham Refuses Gas Station Permit On Weston Line

WALTHAM -- In a move vital to Weston interests, the Waltham City Council has turned down the request for a gasoline storage license on Main st. near the Weston line.

The property, sought for a gas station, adjoins North av. in Weston and the effort to get a license was regarded dimly by nearby Weston residents.

This is the third case in little more than a year where incidents on one side of the imaginary line separating outlying Waltham and Newton from Weston had been decided.

At a hearing before the Waltham Council on Sept. 12 several Weston residents appeared in protest.

The property is on a hill and there would have been some problem with traffic, objectors held.

The area is zoned for business The fact that the owners had to apply for a license made it more difficult for them to utilize the land for business. There is no appeal from the license refusal.

Weston Students Dodging Trouble

WESTON -- School bus stops are not playgounds. That in essence is the warning, Police Chief Frank O. Shaw issued this week to parents.

Chief Shaw advised parents, if possible, to keep an eye on their youngsters at school bus stops since there have beeen several close shaves recently.

His advice: maybe a pool arrangement of checkers could be worked out among mothers in some areas for a while.

Biggest sore spots: games that lead someone to suddenly dash into the road, advice to youngsters stay back from the front of bus until it stops and stay out of the road.

Bay Staters Naval Forces Busy in Gulf of Mexico

By SOUTHWORTH LANCASTER

Sept. 17 - Sept. 23, 1861

THE NEWS: Sept. 17 -- Naval force from USS Massachusetts occupied Ship Island in the Gulf of Mexico and began fortifying with heavy guns . . .

Sept. 18 - Confederate brigade under Brig. Gen. S. B. Buckner advanced toward Louisville, burning railroad bridges. From Louisville, Maj. Gen. Robert M. Anderson sent forward mixed force under Brig. Gen. Wm. T. Sherman, who took up defensive positions on Muldraugh's Hill . . .

Sept. 20 - After 8 days' resistance, Col. Mulligan surrendered Lexington, Mo., to Gen. Sterling Price's superior strength. This gave Confederates temporary supremacy in Missouri. Maj. Gen. John C. Fremont, moving from St. Louis, prepared deliberately to attack Price . . .

Sept. 22 - Richmond sources report heavy daily arrivals of voluntary contributions of clothing and provisions for the Army . . . 1st Lt. Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr., was serving with A Co., 20th Mass., guarding Potomac west of Washington.

BEHIND THE NEWS: Ship Island move was part of Navy plan to hold Gulf key points, looking toward early capture of New Orleans . . . Missouri and Kentucky, officially neutral states, saw much guerilla fighting by semi-independent citizen bands.

Both North and South sought the upper hand, for control of these regions gave also control of Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. Union sentiment was growing in Kentucky, giving hope that Union majority in eastern Tennessee could now be supported; the Tennessee situation was to have important effects on overall Union strategy . . .

Gen. Anderson, defender of Ft. Sumter, commanded Department of the Cumberland which included this area . . .

Gen. Fremont, Western Department, took in Illinois and most of the territory west to the Rockies.

A professional soldier without soldierly experience, Fremont soon became an embarrassment to Lincoln, while at the same time snubbing his subordinate commanders, including an obscure brigadier named Grant . . .

Department boundaries changed in bewildering fashion as the war proceeded. The theory of department command was faulty, for each general was supreme in his area and co-ordinated action was rarely possible . . . There was less trouble in the East.

McClellan's Army of the Potomac was not subject to department command and was fast becoming a formidable force. How would McClellan use it? And when?

This was the period when the phrase "All quiet along the Potomac tonight" first appeared in press dispatches . . .

In the South, President Davis, a West Point graduate, kept tight control over his scattered armies. A man of great intellect and ability, he considered himself qualified as a military expert, fit to combine the duties of President, Supreme Field Commander and Chief of Staff.

This combination of duties would yet hamper Southern action in all Theatres.

Sarah Franklin Weds E.L. Johnsen of Wayland

WAYLAND -- The First Baptist Church of Weston was decorated with white gladiolus, snapdragons and pompons for the marriage, Sept. 9 of Miss Sarah Catherine Franklin and Edward Lester Johnsen of Wayland and Ocean Park, Me.

The candlelight ceremony was performed by Rev. Donald B. Morris of Weston.

The bride, daughter of Mrs. H. Jean Franklin and Robert B. Franklin of Phoenix, Ariz., wore a gown of ivory silk taffeta fashioned with a scoop neckline, appliqued with crystals, a full-length sleeve, and full skirt terminating in a circular train.

Her fingertip veil was held in place by a crown of matching crystals. She carried a bouquet of white roses, stephanotis and ivy.

Miss Janet E. Russell of Westford was maid of honor. With her blue bell skirted dress with matching hat and veil she carried an old-fashioned bouquet of rose and white flowers.

Bruce K. Johnson of Hudson, cousin of the bridegroom, was the best man. William H. Floyd Jr. of Wayland ushered with William S. Russell of Westford.

Mr. Johnsen attended Wayland High School, Gov. Dummer Academy and is a student at Springfield College.

Mrs.. Johnsen attended West Phoenix High School, the University of Phoenix and is a member of Flair Models.

After a wedding trip to Maine the couple will live in Springfield.

Tuberculin Test For First Graders

WAYLAND -- Students entering the first grade in Wayland's public schools this year are eligible for a tuberculin skin test to determine whether or not tuberculosis germs have entered their body. The test, sponsored jointly by the Wayland Board of Health, the Parmenter Health Center and the Middlesex TB Christmas Seal Assn., will be conducted at the school during late September or early October.

Wayland School Physician, Dr. Charlotte Stewart will administer the tuberculin tests. During a TB skin test a few drops of clear fluid called tuberculin are inserted between the layers of the skin, usually on the forearm. Approximately three days after the initial test a reading is taken of the area tested to determine positive or negative results.

If the result is positive it indicates tuberculosis germs have entered the body at one time; it does not indicate the person has tuberculosis. However, in cases such as these chest x-rays are taken of the individual. A negative reactive to the skin test indicates that the body is free of tuberculosis germs.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

When Cochituate Made Shoes

Shoes: would you believe that the village of Cochituate, now all residential, once made a lot of them; $1,800,000 worth in the single year 1875, when it contained nine boot and shoe shops, employing almost 500 people?

This long-past phase of the life of the Cochituate community comes to mind in connection with the report that a large corporation is requesting a zoning change in order to establish a research laboratory there.

In former days, before the Civil War, neighboring Natick also made plenty of footwear, a million and a quarter pairs in 1859, with 1500 workers. Population boomed in both places. Natick had 1285 people in 1840. This was more than doubled by 1850, and it grew 50 percent more in the next five years, to reach 4,135 in 1855.

Today all the Cochituate shops have long been gone. One only, the Winchell Shoe Co., remains in Natick. With modern machinery its 100 employees turn out a 100 dozen pairs each day.

Massachusetts has always been a shoe center. When the Civil War started, a third of all the factory-made shoes in the country were manufactured in three counties here. Now the business has spread into New Hampshire and Maine; but this little New England corner of the nation still supplies about one in three of the shoes Americans wear.

It is not surprising that shoes and so many other American industries should have had their start in New England. The amazing thing is that so many of them should still be firmly established here!

Back at the beginning, every New England town had cattle. In nearly every town there was a tanner to turn the local hides into leather. Salem had one in 1637, Ipswich one in 1640. Here also were found hemlock and oak bark, which with salt and other ingredients, and the pure soft water of the streams, were the prime necessities for the tanning process.

The farmers brought in the hides and skins of the cattle and sheep they killed, and took home the sides of leather after the tanner finished. Then a travelling shoemaker, or cordwainer, was engaged to come, perhaps once a year, to make up the stock by hand into boots and shoes for the family.

Before many decades, shoemaking began gradually to become a commercial business. Along with tanning, it concentrated in Essex County, northeast of Boston, still a great center for shoes. For a long time most of the work was farmed out by the shoe men to be done in the household, and in Essex County towns you will, today, occasionally see little shops in the yards of dwellings, where the family once worked at shoemaking.

The first actual factory was set up in Danvers at the close of the Revolution. Shoe business was growing important; in 1788 Lynn was exporting 100,000 pairs of women's shoes. Soon some Yankee invented the open front shoe with tongue and lacing that men still wear; previously men wore boots. Women's shoes had tall "uppers", and buttoned down the front. No low shoes until the last half century.

Alongside the shoe business, Massachusetts set up factories for shoe pegs, shoe boxes, and boot straps.

In Cochituate the shoe business was carried on, at first, chiefly by Captain William Bent and his brother James Madison Bent a natural mechanic. The Bent family had been among the original settlers of Sudbury. In his "Annals of Wayland," historian Hudson tells how the Bents distributed shoe materials to families in the village, in case lots. Two or three persons, working together, could put out ten to twenty pairs per day, all done by hand.

A great change began when an Abington mechanic invented a shoe stitching machine in 1859, and a pegging machine followed soon after. When the factories installed these machines, production soared. By 1875, says Hudson, nine Cochituate shops were producing almost $1,800,000 worth of shoes, at the high prices which followed the Civil War.

In time the Bent business suffered reverses, and the factory was later sold to Charles Dean, who operated it until 1910, when the business was moved to Natick. At the height of the shoe activity, the factories in Cochituate village numbered thirteen in all, the majority small enterprises. Among the prominent operators were the Williams family and the Griffins. Eventually all the concerns moved elsewhere or discontinued, and the buildings clustered in the village were torn down.

Ever since, during the last half century, Cochituate has remained a residential community.

3d Son to Porters

WESTON -- A third son, Edward Scott, was born Sept. 7 in Newton Wellesley Hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Linscott Porter of 16 Gowell lane, Weston.

Grandparents are Dean of Amherst College and Mrs. C. Scott Porter of Amherst and Comd. and Mrs. C. E. Rundquist of Washington D.C.

Something About Birds

By CHARLOTTE E. SMITH

WESTON -- Reports received on Sept. 8 and 9 (just before the heat wave) showed that migrants were moving again -- warblers especially: blackpolls (some singing) black-and-white, Canada, Cape May, magnolia, ovenbird (C. E. Smith), and black-throated green (Hayes). Other migrants included hermit thrush - Sept. 8 (Davidson), and ruby-crowned kinglet - Sept. 9 (Smith). Brown creepers and red-breasted nuthatches continue to be reported (Hayes and Olander), but it will probably take a real "cold snap" to bring juncos and white-throats. Hummingbirds were seen on Sept. 10 (Saunders and Olander).

On Sept. 8, Mrs. D. R. Davidson, Golden Ball rd., saw a pair of cedar waxwings feeding three young (very often these birds do not start to nest until August); and the Brooke family on Derby Lane report a great horned owl in their vicinity.

About 8 p.m. on Sept. 13 (when it was dark enough for stars to be out), a spotted sandpiper was heard calling overhead (Smith).

On cold, clear nights during the rest of September and all of October, fall migration will be at its peak, and the calls or "chips" of birds passing over can often be heard. Experts can identify warblers, thrushes and other birds by their different sounds, and can get some idea of the density of migration by counting these "chips" for an hour or two, especially before midnight. However, this gives but slight indication of the vast numbers which are moving on such nights. Studies of bird migration by the use of radar have been conducted for the past three years by Dr. W. H. Drury Jr., research director of the Mass. Audubon Society, and show that many millions of birds pass over a given point on a single night of heavy migration.

Patching doesn't pay in the case of stove or furnace smoke pipes. The pipes must have strength as well as tightness. Replace any rusty or damaged pipes with new ones.

That Alphabet Avalanche . . .

Well, the tide has turned. Now, owners of six-number license plates are being sought out as members of an exclusive minority.

And, God bless 'em -- they're holding firm: the going rate is two alaphabet plates of Vintage Volpe for one trusty rusty with six numbers. With another batch of knights about to be created shortly, some sober students of suburbia fear inflation may set in.

We have done a bit of research on this matter since we last commented on the tin status symbols and we find:

--Rhode Islanders have HIS & HERS plates.

--None of these Alphabet Avalanche plates become effective until the private swearing-in ceremonies at the governor's office. Formal bermudas and ski boots required on this occasion.

--A recent listing of those who have now acquired reassurance of their place in society shows a large number of construction firms and other contractors and it is devoutly hoped that they will show their generosity sometime before election in 1962.

--Registrar Riley is busy telling friends and nodding acquaintances that he had nothing to do with this.

--Some of the three-number plates being traded in for the flossier models were being stored up at the Registry for the governor's next wave of generosity until one of the drawers collapsed and a girl employee narrowly escaped injury.

--And NOW, Mr. Riley has got something to do about it, albeit they are only three-number plates he's handing out.

--We noted 11 Volpes and Volpe-connected firms and relatives among those achieving prestige.

--Also, Wakefield and Lynn addresses are replacing West Roxbury's in the exclusive lists.

Well, we suppose it's really quite presumptuous of us to suggest once again that prestige plates are all right -- but how about awarding them for good driving records?

It just strikes us that a lot of fancy talk will be heard pretty soon about "starting something" to make a better Massachusetts. But if rewarding "good friends" is rated higher than rewards for good drivers, we haven't gone very far, have we?

Gremlins Get Negative

This is for the Happy Hollow parents who have supreme faith in The Crier. Well, THIS time, alas, your children were right: That WAS Mrs. Cohen on the left and Miss Attwood on the right in last week's meet-the new-teacher photo from Happy Hollow School.

This time, Mrs. Cohen on the right (we think) where she belongs. And anyway, she's the lady with the glasses.

Actually, Miss Attwood and Mrs. Cohen are both nice persons and if you've walked up to Mrs. Cohen and said, "Nice to meet you, Miss Attwood" or vice versa, we're sure everyone's recovered by now.

We hate explanations, too, but here's how the gremlin fooled us:

All Crier photographs are rephotographed at the printers in Lowell, then placed on the page which itself is photographed.

Once in a while, an ill wind (or gremlin) flips the first negative over without anyone being the wiser, with results that turn parents hair gray worring over Johnny's reading ability and/or his eyesight.

We're sorry we were so negative about this. We'll try to reform.

Letters To The Editor

Birchers Forget . . .

To the Editor:

I have been reading with great interest the pro and con material in your paper regarding the John Birch Society.

Mr. Heath's letter in the Sept. 7th paper was of special significance, it seemed to me, because it contained the seeds of what is wrong and also what is right about this group.

I agree with Mr. Heath that the "ideals of the John Birch Society are 100 percent American."

I have friends and relatives who are deeply religious and of high ideals who are members of this society, and I do not for a minute question their motives of ardent patriotism and deep distrust of the infiltration of America by communism.

BUT -- alas for their METHODS of achieving an aroused country!

They demean themselves and the very ideals they strive to attain when they desert righteous anger for vituperative and corroding hatred.

There was a bearded hero who came down from the hills of Cuba in the near past with high ideals, but so filled with hate that he became a vengeful avenger and used the tools of a tyrant to achieve the rewards of a reformer. The Russian revolution toppled tyranny only to replace it with its own tyrannical zeal.

To "awaken lethargy" is good but there are so many ways to do it in a positive rather than a negative manner.

The American people seem bewildered as to how to return to the ideals of the founding fathers. If they looked for the bedrock of those ideals, it would simplify things. The church was the very reason for being in this country. The Pilgrims came here to be able to seek God's will in their lives, and unless we return to doing the same thing we are no longer "one nation under God".

If we all examine our methods and our motives in the light of our Judeo-Christian heritage, then it is appalling how far we have let our country drift away from them.

You see it everywhere -- in dearth of leadership for youth groups, lack of respect for teachers in our local classrooms, the urgent need for Sunday school teachers in the churches, the filth that passes for entertainment on the movie screens.

There is a saying that "if the pupil hasn't learned, the teacher hasn't taught."

This is just as true of countries as of individuals. If our youth lacks the ideals of the past, it is simply through our own neglect in handing them down.

This is a job for every home. Our future strength is in our youth, who will be our leaders of tomorrow. Communism cannot make inroads in the hearts of those who enjoy true freedom under God.

Very truly yours,
Nancy Bell, Wayland.

Hate Leads To Ruin

To the Editor:

In answer to Mr. Heath's letter last week defending so vehemently the Birch Society, I can only agree with the editor's note that "hate is like a speeding car with a blowout."

No human being can survive long with hate in his heart, nor can a nation; it eats away the insides -- e.g., Nazi Germany, so we shall surely lose this world we all cherish, if we do not change our hate to love, and pray for and bless those who would harm us.

Mr. Heath quotes the Old Testament (Ecclesiastes 3, vs. 1 - 8) "there is a time to hate", but in the New Testament, Jesus Christ commands us to "love our enemies".

"Pray without ceasing," He also said, and with those willing to accept this responsibility and discipline, lies the hope of the world. This I believe.

A Home?

To the Editor:

The attached is a copy of a humorous article I found several months ago in my Nova Scotia paper, "The Hants Journal".

It seems to fit the trend of the times very well:

WHY A HOME?

Home is getting more and more to be a place where young people run in hastily to take meals or change clothes . . . only a filling station.

(This) tells about a modern girl who gave the following reply to a real estate agent who wanted to sell her a home:

"A home? Why do I need a home? I was born in a hospital, educated in a college, courted in an automobile, and married in a church; I live out of the delicatessen and paper bags. I spend my mornings on the golf corse, my afternoons at the bridge table, and my evenings at the movies; and when I die I am going to be buried at the undertakers'. All I need is a garage".

Sorry -- No Gunfire

Residents of Weston can relax. There will be no gunfire or mayhem in the vicinity of the MDC Golf Club, Comr. Murphy to the contrary notwithstanding.

Mr. Murphy, always fond of the press and what it writes, sounded off with gusto last week: MDC patrolmen will arrest any DPW contractor who so much as thinks of cutting Rte. 128 through the MDC golf course -- right between the clubhouse and the greens.

We got to checking it out and we find that Mr. Murphy knew all along -- the DPW has no intention of sending in the road gang, complete with equipment concealed in golf bags, to mess up the greens.

The DPW-MDC understanding, arrived at in March, stipulated that DPW would not begin the relocation of Rte. 128 until Dec. 1 -- after golfing season, so season golfers would get their money's worth on the links. And probably this means that work will not be started until sometime in the spring. No gunfire either -- so relax.

Constitution Week

During Constitution Week (current), the Daughters of the American Revolution recommend the following grace be said before meals -- the words being taken from the original Thanksgiving Proclamation issued by George Washington on Oct. 3, 1789:

"That we may then all united in rendering unto Him our sincere and humble thanks . . . for the signal and manifold mercies and the favorable interpositions of His providence . . . for the peaceable and rational manner in which we have been enabled to establish constitutions of government for our safety and happiness, and particularly the national One now lately instituted -- for the civil religious liberty with which we are blessed and the means we have of acquiring and diffusing useful knowledge; and in general for the great and various favors which He hath been pleased to confer upon us."

The Crier hopes that all of its readers will give due thought to our blessings as Americans at this time.

Candia Schoolhouse Restored at Sturbridge

STURBRIDGE A one room schoolhouse, built in Candia, N.H. in the early 1800s has been restored to its original condition at Old Sturbridge Village and will open formally to the public on this Saturday.

The simple frame building, symbolizing New England's contribution to public education in America, was a gift to Old Sturbridge from the Candia Improvement Club.

Westonite Protests Gas Station Plan

To the Editor :

As a resident in the immediate area of the proposed American Oil Co. gas station and as a taxpayer in both Waltham and Weston, I would like to express my opposition to the petition for this location.

Naturally, we are opposed to a nuisance-producing commercial venture next to residences; but this one is also a hazard-producing one.

Ironically, as taxpayers we must support the relocation of North av. to remove a dangerous curve and intersection only to face the prospect of loss of value to our land due to an installation which will undoubtedly make the road unsafe and hazardous at another place.

Access to and visibility in pulling into a station at this point are both poor as approached from the Waltham side.

We seem to be robbing Peter (Weston) to pay Paul (Waltham) and in this case I'm not sure there is much advantage to Waltham.

Very sincerely yours,
Mrs. Norman B. Saunders
Weston.

Which Way?

There is something confoundedly murky about all this Civil Defense business: build a shelter at the government's suggestion and then be "penalized" with full taxes on it? Hold strictly to zoning laws or allow a spread of non conforming uses?

Maybe next January the government again will slacken its hurry-up, build up a shelter talk and inform us: no use. In this case, what happens to the towns which have let down their zoning barriers?

We submit not everyone is sure about anything yet and getting at the truth is like trying to capture a bounding football. People aren't indifferent. They're just uncertain which way the ball will bounce next.

To register for either of these Courses send your name, address and check to the Wild Flower Society, Horticultural Hall, Boston, KE 6-7711.

The Eternal Debate

Whatever Salinger Is, You Can't Laugh Him Off

(In the belief that many of its readers will -- in fact, already have -- found this Salinger fellow about as easy to shake off as a piece of summer camp flypaper, The Crier is publishing a review of his latest book, "Franny and Zooey". And good luck to you.)

By ANNE HOCKING

The literary world is waging a private little not-so-cold war of its own this week.

Little, Brown just detonated an old mine which appears to have harbored some rather fissionable material for some time, by bringing out in book form J. D. Sallnger's stories "Franny and Zooey" These stories appeared in the New Yorker some four and six years ago.

The argument, it appears, though no one has actually said as much, is whether or not these stories and other efforts of the author are candidates for the classics. Are they, in short, literature - even second rate?

The general consensus seems to be no, but before they can be so categorically denied, critics have first to explain away the fantastic perennial book sales of "Catcher In the Rye" and the ravenous younger generation following Mr. Salinger has accrued over the last decade.

Salinger's thesis is that society is sick and that there are a number of adolescents in the world who when called upon to make their compromise with it show signs of being somewhat stand-offish. In the words of another contemporary "to be adjusted to a sick society is to be sick".

The Salinger lambs are therefore looking for a way to join the fold, as they realize they must in order to survive, without contracting the contagion.

His protagonists in "Franny and Zooey" are the seven progeny of a once very successful vaudeville couple of Jewish and Irish descent named Glass. The children themselves are has-beens in their own right by having once performed for many years on the radio as a precocious quiz kid gang. Projection is the family metier.

But at the time we are introduced to them the projection seems to be on a rather sour note. The world they have charmed does not in turn charm them. And each in his own way is looking for an escape while at the same time devoutly cautioning his siblings not to follow suit.

The most articulate and persuasive of the seven punctuated his argument in favor of the world with a bullet through his head some years before.

Franny, the youngest (college age) and the heroine of both stories is in the throes of a spiritual crisis. But in lieu of suicide she has settled on a life patterned after the mendicant monk in "The Way of a Pilgrim" who achieved salvation by constantly reiterating "Lord Jesus Christ have mercy upon us".

Her one brother on the scene at the time is trying to jolly her out of her decision and convince himself at the same time that she might not have chosen the better part. That in essence is the plot.

For action Franny faints a couple of times and her brother, Zooey, takes a bath.

So what, then, is all the furor about?

Well . . . about once every four or five hundred years on an average an author manages to project the very real conception of the characters in his own mind through the written page to his readers.

Almost all novels, good and bad, are very much like listening to a friend describe in detail the antics of another friend of his whom you have not met and never will.

But in the rare instances referred to above an actual introduction is made, you meet the character, as it were, in the flesh of the spirit and he speaks for himself. The passionate interest he arouses is always way out of proportion to his argument, it is his existence itself that causes the alarm.

It's been 500 years now that the world has been thrashing it out with Hamlet and another 70 that we've been popping in and out of hansom cabs at Baker St. with Holmes and now here we are in the mid twentieth century saddled with Salinger's whole family of Glass.

And try as we might, we cannot shake loose. Precocious, contemptuous, aloof, renegade Christians, renegade Jews, with tongues of "infinite jest" and minds of shattering perception, we at once fear them and love them and alternately exult in and disparage their immortality.

It might not be literature, but whatever it is, we've had it.

The Crop Curtain

At least one difference between the communist and capitalistic systems is crystal-clear. It's the difference between crop shortages and crop surpluses.

Wayland Possesses Disaster Generator But How to Use It?

WAYLAND -- In the event of a hurricane or other unscheduled disaster, Wayland is fortunate enough to have a 10,000 kilowatt generator weighing 1700 pounds, capable of emergency power generation for a large building.

The question of where to put such an object to use, and who would operate it, came up at the Monday night meeting of the Board of Selectmen. The generator was purchased some time ago by the School Department through surplus stocks but the department found it had neither the facilities nor the skill to operate such a unit.

The Fire Department took over the job for the time being although none of the schools with the present wiring is capable of handling the generator now.

Fire Chief Francis J. Hartin put this and several other items before the Board at the meeting, pointing out that at present the town building is the only one with emergency power now although the Fire Department has a 4000 Kilowatt generator now in use from day to day. The question is being studied.

Chief Hartin also requested placing an ordinance before the Town Meeting to more adequately provide protection for the children of Wayland between the ages of three and six who attend the more than half-dozen nursery schools in town. He feels more explicit fire regulations are needed.

By an unanimous vote the Board of Selectmen agreed to increase the rates for liquid gas inspection to $2 and the rate for blasting permit also to $2 which will be more in line with the services rendered. Chief Hartin was requested to continue the gas inspection work until January 1 at which time a Gas Inspector will be appointed to take care of these duties.

A more formal system of Mutual Aid is recommended by Chief Hartin for the three major towns who now participate in such a plan, Wayland, Sudbury and Weston.

These neighboring towns at present man our stations when a fire of any magnitude breaks out. Chief Hartin wants this put on an automatic basis and the Board of Selectmen will consider such a plan based on the abbreviated form of the Fire Prevention Code put out by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

If clear cut lines of jurisdiction or action were in operation, the majority of the 22 items on the agenda Monday night would have been resolved within minutes.

Most of the business consisted of "whose job it is to move next" concerning such items as demolishing a town-owned house condemned months ago, the erection of road signs recommended at previous meetings, maintenance of "border" school roads and signs, and letters of authority to permit moving of the Heard House and the cutting of certain limbs of controversial trees.

At various times during the meeting the School Committee, the Highway Department, the Fire Department, the Planning Board, the Police Department and the Selectmen were active players in the old game of Dodge Ball, although only the Selectmen and a handful of others were in attendance.

A request of Dom's Cleansers in Cochituate to tie into the Natick sewage system was discussed. The Selectmen will meet with the Board of Health to determine jurisdiction on this matter. The cleansers firm has already conferred with the health board.

Other minor items passed on:

Approval of a dog show in November at Ten Acres, an invitation to attend a meeting at Boston College on Urban Renewal, demolition of certain properties recommended at previous meetings, and a scheduling of a meeting on Oct. 2 with a representative of the Urban Renewal Authority for discussion of its program.

Some items were bound over to the next meeting: a request made by Atty. Charles Brennan for a client for "recompense or damages" for taking a strip of land on Loker st. Also, an extension of White rd. to make it accessible for fire apparatus -- once approved by the Planning Board but never acted on, referred to the Highway Department and now back in the laps of the Board of Selectmen for action.

Boston Mutual Life Insurance Co was again awarded the contract covering the 211 insured town employees for Blue Cross - Blue Shield at the rate of 70 cents per $1000 per year. Each employee has $2000 insurance.

Signed purchase agreement for Revel Property for addition to cemetery land.

20 Weston Buses Make 74 Trips Daily to Keep Schools Busy

WESTON -- Three short years ago thirteen busses handled all youngsters to and from the Weston schools. Today 20 busses are required to do the same job. These figures are one more barometer to indicate the growth of the Weston community.

In spite of winding driveways, tardy youngsters, and roads which were never intended for heavy vehicular traffic, the school busses make 78 trips a day and their record of dependability is unequaled.

Once the kinks have been ironed out of the schedule, Weston's golden fleet will be rolling like clockwork. The 390 trips they make each week, servicing the elementary, Junior and Senior High Schools, will be guaranteed by our experienced drivers.

This year three contractors are supplying Weston's busses. Holzworth Bus Lines has 12, Wellesley Motor Coach 4 and Wellesley Fells Taxi 4. Holzworth's drivers include Paul Morrison, foreman, John Given, Alfred Freeman, William Johnson and Virgal Woodruff.

Others are Vic Lansgaard, Lucien Justras, Jerry Cronin, Arthur McCabe, James Dunn, Tony Deluca amd Frank Wedekind.

Driving for the Wellesley Motor Coach Company are John McGrath, John Evans, Peter Breault and Allan Morgan.

Steering the big vans for the Wellesley Fells Taxi Co. are: Larry Dolph, Frank Anderson, Spike DeDoming and Tommy Wilde.

Each bus must stop at four different schools. In other communities, youngsters are dropped off at a single location. Weston's school set-up makes it even more difficult for the drivers.

In addition to the 74 trips made daily taking students to school and toting them home again, the drivers cooperate in a late bus schedule which assures students engaged in athletics and make-up work of a ride home in time for dinner.

According to G. Stanley Patey, Administrative Assistant to the Superintendent of Schools and supervisor of bus scheduling, this year's drivers are having an unusually difficult time because of new routes.

The new high school's location resulted in rerouting several busses for high school and junior high school students.

Mr. Patey complimented the drivers on their efficiency and courtesy and emphasized the fact that without them and their reliable coaches, classes could not function. The problem of getting 2156 children to school is in the hands of the drivers. And because of them 2156 youngsters have the opportunity to learn each day.

Denis Healey, spokesman for British Labor party:

"We must maintain unity and strength to convince Mr. Krushchev that continuing the cold war in this way will not pay, that we will not be bullied or brow-beaten into abandoning our friends."

Atalanta Waist Line Keeps Everybody Young

By HARRY PATTERSON

WESTON -- In these days when the railroads of the Eastern United States seem to be trying to throttle themselves to death, it is interesting to note that an enterprising Weston man has taken the opposite track, and as built himself a brand new line.

Actually, it's not a full-sized railroad, and it doesn't really go anywhere, except back to where it starts. It runs down a slight slope, over a genuine grade crossing, around a pond, through the woods and so home -- 800 feet in all.

Its name is the Atalanta Waist Line Rail Road, and it is owned by Arthur Nichols of Sunset rd. Its largest locomotive, a coal-burner called "Ella Cinders", weighs 450 pounds. The track gauge is seven and a quarter inches.

There's another coal-burner, "Atalanta", which weights 300 pounds.

These two engines burn charcoal briquets, with a little anthracite mixed in to provide smoke and smell.

Both were built in 1932 -- Atalanta in England, and Ella Cinders by Mr. Nichols' father, W. H. Nichols, in Waltham. Then there's a small diesel, "Hercules 11", which tips the scales at a mere 180 pounds. A one-man, or one-child, hand car rounds out the motive power.

The two "steamers" are really sturdy machines. They'll easily go 15 miles per hour -- the safe limit on the road. Passengers are carried in open trailers.

Atalanta's load limit is about six adults, but Ella Cinders will haul 12, even on the grades, of which the steepest is 3 percent.

The actual maximum power of these little giants can't really be tested. Practically, it's limited by their traction. Put too many people aboard the trailers, and the drivers start to spin.

The road bed is ballasted, in the traditional manner, with broken stone, and the section hands -- Mr. Nichols and friends -- regrade it every now and then and keep it smooth. Ties are wooden tent pegs -- army surplus.

One reason why he built the road, M. Nichols says, is because he already had the shed which serves as the terminus. He used to keep a boat under it during winters, and when he took the boat away, there was the shed, doing nothing.

So he made it into a station, and proceeded to construct the Atalanta Waist Line.

The railroad doesn't run every day. There is no schedule, and no timetable. And it takes quite a while to get up steam in the coal-burners.

But every few months Mr. Nichols calls his miniature railroad fans together and stages a meet -- always featured by swarms of children.

The first "running" was in January of this year, and there have been two since. The clans gather, eat hamburgers and drink coke -- the steamers puff around the track -- and children and adults alike thrill to the sound of the exhaust, the clatter of wheels over rail joints and crossings, and the shrill toot of the whistle.

"Why did I build the road?" says Mr. Nichols. "Well, of course, partly to use the shed. But mainly I built it for the enjoyment of my grandchildren -- and myself."

Civil Defense –

should be a must for one person in every family.

"Knowing just a little about first aid is a must for everyone," Gallagher pointed out.

"And there are enough new things to know that I think it would be worthwhile for those who know the rudiments to show up and brush up."

Philip D. Bassett, director of programs for the Federal Civil Defense Agency in Region One, will be principal speaker and remain for questions.

Two films on civil defense will be shown.

Gallagher said he hopes to have a Federally-approved list of contractors for those interested in shelters now.

He pointed out that too many persons have become cynical over the whole matter because of hurry-up, fly-by-night contractors rushing in for their business.

Pamphlets on the musts for fall-out shelters will be distributed at the high school's Little Theater.

Bits & Pieces

This is about the time of the year smart parents get their children's fallout shots.

Now it seems that computers can help locate a storm half a world away. That's fine but we'd settle for some home size computers that would come up with "those darned tickets to the Shubert I left right here yesterday."

Something to look forward to: another Atlantic article on corruption in Massachusetts . . . and what some good intentioned people with little get-up-and-go can do about same.

Nothing much has been said about this, see, but it seems that the Air Force boys at Otis Air Base on the Cape did themselves up proud -- and that's the word for it -- getting a suite all set for President Kennedy to work in on those Cape weekends.

Even went so far as to designate how the helicopter could land right there and they got to telling newsmen that if they wanted to keep in the (Presidential) swim on those occasions, they'd better bed down at such-and-such motels closeby and stay hard unto the specially-prepared Otis briefing room. Yessss-sir.

Only trouble is the Washington newsmen, having seen airmen come and go, just bedded down near the Kennedy's Hyannis Port encampment and -- sure enough -- the President preferred to do his work and his briefing at home rather than become a 'copter commuter.

Result is, some high-powered dust is gathering on the special suite and now to make matters worse -- for the Air Force planners -- it seems Mr. Kennedy is going to vacation at Newport, doing his paper work at suite the Navy set up for President Eisenhower. It's been a rough summer all around.

Along with the Russians' we now find ourselves in the hurricane-testing season. And don't say there isn't fallout with those tests.

Not so many years ago, the Little Red Schoolhouse out in the suburbs was not to be borne. Now, we see one critical series patting the local schools on the back. And just to point it up, we recite what one Boston Latin School parent told us recently:

"Well, we met this French teacher of Jim's and he said, 'Well, of course I don't correct your son's papers. I have to take another job to make ends meet.'"

Christian Science Services

WESTON -- A substantial foundation for assured thought and action will be pointed out Sunday at Christian Science services at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Weston.

Keynoting the Lesson-Sermon on "Reality" is the Golden Text from the Bible (Phil. 4):

"Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are of good report; if there by any virtue, and if there by any praise, think on these things."

A correlative citation from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy states (p. 275): "All substance, intelligence, wisdom, being, immortality, cause, and effect belong to God. These are His attributes, the eternal manifestations of the infinite divine Principle, Love. No wisdom is wise but His wisdom; no truth is true, no love is lovely, no life is Life but the divine; no good is, but the good God bestows."

Brief announcements of local interest are welcome. Right to edit all published material is reserved by the paper.

New Central Station Tops Plan For Weston Fire Dept. Buildup

WESTON -- Something must be done to match Weston's firefighting prowess to its growth -- in the near future.

Recommended by a special town study committee:

--A new centrally located fire station to serve the entire town.

--As a less desirable alternative: two stations, north and south of the Post rd.

--Absolutely no construction for the present . . . until some sort of mutual arrangement with Wellesley can be worked out -- or abandoned.

--Purchase of one or two sites soon and eventual sale of the present station, when the location is rezoned for business, to help defray costs.

The five-man committee headed by former Selectman W. R. Dewey Jr. praises highly the skill of the local department and cites its no-fatality record as one reason the town can continue to hold the line on new construction for the present.

Copies of this report will not be distributed to residents but can be read at the Town Hall and public library.

For more than a year now, Weston officials have been trying to get Wellesley officials to agree on a jointly-owned and - operated station on the town line so as to service both communities in those regions farthest from a fire station.

This makes for a particularly difficult situation for Weston, since many of the fastest-growing sections are on the "outer fringes".

A Dec. 15 deadline has been set by Wellesley officials for a report by Wellesley Chief McFee.

Previously fire officials there had recommended a station near the Weston line but it has been turned down repeatedly since its inception five year ago.

Only after Wellesley officials have given a definite answer -- sometime after Dec. 15; most likely in 1962 -- will Weston have a clear idea of which road to take, according to the report.

A jointly-owned and -operated station is recommended by the National Fire Prevention Bureau, according to the report.

The reasoning:

Only by increasing the size of firefighting units and being enabled to cross local lines can greater efficiency and economy be obtained. The report cites Los

Weston PTA To Hear Brandeis Dean Tonight

WESTON -- The opening meeting of the Weston Parent-Teacher Assoc. will feature Charles I. Schottland, Brandeis University's dean of faculty, speaking on "The Changing American Family and the Schools." Date: today (Thursday) Place: Country School auditorium. Time: 8 p.m. Everyone invited.

Dean Schottland was appointed Commissioner of Social Security by President Eisenhower in 1954 and served until January 1959 when he left for Brandeis to become dean of the newly-established Florence Heller Graduate School for Advanced Studies in Social Welfare. In addition to these duties, he was recently made dean of faculty, and is chairman of the U.S. Committee of the International Conference on Social Work.

During the war, Mr. Schottland was Chief of an Army section dealing with displaced persons in Europe, and was decorated by five nations for his work in repatriating five and a half million United Nations nationals.

Dow Assures Wayland: Nothing But Research Gowns

By BETTY GEIGER

WAYLAND -- Representatives of the Dow Chemical Co. met Monday night with the Wayland Planning Board and other members of the interested town commissions to present their plans and reasons for requesting a zone change on property they have an option to buy here.

The 30-acre parcel of land in question is located on the corner of Rice rd. and Commonwealth rd East, bordering on the East Natick town line in the southeast corner of Wayland.

The request: a zone change from residential to limited commercial. This would involve a public hearing prior to presenting a formal article to a town meeting.

Dr. F. W. McLafferty, a member of the staff at the Framingham plant addressed the gathered officials and answered questions from the floor, as well as those from the Planning Board.

Atty. Norman Byrnes of Dow also spoke briefly and assisted Dr. McLafferty in answering questions.

It was emphasized several times that the proposed plant for Wayland would involve only basic research which is a fundamental type or long range "idea developing" as opposed to other, more advanced type involving use of large equipment and chemicals.

This other process would continue at one of its other plants specifically designed for this purpose, Dr. McLafferty stated.

Dr. McLafferty traced the history of Dow from its early venture by Herbert Henry Dow to extract chemicals from brine, to become the 4th largest chemical company producing over 700 products. The basic research of the type to be done in Wayland is responsible for about 10 percent of the sales last year and since there was none of

Weston Fire Dept. Future: Study Committee's Conclusions

1. Varying local conditions in comparable communities preclude any accurate standard for measuring the quality of service and the efficiency of fire departments but there is little doubt that the Weston Fire Department stands near the top in trained personnel, equipment and efficiency.

2. Standards required by the Underwriters to secure a worthwhile lower fire insurance rate for residents of the town makes further considerations impractical in the foreseeable future on account of the high cost.

3. Until such time as some sort of mutual service with the Town of Wellesley has been resolved, the committee recommends no new construction but the continued strengthening of the fire department at the central station by addition of one permanent man and/or additional call men.

4. If no mutual arrangements can be consummated with the Town of Wellesley, the committee, in view of Weston's excellent department and current heavy indebtedness, believes no immediate construction should be undertaken. Since the present station is badly located and incapable of expansion, eventually either one new central station near the geographic center of the town, or two new stations, one south of the Post Rd. and the other north, is recommended.

The purchase of sites should be made at an early date. It is anticipated the sale of the present central fire station, when rezoned for business, will substantially reduce the new cost of the proposed construction.

5. The proposal to separate exchange names in Waltham and Wellesley telephone exchange for Weston residents, as suggested by Mr. E. F. Beers Jr., division manager of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., in his letter of May 16,1960, appears worthwhile.

This will reduce the confusion in telephone calls for assistance (about 90 percent of the calls the fire department receives) but will not be nearly as effective as a separate telephone exchange for the entire town.

Weston Treads Warily on Petition For First Shelter on Glen Road

WESTON -- Zoning laws here met the cold war head-on Monday.

This came in the form of Winsor L. Chase's request for a zoning variance to build a fallout shelter smack dab up against his neighbor's dining room window.

The request was taken under advisement by the zoning Board of Appeals after hearing from several neighbors of the Chase's who live at 241 Glen rd.

As Everett Grant, clerk of the board put it:

"You must realize you're running interference for a number of persons in town who'll want special approval for shelters.

"We just want to make sure that you've explored all the alternatives before you get permission to build next to the lot line."

The complications in this case: a ledge (probably of granite or granite and shale) runs through most of his -- and adjoining properties -- making it difficult to build at any place on his property.

Involved in the general shelter question: Just how far must a town unbend in the interests of national security.

As Selectman Edward Langenback, present at the hearing put it:

"We (the selectmen) felt that the nature of the problem is such that each individual must act to help themselves in the matter of shelters.

"They are necessary but there doesn't appear to be any provision for public shelters as yet. So it's an individual matter. Yet the law must be observed."

He said this meant that a building permit must be sought and a variance obtained, if needed under the zoning laws.

"We're confident that the authorities will give prompt and sympathetic and careful consideration to all valid fallout shelters -- that is, shelters designed for that purpose alone."

Drawing the line between national security and local desire for an adequate zoning statue is the big issue at present, as the board moves to set precedents in fallout cases.

The board promised to view the site soon.

Still untouched by Monday's hearing attended by about 25 persons: tax standards for shelters.

Best guess over a number of communities: some abatement should be a must, perhaps guided by how much the shelter is useful for and is used for other purposes.

Miss Florence Freeman, Weston Civil Defense director present at the meeting, pointed out that the best shelter is not within the house or an addition to it. Rather: one that can be reached quickly . . . outside.

Chase's problem: His home is now 22 feet from the lot line, three feet under the 25-foot minimum and the shelter would be only six feet from the line.

How to Help Yourself . . .

This is for alert publicity chairmen and others interested in "getting this notice in next week" -- every week.

Get your stories -- especially "advances" -- to us on the Thursday prior to publication. By Friday noon at the latest. That assures their publication -- on time.

REASON: We have to maintain a schedule here. Last-minute copy can get bypassed in the rush. Frequently you know of the event weeks in advance. Right? Then a week's notice will help us help you. That's a promise.

(Of course, if you have an event going on Sunday, we'd nod friendly-like if you get it here on Monday. And that's a promise.)

Sorry -- we have to have a schedule. If we don't, our boss whips us.

Our Warrior Dead --

Dag Hammarskjold is dead. And not since Franklin Roosevelt's death in another war has a man's death struck a chord in the hearts of so many people not ordinarily weighed down by cares outside their immediate circle.

Many things will be said about Dag Hammarskjold, from radio panelists to coffee klatschers. But one thing we'd like to stress which helps explain why so many of us stopped in our tracks and said, "Oh, no!" when we heard of his death.

It is this:

Anyone who has watched Dag Hammarskjold at work (especially in the Congo) could see that he had the nerve and the skill to transform vague directives into actions useful to the cause of freedom. Often this allowed the United States to remain in the background when to do so was vital.

This was his role when he died. And we believe it was recognition (even unconscious) of Dag Hammarskjold's battle for us that impressed itself upon Americans. He is our warrior dead.

A 'Rhyme to Remember' From Wayland Firemen

Although we know it's dangerous
We often overlook
A heater that may need repair,
A rubbish - cluttered nook,
Perhaps a frayed electric cord
Or fuse that's oversize.
Our minds are filled with other thoughts
And yet, if we were wise,
We'd think of these "forget me - nots"
Before they cause us sorrow.
A minute spent for safety now
Means a happier tomorrow.

A Stitch in Time. . .

We live in emergencies today. Hurricanes one week, crippling snowstorms in the winter and the threat of war all the time.

We feel the school department in Wayland deserves credit for foresight in purchasing a huge generator at a bargain price from surplus. This generator, with proper wiring, will be available for use in some emergency when power fails or when auxiliary power is needed.

Some persons feel you should wait until the worst happens before making preparations. But we happen to feel that emergencies, like death and taxes, are certain and that a little preparation saves money and misery . . . especially when you can do it at a bargain price.

Letters ...

Gwemley's Gesture . . .

To the Editor:

In view of all that has been in your columns about the John Birch Society, we of the Webster Gwemley Society can no longer remain still, and must needs add a little more confusion to an already controversial matter.

The Webster Gwemley Society as many readers will recall (if they happened to be in Los Angeles at the time) was formed when our founder, T. Webster Gwemley chickened out on the Los Angeles freeway.

Driving at 30 miles per hour on the inside lane he finally climbed the safety island, got out of his car, stood for a moment in silence, raised his hand to his forehead and then said:

"If there is one thing we must stand for, it is sanity."

Whereupon, he got back in his car, pulled out into the inside lane again at 30 miles per hour and was erased by a fruit truck traveling at 75.

However, his memory travels on, warm in the hearts of those who formed the society in his name.

The badge of the society, which can be made at small cost for glue and materials, is a piece of aluminum with a piece of birchwood on one side and redwood on the other.

Semi-autonomous chapters are located all over the country and have absolutely no contact with each other, other than a rather vague agreement never to drive 30 miles per hour on the inside lane of the Los Angeles freeway.

The Gwemley society in this area has been keeping a close interest in matters concerning the John Birch Society, the 1776s, the League to Enforce Freedom and other worthy and patriotic groups.

But it has taken as its most heartfelt concern the issue of the Cat Shelter in Wayland.

Of course, its immediate concern is whether the supply of mice in the area is going to be sufficient to meet the needs of the shelter and recommends to the shelter keepers that it could do much in the community by renting out cats, singly or in pairs, at a nominal rate to houseowners for short periods for elimination of mice.

More important is whether the shelter is going to have adequate fallout protection for the cats in residence -- a point which has been overlooked by the owners and the town.

For those interested in more detailed information regarding the Gwemley society (namely, financial costs, dues, etc.), the yearly fee is $750 per annum and is used to defray expense involved in a yearly pilgrimage to view the grave of T. Webster Gwemley near Montego Bay, Jamaica.

Yours very truly,
Thomas M. Osborne,

Mysterious McClellan: The Man Who Dallied

September 24 - 30, 1861.

THE NEWS: Minor actions occurred in West Virginia and Kentucky, while a Union "demonstration" by 5000 infantry at Lewinsville, west of Washington, caused few casualties and was observed by one of McClellan's staff officers.

Sept. 26 - Massachusetts troops had the day off to observe Thanksgiving Day, proclaimed by Gov. John A. Andrew. "A welcome relief," said a soldier . . . Sept. 27, a joint Army-Navy reconnaissance down the Potomac in rowboats, reported Confederate batteries along the right bank formidable and well-located . . . Sept. 29, Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, feeling that his Confederate outposts overlooking Washington were too much exposed, pulled back to Fairfax Court House. Union troops, cautiously following, found the supposedly powerful position on Munson's Hill was a dummy emplacement equipped with wooden guns. The 60th Penna. mistook the 71st Penna. for Confederates and opened fire, inflicting casualties..

Sept. 30 - President Davis arrived at Manassas for strategic conference with Gens. Johnston and Beauregard and Maj. Gen. Gustavus W. Smith.

PORTRAIT OF A COMMANDER: Able engineer, deep military student and first-class organizer, Maj. Gen. George B. McClellan is still an enigma after a century.

His minor successes in western Virginia (mostly the work of subordinates) attracted attention and when Bull Run showed the Government that a full-scale war impended, he was called to Washington to organize the Eastern army and hailed as the Hope of the Union.

Unstinted praise played on his ambitious and imaginative mind. He quarrelled with Gen. Scott. He snubbed Lincoln.

In spite of all, he brilliantly created a magnificent army and developed sound courses of action, but he never learned how to use that army, while his plans for action never quite worked out.

He created the first real American intelligence service and hired the Pinkerton Agency to operate it.

The Pinkerton's did some clever detective work, often at great personal risk, but they were not qualified to handle military matters and turned in wildly improbably reports which McClellan accepted at face value. He should have known better.

Consequently, he grossly overestimated the opposing strength -- it actually was about 40,000 men, ill supplied and ill fed -- McClellan called it a well-trained and well-equipped army of 150,000.

Such an imagined force he dared not attack.

Perhaps it was wishful thinking, perhaps his engineering background made him apply a factor of safety, but in any event he never felt quite strong enough for a decisive move. Something was always lacking. He shrank from making even an armed reconnaissance.

He refused to join the Navy in reducing the Potomac forts, which had stopped river traffic and cut Washington from access to the sea.

By this week the first faint grumblings over McClellan's "inaction" were heard. Lincoln backed him up with steadfast patience, but soon even Lincoln was to despair. All the events of the coming months took their color from this situation.

Wayland LWV Seeks Funds

To the Editor:

Once again the League of Women Voters of Wayland is calling on a number of civic minded citizens to ask for their financial support of the League's work in the community. Its fund raising drive will be conducted today through Oct. 9, when League members will contact townspeople who share their interest in good government.

In working to promote political responsibility among all citizens, not just its members, the League provides a valuable service to the community. Two ways in which this is done locally are "Candidates' Night" and "Budget Night", programs sponsored by the Wayland League in order that town voters can inform themselves properly before participating in Town Elections and Town Meeting.

Many Wayland residents will be able to learn more about their town as a result of the information to be gathered by the League in its study of town committees and boards this coming year.

The Wayland Self-Study Survey, which has been made available to the town, was a consequence of its previous concentration on local regional planning. This topic is now being studied at the state level by all the Leagues in Massachusetts. The League's interest and efforts nationally on behalf of the Water Conservation Bill contributed greatly to its recent passage in Congress.

These are just a few examples of how this non-partisan organization studies and acts on issues involving the public interest at all levels.

Because the League does not conduct a house-to-house finance drive, persons not contacted who wish to contribute may do so by sending a check payable to the League of Women Voters of Wayland, to Mrs. Gus Masiello, 114 Concord road, Wayland.

Sincerely yours,
Joanne Davis

Smoke Signal

Vol. II, No. 1 West High School, Weston, Mass. September 28, 1961

International Air Featured At Weston

By KATHRYN RIDER
and JOAN O'TOOLE

"Where did you come from?" demanded an annoyed study hall teacher when he discovered one more student who was not on his seating chart.

"Brazil," came the polite answer.

Six foreign students are attending classes at Weston High this year. In order to acquaint the student body with them, the Smoke Signal did some interviewing.

Lilia Torres Navarro from Acapulco, Mexico, is a member of our sophomore class. To Lilia the main differences between American and Spanish schools are the construction of the schools and the language. In Mexico as in many foreign countries the pupils stay in one classroom and the teachers go from room to room. Art is one of Lilia's hobbies and she enjoys the art classes in Weston High very much. Lilia plans to continue her studies in Mexico and get a job in a hotel.

Lila's older sister Guillermina Torres Navarro is in our Junior Class. Guillermina enjoys playing the guitar as a hobby. She believes that the students in America and Mexico are much the same. Guillermina's ambition is to become an airline stewardess.

From Brozil

Fernando Viegas Rangel is visiting us from Brazil. In his country he took eleven majors and also gym where they played soccer, and tennis. His hobbies include collecting stamps and postcards from many countries. After finishing school Fernando would like to go to a medical college.

A new student in our junior class Jon Sanderud from Norway. Jon informed us that in Norway he took seventeen different courses although they were not all on the same day. He is studying to become a doctor. Soccer, track, and swimming are some of the sports that Jon enjoys most during the summer.

German Student

Sabine Podolsky has come to Weston from Bad Oeynhausen, Germany. In Germany her subjects included English, German, History, Physics, Algebra, Plane Geometry, and either Latin or Housekeeping. Homework in Germany is much harder we were told by Sabine. Sabine's favorite athletics include track, jumping and swimming. She plans to go to the University in Germany in three years to study German History.

An article about our Rombas student, Josyane Claudette Braas, is forthcoming.

Dramatists Plan 3 Productions

By BARBARA ARNOLD

The Weston High School Dramatic Club expects to produce three plays this year under the direction of Mr. Nichols, the new English and dramatics teacher. "Arms and the Man" by Shaw has been selected as the first in the series, and the cast has been chosen.

Starring in this comedy on romanticism is Arra Avakian as the "chocolate-cream soldier." Sergius, a great military hero, is played by John Harnish. His betrothed, Raina, is enacted by Consuelo Castillo. Richard Thomas and Georgie Roland will play Major and Catherine Petkoff, Rania's parents. Don Saunders and Renee Strong have the parts of servants.

The production date of the play depends on the completion of the new auditorium, which can seat as many as 650 people at each performance. Until the auditorium is ready, rehearsals are held in class rooms.

Mr. Nichols, who came to Weston from Cheschire Academy, Connecticut, has directed over thirty school plays. He has also done some professional acting. In the 1960 season of the Colorado Shakespeare Festival, he played Falstaff in "Henry IV, Part 1."

Susan's Musin's

By SUSAN MORGAN

"Sorry, I got lost," was the interscholastic excuse used by 95% of the students on September 7th. I wonder if the thought did not cross all our minds, at least once, that tedious day how much we missed the "old" school "and its familiar halls of learning.

Now when you lose your locker combination, you tote your books or sink. There is no flat shelf on top of these new lockers to just chuck your books. What cruel person put the clocks in the back of the room and got the windows in upside down? We listen for the well-known clang of the passing bell and hear an almost inaudible "bleep!"

So many things in the new school have changed or are not completed yet. When Dotty Nims left a full length mirror, she forgot to specify that it should go to this school. And does Miss Butera ever miss the old locker room shower.

Isn't it true that many "sun-kiss't" students run to the office just to get cooled off before entering another 90 degree class? It would be a good idea to supply each student with a fly swatter as well as a text book. Don't we miss the old milk line, and don't many teachers secretly yearn for the security of the "cage"? Now all the students know which teachers drink Metrecal.

Don't we miss the "old school" just a little?

Accordion Plan Expands More, Alters Courses

By CLAIRE SHNEIDER

Some changes in the school this year are obvious. For instance, the building wasn't here last September! But some of the changes are less noticeable. For example, the various subject areas have been modified by the Accordion Plan. Sixty-five to seventy percent of the students and teachers at Weston High are associated with the plan according to Mr. Gleason, the new Accordion Plan Director. The new school was designed with the Accordion Plan in mind, and the fully equipped lecture hall, Room 10, is an example of what was done to accommodate it.

In the Math and Science Department, Mr. Marsden and Mr. Kellett are co-ordinating and sometimes combining Physical Science and Algebra 1 for two freshman classes. For the first time, Algebra II students are being taught SMSG, a new concept in Math from Yale University. By now most of the tenth grade math students are also taking SMSG.

Classes Combine

College Prep Chemistry is scheduled so that two classes are being taught at the same time. Miss Day and Mr. Sawyer will often combine their classes for lectures in Room 10. Team teaching will be used in several science courses, including CBA Chemistry and Biology I. Lab facilities will be available to two freshman classes for the first time.

The sophomore English program has been reorganized to benefit from the Accordion Plan. Pupils may find themselves studying in anything from an eighty-student lecture hall to a study group with fifteen other people in it. The Accordion Plan is being used for the second year to co-ordinate U. S. History and American Literature for the juniors. Modern Problems, in which classes will often be combined for lectures, involves seniors in the Accordion Plan.

Business Ed has added a new secretarial course. Student stenographers will work mainly by themselves in highly individualized classes.

Language courses will also be individualized. As many as forty-two students may work in the new language lab at the same time, improving their grammar and pronunciation with or without instructions from one of the four consoles.

Everyone Involved

Right now the typical student reaction to the Accordion Plan ranges from "What is it?" to "Huh?" But this attitude should soon be a thing of the past. Mr. Gleason expects that in a few years every student will be involved in it.

Editorial

By BEVERLY BODEN

The sun is brighter, the sky is bluer and the days are hotter, or so it seems the second week of September. It is then when everyone thinks, "Why can't we have just one more week off?" This year the gorgeous days were noticed but not with the usual attitude . . . Who had time to question "le temps" when an intriguing maize had to be figured out? Our new school is amazing.

The more we become accustomed to our new settings, the more we will learn to appreciate the work, time, and money that made this school possible. Now that we have our school we have a greater responsibility than ever before. This responsibility is to keep the school's good reputation. This means a better scholastic attitude with more respect for the school, its grounds and its property. The new school wasn't planned only for our comfort but it was built for teaching efficiently and learning more. The school is now more than ever a place of business, not a country club.

The SMOKE SIGNAL will certainly take advantage of its new surroundings. We now have a room we can call our own. Room 203 will be a busy place what with reading copy, proof-reading the galleys, dummying-up and getting the Signals off to press. The staff is hoping that if study halls are arranged as planned, we may be able to get some of our chores done in school time. Now we have nothing to worry about except deadlines!

They're Off!

By JEFF OGILVIE

Cross-country running, mislabeled a minor sport, is off to a major sport start in the new school. With the addition of eight new runners to the squad the aggregate has been raised to sixteen.

The course, expected to be 2.8 miles long, will be confined as much as possible to the school grounds. The tentative schedule to date is as follows: October 3 - Wayland; October 10 - Ashland; October 13 - Bedford; October 17 - Algonquin; October 29 - Wayland; November 2 - Bedford; and November 7 - Ashland.

The official opinion of the squad, expressed by Coach Marotta, is that the team has a good chance of winning if they get up and go.

Debating Team Seeks Members

By SUSAN MURPHY

The newly organized Debating Club has ten charter members. According to Mr. Zorn, a group of approximately twelve is needed before the club can function effectively.

Already signed up on the sheet in his office are Jon Richards, Barb Wareham, Leslie Townsend Sue Morgan, Alan Frazier, Kathryn Rider, Susan Murphy, Jeff Heidt, Phillip Comeau, and Robert Olfield. More students are wanted to complete the team.

When organized, the Debating Club will stage intramural debates and with practice may join the National Forensic League, a society formed by high school debating clubs. Mr. Zorn believes that the members will have practice in learning how to organize their ideas and express them before an audience more effectively. In an age of TV debates, Meet the Press, and Open End this training will be valuable.

Weston Fire Dept. Changes Wait on Wellesley

Angeles towns, as the best setup in the nation.

"They also enjoy the lowest fire insurance rates," says the report.

The reasons cited by the Fire Prevention Bureau:

1--Better use of personnel . . . 2 -- better dispatching of fire apparatus . . . 3--elimination of standby apparatus which never gets used but becomes obsolete with age . . . 4--elimination of inefficient uncontrolled small fire stations.

Mr. Bond of this bureau recommended:

--A central station out of the traffic-congested area, large enough to house all equipment.

--Twelve permanent men and 50 call men -- with a provision that the call men be on call eight hours, with pay, in addition to a $500 annual salary.

(At present, the department has 13 permanent men on its three shifts and 25 call men. But finding call men during the day hours is often difficult because of the nature of their work out of town.

Minority members on the committee (two) felt that two new stations -- north and south -- would be the answer.

But the majority held out for a new central station -- if efforts with Wellesley fell through. It also suggested the two-station formula as an alternative.

"However, none of the committee consider the matter sufficiently pressing at the present time," says the repot, "to start immediate construction, in view of the high efficiency of the department and the town's heavy current indebtedness."

Eventually, the report states, the decision is up to the voters at town meeting.

Residents will probably have time to air the question at the Oct. 10 public hearing on town affairs at Town Hall.

As for a small station on the south side, with two men per shift and two pieces of apparatus, the committee says no: cost $2 on the tax rate and undue confusion at the fire scene.

The committee notes that a central station would "normally provide a six to seven-minute service to all parts of town and that a two-station setup would reduce this by about one minute."

"However," the report says at another point, "in that area of Weston adjacent to the Wellesley line, there are records indicating that under adverse conditions, such as heavy traffic or snow and ice, runs have taken as much as 15 minutes. This obviously creates an unfavorable situation and one that should be examined carefully.

No Fatalities In 50 Years

WESTON -- Facts from the Weston fire report:

--No fire fatalities in 50 years -- "maybe longer."

--Average run of fire department, five minutes.

--It would take 75 full-time permanent men and huge water mains to materially reduce Weston's fire insurance rating, despite the town's excellent record.

rd., next-door neighbor, objected on the grounds the shelter would interfere with his view. Powell pointed out:

"This ledge can easily be excavated . . . with a pick and shovel and sledgehammer. I got six feet into it.

"We think it would be better for him to dig his shelter into the rock and then place his roof at ground level."

Glen rd. way, a right of way over Powell's property provides access to his and Chase's homes.

John Mathews of 247 Glen rd. pointed out that the above-ground aspects of the shelter might be considered the same as if trees shut off the Powell's view. In fact, he suggested to the board, a compromise might be affected by planting trees to hide the structure.

Chase said he was not sure if he could go down farther than two feet because of the ledge. The overall height of the structure would be 9 - 10 feet.

Rudolph Helgeson, Robert Cook and Grant conducted the hearing.

Weston Hearing Oct.10 on Fire, Caucus Changes

WESTON -- Weston residents will get a chance to explore, firsthand, future fire protection and future nominating procedures at a special hearing Tuesday, Oct. 10, at 8 p.m. in the Town Hall.

This meeting called by the Board of Selectmen will enable town officials to ascertain voter opinion on:

1. The proposal of a special committee to change the caucus system of nomination of town officials--a move not recommended by the selectmen's board which requested a study.

2. A union with Wellesley on a second fire station on the south side and/or an increase in the department's strength and/or a new central fire station.

Weston is holding a special town meeting tenatively on Nov. 14 to determine whether it shall have two voting districts, as proposed recently by a study committee. Other subjects might be added to the agenda.

Actually, the Oct. 10 hearing may also include discussion of Civil Defense plans--or any other subject of primary interest to townsfolk.

Tickets: at Weston Hardware for $1.60.

The movie will benefit the Weston-Rombas exchange.

WESTON -- Weston High jumped off to a good start this year with a 32 - 8 victory over St. Mary's of Cambridge on the junior high school field last Saturday.

Co-capt. Bill Rizzo led his teammates with two touchdowns, scored on end sweeps.

Quarterback Buddy Foster was right there with 9 passes out of 11 completed. Foster and the first team played the first half and a few plays in the second before turning the game over to the second team.

Foster's aerial to Bob Trowbridge accounted for one Weston touchdown and his pass to Bob D'Antonio scored the one local extra point. Freddy White and John Trowbridge each scored for Weston. The lone St. Mary's score was made by Maguire. The extra by Mills on a rush.

Next Saturday, Weston faces the powerful Lynnfield High squad in Lynnfield. Coach George Harris' squad is out to better its 6 - 3 record of last year. Tackle Peter Revotski was injured in scrimmage and was unable to play Saturday.

The starting lineup:

LE - D'Antonio; lt, Aker; lg, Evans, c, Herrick; rg, French; rt. Connolly; re, Hill; qb, Foster; hb, Browne and Trowbridge; fb, Rizzo.

WAYLAND -- Children along Old Connecticut Path from Davelin rd. to Maiden lane will soon have a first-rate sidewalk for school days.

A contract has been let to the William P. Capone Corp. of Roslindale to construct and improve the sidewalk, and to widen the high school entrance, according to Highway Comr. Charles Peters. All for $16,000.

There is a rough sidewalk base from Maiden lane to the high school now. This will be completed.

Construction of the sidewalk was regarded as a must by the school department as a safety factor and to avoid using more school buses, and money was appropriated at the June town meeting.

Something About Birds

By CHARLOTTE E. SMITH

WESTON -- The polar air from the north which arrived Sept. 15 started migrants moving in large numbers during the cold, clear nights which followed.

The first junco was reported by A. L. Gates on Sept. 19 and the first olive-backed thrush by Mrs. D. R. Davidson on the same day. Pine warblers were seen by Mrs. A. S. Fales and A. L. Gates, and blackpolls continued to be numerous. Philadelphia vireos were reported on Sept. 17 (Smiths), and Sept. 19 (Davidson). Mr. E. F. Foote, North Ave., saw a nighthawk taking off from the ground at dusk on Sept. 16 and C. L. Smith saw another near Conant rd. on that same night. Many robins have been migrating, also towhees and catbirds, and large flocks of grackles are gathering.

There was a pied-billed grebe at the Norumbega Reservoir, Oak st., on Sept. 16 (Smiths); a great blue heron was heard and then seen flying over on Sept. 15 by H. B. Crouch, Montvale rd., a green heron is still present on Shady Hill rd. (Mrs. C. B. Ilsley), and C. L. Smith saw a bittern at 80 Acres, Lexington st. on Sept. 20, where he also saw a belted kingfisher. There was a spotted sandpiper at "Beauty's Pond", Silver Hill, on Sept. 13 (Olander and Bolton), and Mrs. Illsley reports that a solitary sandpiper seen earlier by Dr. W. A. Ellis-ton, is still around.

A female rose-breasted grosbeak appeared at the Fales' feeder on Merriam st. Sept. 16, and an immature male indigo bunting has been seen and heard singing (Davidson). Mrs. Davidson also reports a Brewster's warbler, a whip-poor-will flushed from the ground, and a Carolina wren -- all on Sept. 12. A bobwhite was heard calling on Conant rd. Sept. 16 (Smith), and Mrs. Davidson reports hearing a screech owl on Sept. 17. The Smiths, Westland rd., had a fine close look at a male pileated woodpecker working on several trees in their yard on Sept. 20.

Into TV's wasteland, FCC Chairman Newton Minow last week threw this suggestion to the networks:

Produce a good "Children's Hour" daily in the late afternoon.

Maybe parents could echo what he said about present-day shows -- and don't duck, it was a surprise --:

"'"Most television is neither harmful nor beneficial to children . . . Most are timewaster shows . . . dull, gray and insipid . . . like dishwater . . . just as tasteless . . . just as nourishing. They hold and babysit. Period."

And sometimes, they don't even do that. Ever notice what happens to the child who gets his fill of TV? The junk shows get a "nyaaah" -- and he's off to other mischief.

Picked up the phone here one day week or so ago:

"Where's the anti-urban renewal meeting?" said a man identified as Wasserman all out of breath.

We said maybe it was the Wayland Civic Assn. They're against renewal.

"I know they are, lock, stock and barrel," he shot back, "but darn it, they didn't tell me where they're meeting. We're against it in Revere, too, and I'm here to give them the pitch . . .

We didn't want to eavesdrop further, so we made a few calls and the last we heard, he was on his way to the high school's Little Theatre to uproot urban renewal.

would certainly be open by Oct. 15 at the latest.

As for the Rte. 20 tangle that is shaping up over Rte. 128, it may be next spring before this is in operation and Weston Commuters are in shape to navigate it.

Originally, the Rte. 128 rotary was to be finished Dec. 31 but lack of material forced the opening back to June 30 officially, although the DPW hopes to be finished sooner.

The 117 repairs have caused a weird traffic pattern through Weston center and in effect caused the residents in the North av. area to be cut off.

Weston firemen have been covering for Waltham firemen on calls to that part of Waltham on this side of 128.

No-Noise Lab, Says Dow In Brief to Wayland Boards

this research done east of Michigan, he stated, the company wanted a location in the East.

"It is here, close to Cambridge which is a world center of science and research, Dow decided to come. We have been in Framingham since 1955 with approximately 27 employees. We would like to move to Wayland and build a plant that would eventually house 40 - 50 employees, all told, but never to exceed 100 or 125," Dr. McLafferty asserted.

"Naturally, with Harvard and M.I.T. so close, we hope to attract some of the scientific brainpower to come out of such institutions and there are a lot of people who don't care about settling out in Midland but would like to stay here in New England."

Robert H. Charnock of the Planning Board asked if Dow would be willing to erect some brightly colored poles marking the lines of the proposed 14,000 square foot building, on the site so it could be viewed from the road. Dow officials agreed to do this.

He also asked. "Would the company be interested n this land if only the portion which would house the plant were re-zoned and the rest left as it is?"

The answer: "I wonder if Dow would have gone to that price on the option if it were to remain residential. I would have to ask the Company, if that were proposed."

L. William Bertelsen of the Planning Board questioned the choice on the site for the proposed building and was told that it most closely fitted their needs. When asked if any other sites had been shown to Dow in Wayland, Dr. McLafferty said:

"Yes, a large area bordering on Rte. 20. But the expense of turning gravel pits into an attractive piece of property would be so prohibitive, it was not considered for long.

Selectman, George K. Lewis, sole selectman present, asked: "Why did you pick that particular topographic site on the property to locate the plant?"

The answer:

"We had extensive borings and surveys made by Stone and Webster and seismographic soundings by the Weston Observatory and they told us that this location was best. There is considerable ledge outcropping which prohibits the building in other areas. There would then be plenty of area on the north end for waste disposal."

Another questioner from the floor asked how wastes would be disposed.

He was told: "On the north end of the property there would be separate systems for sanitary and laboratory wastes.

"Particularly noxious wastes are placed in containers and hauled away by service for just this purpose."

Another questioner on wastes, Ralph S. Blanchard, was assured that there was absolutely no danger from radioactive wastes.

Roger E. Ela, a member of the Finance Committee questioned whether "there would be any rooftop equipment" and was assured there would not be. Mr. Ela also asked::

"Under our bylaws here, when we grant "limited commercial" use in re-zoning, each operation is usually spelled out and all proposed activities listed and all conditions clear on the proposed permit.

"Would the company be agreeable to sit down and do just this so the townspeople could know just what was proposed before they had to vote at the town meeting?"

The answer: "Yes, we would be glad to do so and are most anxious to do so so they can work out a definite time schedule to meet the deadline of their option date." (Dec. 15).

A little humor crept into the proceedings when the representative of the Company said that Dow home office had questioned the desireability of settling in Massachusetts and had questioned the relation of Wayland politics and honesty with that of the rest of the state. They were reassured.

"Would there be any night work?" another questioner asked.

"The regular hours are 8 - 5," was the answer, "but occasionally someone works overtime. They might work late if they were in the middle of some job they wanted to complete. "Dr. McLafferty answered.

Mr. Charnock asked: "How well prepared would the company be to submit more concrete plans of the type of building proposed?"

The answer: "The architecture of such a building is pretty well dictated by the site. Although we can state it will not be three stories high, we cannot say it will have so many windows, so many doors or give a final plan because no one would spend approximately $70,000, or whatever the architects fee would run, on a proposed $2,000,000 building unless they were assured they could build it. We cannot present final plans at this stage."

Byrnes said the company is very anxious to work out a time schedule so tentative agreement could be reached on all restrictions "so we could present the voter at their town meeting the specific conditions we will accept." "We would like to meet any reasonable limitations," he further stated. Atty. Byrnes hoped to discuss the road conditions in the area with the highway department this week, he stated.

Any organizations or individuals with questions concerning the proposed re-zoning and plant are invited to discuss it with the Planning Board and Dow officials who are willing to address any gathering for this purpose.

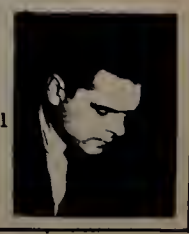
If a woman answers-- don't hang up

EL 8-4543 is the number to call if you have any questions you want answered about insurance. And, don't hang up if a woman answers.

You'll be talking to Mrs. Harold Purdy -- and that's not bad. In fact it's great! We'll bet Mrs. Purdy can answer your question 8 times out of 10. If she can't, she knows just where to get the answer -- quickly, completely and accurately.

This is really not so surprising. Mrs. Purdy has worked in insurance offices before. And what she hasn't learned, she's inherited. Her father was in the business for 50 years.



We're obviously very proud of our Mrs. Purdy. She helps us offer you knowledgeable, interested assistance from the moment you pick up the phone till your problems are all ironed out.

Isn't this the kind of treatment you expect from your insurance agency? It should be. It is certainly the kind you receive when you call EL 8-4543.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

Through 4 Centuries

Over in Newburgh, N. Y., they have been having quite a touse about the great increase of persons on their welfare rolls, and the increasingly heavy burden on the local taxpayers of the indigent and unfortunate from other places and other states who have settled there in recent years.

This is a present-day example of an old, old problem.

For the towns of Weston and Wayland, notes of it on the town records run back almost to their founding.

Indeed the Englishmen who settled here in Massachusetts Bay brought the problem of poverty and methods of meeting it from Old England in their ships with them.

Over there, Queen Elizabeth, and her predecessors, had wrestled with the same question: how to assist the deserving poor, without, at the same time encouraging poverty as a means of getting a living from the public treasury. Naturally, the colonists here introduced some of the English notions on the matter, and tried to work out practical local solutions.

Vestiges of their methods are to be found remaining in certain practices of the present day local Boards of Public Welfare, as they are now called.

One reminder is the very presence of these boards, up to within recent years designated "Overseers of the Poor."

It was Queen Elizabeth's government in 1601, which provided that there were to be two overseers of the poor in every English parish. They were to look after the local needy, report to the parish corporation, and set a rate, or tax, on all the local rents and property to meet the cost.

This problem of the unfortunate, the penniless and the aged had grown acute in the old country in the decades before the settlement of New England; because even before the Reformation and the laws which came in its train, dissolution had begun of the wealthy monasteries which all through medieval times had been a haven for the wayfaring man with the poor.

The nation's conscience, however, bound it to the ancient Jewish and Christian tradition that no man should starve.

So, under Elizabeth, the weak and the old were granted money assistance; those who were strong enough were put to work weaving cloth. "Rogues and vagabonds" unwilling to work though in good health, were to be whipped and sent to houses of correction.

Then, as now, money grants in time resulted in growing abuses, and eventually changes in law. Then, as now, penny wise parishes tried to cut the tax rate, and harshness and injustice to the poor were sometimes the consequence.

To keep down the rates, local authorities, both in England and here, often "warned" all strangers out of town on pain of severe punishment, lest they acquire a "settlement."

Sudbury householders (part of the then Sudbury is now Wayland) were under penalty of a heavy fine if they let or leased a dwelling to an outsider, except with the permission of the Selectmen or of the Town Meeting. Three women, one with a child, and a man and wife were warned by the Town of Weston to leave in 1755, a common practice.

Nowadays, Massachusetts towns do not do any warning out, but they avoid as far as possible becoming responsible for the support of indigent persons from other places; and there is still bookkeeping between towns, and with the state, in the matter of legal "settlement" and support.

Always, however, Massachusetts has done its best to care for its needy "for the ease of the Countrie," as one of the earliest statutes of the Bay Province put it; and the towns of Weston, Wayland and Sudbury have done their full part.

Sudbury in 1639 impowered a committee "to speak with Mrs. Hunt about her person, house and estate, and to take some care for her relief," and she was granted 50 shillings to be paid out of a rate to be levied "this in respect to her poverty." Later, the town voted to have a "sergeon" from Dedham come "for the cure of her distemper". Weston, too, as shown by its earliest records, appropriated again and again for its unfortunates.

And in this twentieth century certainly none of these towns would be satisfied to do less for any worthy person.

Mill Pond Dam Out, Town to Repair It, Eyes Improvements

WAYLAND -- A combination of Hurricane Esther and "ambitious youngsters" have combined to break the dam at the Mill Pond, Wayland Center, but the old skating pond may end up better than before.

Town officials promised this week that the dam will be repaired in time for skating and added that they are trying to get Middlesex County Mosquito Control authorities to straighten out the stream that feeds the pond.

This has long been under discussion and will entail a faster-flowing brook, to help destroy the breeding grounds. It will also mean lowering the pond by two feet and town officials contemplate doing a cleanup job on the pond -- if funds are available.

Hyannis Port: Inside Story

(Special to The Crier)

HYANNIS PORT -- Frank Sinatra, king of the Clan, met here this weekend with President Kennedy on the eve of Mr. Kennedy's address to the United Nations.

What was said at this historic meeting on the Cape has been preserved through the efforts of a diligent houseservant whose presence of mind led him to bring a tape recorder along as the two heads of state met and discussed affairs of state on the Kennedy's yacht.

Mr. Sinatra arrived with a champagne glass, 12 pieces of luggage and a private wine closet.

For brevity, the Clan's chieftain will be referred to as FR and Mr. Kennedy as JFK during the cruise:

FR -- John-boy, how's the kid? Great, great. LIS-sen, I got a few words I want to scramble with you.

FR -- Buddy-boy, you've got to get off this Berlin kick. People're beginning to talk. All this Berlin jazz ain't going over, budd-dee.

FR -- Let me tell you . . . I was saying to Dean the other day . . . Whaddya mean, Rusk? Who's that kook? MAR-tin. Mar-tin. Dean Martin, Get with it John-boy, you're beginning to sound tired, budd-ee. Let me fix you . . . Where'd he go?

FR -- Oh, John-BOY, thereyarr. LIS-sen, budd-dee, like I'm a friend. Let me tell you about that Berlin jazz. It ain't boff.

FR - Now tomorrow, when you're with thos UN cats. LIS-sen, let me give you a little tip on technique, boy. Hold onto that mike, like you was sick, man . . . Now out in Vegas, Dean and me . . . Where'd he go?

FR -- John-BOY. Look, don't worry, if you're trying to give some cat the shake, I'll take care of him. Just sit still, while I give you a little word, Jack.

FR -- Things are bad at the UN. Like sick. Lissen, Jack -- get that UN show on the road, Boy. Travel broadens the outlook . . . Say, where're all the chicks? . . . Hey, where'd he go?

FR -- But I gotta tell ya, buddy-boy. Skip that Berlin jazz. Don't be a kook. Let 'em have the burg. Look, budd-dee, we still got the Riviera. Man oh man -- Dean and me cleaned out the pack when we moved in there. Ya heard. Yeh, it got around. . .

FR -- I know. I know. That shows the right spirit. You got that speech. Forget it a while. You're good on your feet. Never mind all that typing jazz.

FR -- Look this international jazz is like show biz, fellah. Nothing like it. Rough.

FR -- LIS-sen, why I'm here, buddy. A new kick. Never mind, Nikki's troika, Look Dean and me . . . No MAR-tin, Mar-tin. Don't be a kook. You and me and Dean, we're a troika, Man, we'd slay 'em. Lissen -- you ever been in the Paramount? Well, I can tell you, John-boy, you gotta have the right beat. Let me show you . . . Now where'd he go?

World Wide Communion

World Wide Communion Sunday will be observed at the Weston Methodist Church on Sunday, October 1, at 9:30 and 11:30 a.m. services in fellowship with Christians all over the world. A special offering will be received for the Fellowship of Suffering and service in support of the work of the Commission on Chaplains, and the Methodist Committee for Overseas Relief.

Several foreign students from Boston University will be at the services and afterwards will be invited into the homes of the parish for dinner.

During the Communion Service, the original communion set of the church will be on display. It is believed this set was used by Francis Asbury, first Bishop of the Methodist Church, when he was in this area in the 1790's.

WESTON - Committee chairmen for Northeastern University's Alumni Association have been named, Rudolf O. Oberg, director of alumni relations, announced yesterday.

Alfred E. Lonnberg, 214 Winter st., Weston, general chairman of the Alumni Fund, announced that the 1960 61 Alumni Fund Report showed donations up 16 percent over last year and number of donors up 28 percent. Total donations were $105,176.90.

Weston Methodist Has New Organist

WESTON -- The Music Committee of the Weston Methodist Church welcomed Dr. Karin Gutberg as organist and choir director for the coming year.

Dr. Gutberg comes, originally, from Riga, Latvia. She secured her master of music degree in piano and organ at the College of Music (Mozarteum) in Salzburg, Austria, and her doctor of music degree at Boston University, where she has been teaching piano and organ since 1957. Wellesley College Fund Drive Oct.2-16 In Wayland, Weston

WELLESLEY--In the two week period extending from Oct. 2 through Oct. 16, alumnae of Wellesley College living in Wayland and Weston will carry out a Personal Call Program inspired in their efforts by the $2,000,000 Ford Foundtion grant which will come to Wellesley if the college matches the grant by raising another $6,000,000 within the next three years.

Last summer Wellesley received awards totaling $3000 for winning first prize among private women's colleges and placing second only to Yale among more than 300 educational institutions competing for "excellence in sustained performance . . . in the development of alumnae support" in the Alumnae Giving Incentive Awards Program conducted by the American Alumni Council and supported by the United States Steel Foundation.

In the college year 1960-1961, 60.9 percent of all Wellesley alumnae made gifts to Wellesley. Wayland and Weston with Waltham can be proud that they had a record of 66 percent of local alumnae who were donors.

At this point, Wellesley has reached the half-way mark toward its goal of $15,000,000. With the Ford Foundation grant indicating approval of past efforts and of future promise at Wellesley, the challenge to alumnae and friends is clear.

Mrs. Kemp B. Reade is chairman of the Personal Call Program in Wayland and will be assisted by Mrs. James T. Burgess, Mrs. Howard A. Gray Jr., Mrs. John B. Higley, Mrs. Walter H. Hogan and Mrs. George P. Little.

In Weston Mrs. Peter S. Mansfield is chairman, Mrs. Kirkbride Patterson has charge of special gift solicitation, and the callers are Mrs. J. Ward Carter, Mrs. Frederick R. Coburn, Mrs. Robert W. Danforth, Mrs. P. T. Gates Jr., Mrs. Ralph H. Griffin Jr., Mrs. S. Theodore Guild Jr., Mrs. John R. Lenox Jr., Mrs. John O. McGillivray, Mrs. Robert D. McMullin, Mrs. John R. McNeil and Mrs. Richard H. Silverman.

Christian Science Services

WESTON -- The importance of distinguishing between sound and unsound thoughts will be brought out at Christian Science services Sunday at First Church Scientist, Weston.

Scriptural readings in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Unreality" will include these verses from Psalm 119: "I hate vain thoughts: but thy law do I love... Thy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness, and thy law is the truth."

2 Wayland Teachers At Math Conference

WAYLAND WESTON

Town Crier

Vol. XV, No. 40 - 20 Pages THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1961 10¢ a copy - $4.00 per year

A FATHER'S COMFORT -- Robert Wilson, 11, injured when struck by a passing car last Friday on Old Connecticut Path, Wayland, receives comforting words from his father, George F. of 7 Castle rd., Wayland. Taken to Leonard Morse Hospital, Robert was later discharged with no serious injuries. Investigating Officer Edward Burke in background.

200 Waylanders Dare To Learn Fallout Facts – What They Learned:

WAYLAND--Civil Defense was serious business to a little more than 200 of Wayland's 10,000 persons--so the session at the Little Theatre proved last Thursday.

What they learned primarily is that the facts on Civil Defense are a bit more than "calculated guesses" but that probably "for many years to come" C.D. will be a part of American life and they'd better bone up on it.

Basically, every family should be prepared to be its own nurse and doctor---"anything less is foolhardy," C.D.Director Francis Gallagher said.

In a two-hour session, first of its kind in this region, they learned that:

--Radiation flows in a straight line--like an X-ray -- and that it won't drop in on you, if you're below ground.

--Fallout can be expected to drop to a safe level within 48 hours, UNLESS ....Alot depends on where the rockets land and how frequently.

--Food kept in a shelter should not require cooking or have too much salt (thirst).

--Fruit juices and water are good bets.

--Moisture problems may make it essential to crayon labels on cans: labels "slide" off in the moisture.

--Keep matches in tight container...as moisture protection.

--There's no telling what size missile the Russians would use, so there's no safe prediction of conditions.

--Underground fallout shelters should have an air pipe with a baffle arrangement to protect against radioactive dust filtering in.

(Maybe radiation can't bend its way into your shelter but "loaded dust" can sift in if you don't take this protection.)

--No doors are planned in cellar shelters--just a catacomb-like entrance ...and two or three outer air holes for circulation.

"The great difficulty in Civil Defense work," Mr. Gallagher told The Crier, "is that we are dealing with calculated guesses, with possibilities

Board Drops Workable Program Into Selectmen's Laps for OK

By BETTY GEIGER

WAYLAND -- The Urban Renewal Authority presented an 15-page "Workable Program" Monday night to the Wayland Selectment for approval.

They also made a request that the Selectmen appoint a five-man, impartial committee to act as a watchdog committee for the town interests.

This group, being formed at the present time, will consist of a cross-section of Wayland and will include two members of the clergy, a member of a civic group, and a resident of the Wayland and Cochituate areas.

A considerable amount of time was spent at the Monday meeting in heated discussion of what "blight" is in relation to urban renewal. URA member John McEnroy, stated: "I don't think we can go ahead until we define what blight is. As this is set up now, we could just go in and take over an area. What would this do to various people already established in business? Can they be wiped out? This is something that disturbs me very much. We have not got all the information . . . The minute we hand eminent domain authority over to five men (URA) the con-

BOSTON -- You better break that October habit.

About one million Bay State drivers (this one included) still have not had their cars inspected -- and there are only 10 days left.

Registrar Riley warns that the last day for inspection is Sunday Oct. 15 -- and on Monday, the 16th registry and local police will be on the alert to arrest all delinquent drivers.

One trouble: Most drivers are accustomed to "getting it done" late in October but this year the inspection period was shifted to Sept. 1 - Oct. 15.

But the law hasn't: no ticket, no drive -- and no leniency in court.

Wayland Schools Planning Test Kindergarten Next Summer

WAYLAND -- The kindergarten Study Committee recommended to the School Board Monday that a six-week summer preparatory course be offered to those children who for one reason or another were denied the advantages of any formal pre-school training.

It takes approximately two months for the average child without previous exposure to become adjusted during which time he is not only dropping behind his peers academically but in many cases needlessly upsetting the class.

As this first year will be more or less in the nature of an experiment, it is planned only for those children who have not yet had access to any other formal preschool training - probably for 120 students the first time.

Happy Hollow, the most centrally located school of the three, is elected as the site of the proposed kindergarten. It is hoped that the following year the doors may be opened to all regardless of previous pre-school attendance.

An estimated budget of $6500 was presented to cover the costs of supplies, teachers and student helpers. There will be one fully qualified teacher and one student helper for every 25 students, plus one physical educational instructor for all.

It was agreed that this recommendation shoud appear as a separate warrant apart from the school bedget at Town Meeting, though it is entered with the endorsement of the School Committee.

Tuesday Is Information Day For Weston –on 4 Top Issues

WESTON -- Next Tuesday is Information Day for local residents.

At a public hearing called by the Board of Selectmen in the Town Hall at 8 p.m., residents can air their views and get information on the following issues facing the town:

1 -- Proposed shift to the town caucus form of nomination . . . which is designed to produce more contested elections for town offices.

2--Whether or not to shift from the open town meeting to a representative gathering.

3--Provision for future fire protection needs . . . either through cooperation with Wellesley in a jointly owned and operated station -- or provision for a new central station or southside station.

4--Whether to divide the town into two voting districts, divided

Taking Pains Often Painful, Wayland High School Finds

WAYLAND -- Patience and another Remington Rand computer or two are winning the battle of the high school schedules.

This is the word of Principal Max Griffin who told the School Board Monday night that the effort to make each schedule an individual matter had produced some schedule mixups. As he outlined it:

Having already embarked and committed themselves to the more progressive team teaching program with large, medium and small group instruction (emphasis on the small), the resultant complications are manifold -- but not insoluble.

Illustrating the lengths to which the system is willing to go to accommodate the particular needs of a particular child, the card of one was chosen at random.

She is currently taking 12th grade English, 12th grade social studies, 11th grade math, 10th grade Spanish and 9th grade music.

Dovetail this in with 643 other irregular schedules and you are bound to run into a few snafus.

Superintendent Edward J. Anderson believes that the school system is now mid-way between where they started four years ago and a completely effective computer system. It takes time.

Friendly Society Tryouts

WESTON -- Tryouts for the Friendly Society's fall play will be held at the First Parish Church on Monday, Oct. 16 at 8. Society members note that this play may be the last put on by them in the Town House. The first program saw "Our Summer Visitor" put on in 1895.

Timothy W. Dow

WESTON -- Funeral services were held Saturday at 2 at St. Peter's Chapel for Timothy Wade Dow, infant son of Frank B. and Ann E. W. (Rindlaub) Dow of 45 Sudbury rd., Weston, with the Rev. Philip Krug officiating.

Besides his parents, he is survived by a brother, Christopher B. and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Willard W. Rindlaub of West Englewood, N. J. and Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Dow Sr. of Newbury.

Burial followed in the family lot in Linwood Cemetery, with Mr. Krug giving committal prayers.

Harris Report School Plan Thrown Out by Town Boards

WAYLAND -- The omnipresent, seldom-seen "Harris report popped up at the School Board meeting Monday night -- with considerable to-do.

Seems the Harris Report wanted an addition to the Happy Hollow School--not the Claypit Hill School, as now being carried out.

But the Wayland Planning Board members and School Committeemen voted to reject Section 4 of the report and to substitute a recommendation in line with what the town is doing, subject to approval of the Planning Board.

The report found that the Happy Hollow area would witness the most extensive growth.

Supt. Edward J. Anderson, regretted Mr. Harris' lack of communication with the school department in arriving at his recommendations. The school department is in possession of statistics that could easily have been made available to Mr. Harris and perhaps resulted in a plan that would have been more in keeping with the immediate growth needs of the town. In this regard there seemed to be considerable discrepancy between the total school population projections for 1965 submitted by Mr. Harris and those of the school department. (3600 - Harris; 4100 - school department).

Opinion had it that Harris' methods and consequent predictions were more in keeping with full grown communities such as Newton and Brookline rather than town like Wayland still suffering growing pains.

Revisions of Section 4 of the Harris Report is to be submitted not later than Nov. 1 that it may be first read and approved by the Planning Board before the warrant deadline on Dec. 15 for inclusion on the agenda of the Town Meeting.

There is nothing binding in the Harris report as submitted. It can be revised by town authorities.

Weston's Fire Needs

The detailed study of the fire protection needs of the Town of Weston has been released just prior to the Oct. 10 public hearing at Town Hall on matters of public interest. Certainly among them should be the fire report.

On another page, The Crier publishes some of the thinking that went into the report's findings. We hope that these will prove helpful to our readers who may attend the Oct. 10 and subsequent meetings.

Basically, the committee majority proposed that Weston:

--Attempt to build and operate, in conjunction with Wellesley, a station at or near the town lines.

--If this fell through (and from Wellesley's attitude thus far, it seems it will), the committee suggested a new central station be built sometime in the future.

--It specifically ruled out any action now, principally we gather from a close reading of the report, because it fears the town is already heavily committed financially on schools and other needs.

--It also ruled out an often-heard proposal for a second station on the south side to accommodate this rapidly growing area and to bring fire protection closer, by many valuable minutes, to this hard-to-get-to area.

--One of the principal reasons against a second station, it seems, is that there would be confusion resulting from the appearance of apparatus and men from the central station on the scene already occupied by men from the southside station.

We should like to raise a few questions:

1--We cannot see where there would be any confusion resulting from men from the central station arriving second at a southside fire. Essentially, this happens now--when one piece of apparatus rolls from the central station, it is minutes before a crew arrives to bring the second piece to the fire. They all work as a team.

2--Often a rescue can be attempted with greater speed by firemen knowing that in a few moments a second squad will arrive from the second station-- rather than an indefinite wait for a second crew from the single station.

3--Although the report is laced with reminders that the longer run to the southside and the delayed discovery of a fire may spell danger and should be considered, we believe a fair reading of the report argues against this in favor of economy.

4--Being taxpayers ourselves, we can understand economy but --- we think careful consideration should be given to the rapid growth of Weston. Over 8000 now, the best estimates place it at over 10,000 (widely spread) by 1970.

This argues, we believe, for more than casual consideration of a geographical distribution of stations. Most towns in the over-10,000 class -- and some under -- have two well-distributed stations.

Economical operation of town government is a valid concern. We believe Weston to be one of the best run towns in the state.

For a town that shuns the economic relief of some light industry or laboratory, however, any increase in services is bound to be felt by the homeowner. That is a price of comfort. And we think, in this case, that it might be a case of penny-wise and pound-foolish to choose the "most economical" course. The final decision, however, is up to the voters. Let them express themselves at the Oct. 10 hearing.

WESTON, WAYLAND LADIES IN MUSEUM DRIVE -- Mrs. Marshall Dwinnell of Weston, Mrs. Thomas B. Gannett of Wayland, and Mrs. John N. Watters of Weston (from left) of the ladies committee of the Museum of Fine Arts, are working on he current membership drive, Oct. 2 - 15. Here they admire an old favorite, a Manet portrait, in newly decorated galleries. Extensive renovation was made possible at the museum through increased membership.

Space Age Carnival Oct.21 At Meadowbrook School

WESTON -- The annual fair of The Meadowbrook School of Weston will be held Saturday, Oct. 21. The theme - a Space Age Carnival. A highlight of the day will be a Space Age Parade, open to all children, in which prizes will be given for the best costumes.

New to the fair this year will be a sporting goods exchange, which will feature used or outgrown equipment. Mrs. Thomas S. Barrows, TW 3-1253, and Mrs. Henry E. Cooper 3d, TW 3-1060, are in charge of the exchange. Working with Mrs. Barrows and Mrs. Cooper is Mrs. Philip W. Trumbull of Weston.

Those interested in consigning sports equipment to the exchange may set their own sales price; the owner of the equipment will receive 60 percent of the price when the article is sold. Additional information may be obtained by calling Mrs. Barrows or Mrs. Cooper.

Other attractions include baked goods, books and records, an arts and crafts corner, handmade articles, white elephants, plants, and an outdoor grill where hot dogs and hamburgers will be sold.

In addition to the Space Age Parade for the children, which will be held at 1:30 p.m., there will be a midway with many games, boating on Meadowbrook Pond, and the chance to ride sports cars, jeeps, or horses.

For the smaller children there will be The Outer Space Room, where candy, second hand toys, and small pets such as guppies, turtles and small fish will be sold.

The carnival will be held at the school on Farm rd. in Weston, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mrs. Edmund U. Ritter and Mrs. Thurston Write Jr., head the fair committee.

Foreign policy was decided by a majority vote of the Cabinet under George Washington.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

Of Pies & Pumpkins

Pumpkins everywhere: on doorsteps, at banks and business places, great piles on the farms and roadside stands; some people are even making them into pies!

Immense field pumpkins and diminutive orange colored sugar pumpkins. All of them a reminder, in these days of plenty and unprecedented variety in food supplies that the pumpkin, along with that other gift from our Indian predecessors, maize or Indian corn, was once the staff of life hereabouts.

The pumpkin's manifold virtues were, in colonial days, celebrated in verse in this lilting alliterative quatrain:

"For pottage, and puddings, and custards and pies,
Our pumpkins and parsnips are common supplies.
We have pumpkins at morning and pumpkins at noon;
If it were not for pumpkins,
we should be undoon."

all of which was strict truth, even if some modern critics might be doubtful of its virtues as poetry. Warned Captain Johnson of Woburn, in his Wonder-working Providence: "Let no man make a jest of Pumpkins, for with this food the Lord was pleased to feed his people to their good content, till Corne and Cattell were increased."

The fact is that both the Pilgrims at Plymouth and the Puritans here in Massachusetts Bay Coiony had a tough and truly desperate struggle trying to survive here in this abounding land, as long as they depended on their accustomed foods from Old England. It was not until they put their pride in their pockets, and were content to learn at the feet of Indian teachers, plant the Indian seed of corn, beans, squash and pumpkins, and accept the aboriginal methods of cultivating and cooking that the newcomers were able to keep their stomaches comfortably filled.

The delicious tender summer squash which you have been enjoying all season, as well as many other types now seldom seen on our markets, were Indian productions, appreciated by Hariot, Champlain, Roger Williams and all the early European explorers; and now, with fall, come the winter squash and pumpkins.

About cooking and eating pumpkins the Indian natives had no frills. They ate them plain. Pastorius describes an Indian pumpkin feast. "I saw four of them dining together in great enjoyment of their feast. It consisted in nothing more than a pumpkin, simply boiled in water, without salt, butter, or spice of any kind. Their seat and table was the bare ground, their spoons were sea shells, wherewith they supped the warm water, and their plates were the leaves of the nearest tree, which . . . they had no need of washing or preserving." Which brings up the present-day query, why all this expensive modern paraphernalia that makes a meal outdoors a lot more trouble than one at the dinner table?

To this plain Indian menu, the whites, with their cows, added milk (which the Indians never cared for). Opening up the top of the pumpkin, or squash, as you would for a jack-a-lantern, they scooped out the seeds. Then in went milk and spice, perhaps also a little sweetening. Now the (hard-shelled) pumpkin got a baking in a bed of hot ashes, or in the brick oven of the fireplace. When done, it was apt to be eaten right out of the shell with a spoon. Here, again, no messy dishes to wash, unless you wanted to keep the shell for other uses. Later this developed into the New England squash or pumpkin pie, than which, when made by a first-class New England cook, there is no more ambrosial food.

A Frenchman summed it all up: "The Citruls" (squash or pumpkins) "of this Country are sweet... They are as big as our Melons; and their pulp is as yellow as saffron. Commonly they are baked in Ovens, but a better way is to roast 'em under the Embers as the Savages do. Their taste is much the same with that of the Marmelade of Apples, only they are sweeter. One may eat as much of 'em as he pleases, without fearing any disorder from 'em."

It is pumpkin time, my readers; go at 'em, and "without fear."

roughly along Rte. 20.

The principal argument advanced by the caucus committee is that "a scheme which encourages the opportunity for contests by providing two nominees for each vacancy would tend to increase the interest and participation in town government."

Under the so-called citizens' caucus, only one person is nominated. Any potential contestant must then file nomination papers and take a less favorable position on the ballot, if his papers are in order.

The selectmen, who ordered the study in the first place, disagree with the proposed shift to the town caucus system.

The committee recommended continuation of the present open town meeting setup -- as "more democratic".

But the committee conceded that eventual growth of the town might make the representative form better for the town. It argued:

"It has been the general experience of other towns that the representative town meeting members tend to remain in office until they choose to withdraw."

The fire report recommends a new central station (but not immediately) -- if Wellesley does not go along with plans for a jointly-owned and operated station on the line.

Excerpts From Findings Of Weston Fire Report

Last week, The Crier published the text of the conclusions of the Weston Fire Dept. study report. The following are excerpts from the report (which will not be distributed) for those attending the Oct. 10 public hearing on this and other topics:

The efficiency of the Weston Fire Dept. has been mentioned repeatedly by those with whom we have discussed the fire protection problem. (There is) a remarkable esprit de corps. The equipment is adequate and kept in good condition . . .

(The Rating Bureau) dispelled any idea of our attaining a saving for the taxpayers in the cost of fire insurance. In the matter of manpower alone, 25 full-time permanent men on each shift would be required . . . The cost of the requirements for water supply and mains is fantastic.

Weston benefits nothing from its good loss experience, as the underwriter only figures rates based on losses at the state level. There is little likelihood of their standards being lowered. . .

A discussion on the suggestion of a jointly owned and operated station in the area not fully covered on either side of the boundary line was briefly explored (by Weston and Wellesley representatives). It makes good common sense but opposition can be expected.

The situation is not unlike the towns which refuse to join in union high schools. They like to support their own high school football team.

The appointment of a committee from each town to thoroughly explore the problem could easily determine the feasibility, location and size of a joint station.

This would be in the direction recommended by Mr. Bond of the National Fire Prevention Bureau.

Only by increasing the size of firefighting units, covering larger areas and crossing town lines can greater efficiency and economy be procured. The most efficient fire-fighting unit in the United States is Los Angeles County which includes not only the City of Los Angeles but all the surrounding towns. They also enjoy the lowest fire insurance rates . . .

The present location of our fire station he (Mr. Bond) felt to be unfortunate -- first, on account of traffic congestion and second, because of the unavailability of sufficient space to properly house the apparatus and personnel.

He believes a permanent department of 12 men, supplemented by 50 call men, would be adequate at the maximum growth of the town.

Each call man would be on call for only eight hours in any one day -- and would be paid while working, plus an annual salary of $500.

It can readily be seen that the cost of such a service would be much less than a larger permanent force . . .

In the event that no mutual arrangements of any kind can be made with Wellesley, the minority of the committee feels that eventually two new fire stations will be required, one located south of the Post rd. and the other north . . .

However, none of the committee consider the matter sufficiently pressing at the present time to start immediate construction, in view of the high efficiency of the department and the town's heavy current indebtedness. Purchase of locations (for one or two stations) should be made in the not distant future (if no mutual ties with Wellesley can be agreed upon) . . .

Suburban fire departments are organized and developed principally for the extinction of house fires . . . The question then comes down basically to "What is a reasonable time for homeowners to wait for assistance from the fire department?"

It should be assumed that the response will be with adequate equipment and manpower to successfully combat any house fire.

The average running time to fires (now) appears to be about five minutes (except near the Wellesley line) where there are are records indicating that under adverse conditions, such as heavy traffic or snow and ice, runs have taken as much as 15 minutes.

This obviously creates an unfavorable situation and one that should be examined carefully.

Proposals have been made from time to time that a small fire station be located in the southern part of town manned by two men per shift and not more than two pieces of apparatus.

Aside from the cost, which is estimated at a minimum of $2 on the tax rate, there are further inherent difficulties.

The quicker response in the area would be made by one piece of apparatus and two men which, under no circumstances, could be considered either adequate equipment or adequate manpower.

The chief, additional apparatus and men arrive five minutes later from the central station to back up the early response. A confused situation immediately arises at the fire and, in the meantime, the balance of the town is inadequately covered.

The committee, therefore, does not favor a small station . . .

What about the loss of life resulting from fire or otherwise?

It should be the function of the police to handle emergencies other than fire. Police cruisers are now equipped to handle such cases and are much more mobile than the heavy fire apparatus.

Historically, there has been no loss of life resulting from fire in Weston within the last 50 years -- maybe longer. Perhaps we have been lucky. The building code . . . has precluded construction of homes without fire stopping and other provisions . . . Elimination of space heaters (has helped, as has the Fire Prevention Bureau within the fire department) . . . Exposure to fire and loss of life resulting from fire has not increased in proportion to the number of new housing units since the greatest hazards exist only in the older houses.

(Extra running time on the longer runs) should not be overlooked, nor the occasions when fire is not discovered promptly . . .

The solution to this problem comes down to a matter of judgment and experience -- with cost lurking in the background . . .

Nearly 'Gettysburg' in '61; Battle Cries Alike: Caution

By SOUTHWORTH LANCASTER

October 1 - 7, 1861

THE NEWS: Oct. 1 - Immediate invasion of North is urged by Gens. Joe Johnston and Beauregard at top-level conference at Manassas, provided present Confederate force in Virginia can be increased to 60,000 drilled soldiers with necessary supplies and transport. President Davis, asserting that this would require a risky diversion of forces from other areas, ruled against any large-scale offensive in 1861 . . .

Oct. 4 - Brig. Gen. W. T. Sherman, holding advanced positions beyond Muldraugh's Hill, Ky., with about 8000 men, reports that Confederate Gen. Buckner opposes him with 14,000 men and can cut Union communications with base at Louisville . . .

Oct. 5 - Attempting to regain Hatteras Island, held by Federals since August, Confederates force withdrawal of an Indiana regiment but are themselves driven off by a counter-attack supported by naval guns . . . Rumors in Richmond say that a Union amphibious attack on Port Royal may be expected . . .

Oct. 6 -- Gen. McClellan says privately that "a long time must elapse" before he can mount a serious offensive in Virginia . . .

Oct. 7 - Major Gen. Rogert M. Anderson, commanding Department of Cumberland at Louisville, Ky., resigns because of ill health

BEHIND THE NEWS: The Manassas conference, often overlooked by historians, placed the South on the defensive for many months to come.

Field commanders, hoping to capitalize on the prestige of the Bull Run victory, planned to strike McClellan before his strength had grown and rout the Army of the Potomac.

There was more than an even chance that a surprise attack would have succeeded and Davis was later criticized for undue caution, since at the moment no other regions were important to the Confederacy . . .

Supply shortages plagued both sides. The South possessed barely 150,000 weapons for its entire army and was short of transport.

However, the North had lost the arsenal at Harper's Ferry and the remaining government factory, at Springfield, could produce only 1200 rifles per month.

Private industry, which later did a good job, was only just getting into production.

Feverish buying in Europe by Northern and Southern agents turned up a variegated supply of arms, some good and some very bad.

Sizeable captures of Union weapons at Bull Run and Harper's Ferry greatly aided the Southern cause . . . The blockade of Southern ports, maintained by the Federal Navy, was to be backed up by occupation of strategic coastal forts and islands.

Fortress Monroe already had its blue-clad garrison. Hatteras Island being a later step. Time would show whether these positions were properly used . . .

Each side at this stage of the game tended to over-estimate its opponent's strength.

While Sherman was placing Buckner's strength at more than double its real size -- one of his few bad guesses -- Buckner was complaining to Richmond that he himself was badly out-numbered . . .

Gen. Anderson never recovered from his experience at Fort Sumter, and did not desire the Cumberland command. His retirement threw the post to the ranking subordinate, Gen. Sherman, who didn't want it either. This was to start a chain of difficulties later on.

Franklin Roosevelt's first national post: Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Andrew Jackson set the pattern for strong presidents, 1828-36.

Abraham Lincoln was the 16th president.

Sudbury Woman's Club Fashion Show Tuesday

SUDBURY -- Latest fall fashions for the man of the family as well as women, teens and children will be modeled at the Harvest Moon Fashion Show, sponsored by the Sudbury Women's Club next Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. at the junior high auditorium.

Tickets available for this Scholarship Fund benefit show are available at Sudbury Drug, Town Line Hardware or at the door, according to Mrs. Joseph Rose, chairman of the affair.

Classic and chic clothes, including sportswear, coats and cocktail dresses, from Kennedy's of Shoppers' World will be shown. New fall hats to compliment each costume will be from Dorothea's in Shoppers' World.

Bob Phillips will entertain at the organ. Mrs. David Anton of Sudbury will do the commentary for women's clothes and Fred Alibrandi of Kennedy's for the men's fashions.

Abraham Lincoln spoke on both sides of the slavery question in the Lincoln-Douglas debates.

Weston Fire Dept Open House

WESTON -- The Weston Fire Department in observance of National Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 8 - 14, will hold open house, rain or shine, Sunday afternoon, from 1 through 4, at which time the public is invited to visit Fire Department Headquarters.

Children will be welcome, but must be accompanied by an adult. On display will be the departments six pieces of firefighting apparatus, and the fire chief's car, along with many of the specialized tools used by the department. All will be exhibited and explained by the firefighters themselves.

An actual demonstration of some of the apparatus in action will be staged between 4 and 5, weather permitting.

"Overheated heating pad in bed" was given as the cause of a recent fire. Heating pads should be in good repair and carry an Underwriters Label, "U.L.", especially when used on invalids.

High School Science Quizzes Begin Tonight

FRAMINGHAM -- This fall a series of high school science quizes will again be held in the Framingham area.

The program will be sponsored by the New England School Science Advisory Council for the purpose of stimulating scientific interest at the high school level, and for the purpose of providing contact and cooperation between the high school students and various professional scientific societies.

Dr. Horst G. Langer of the Dow Chemical Co., chairman, has announced the following plans for the series.

First, a schedule of local contests has been set up to determine the winners from this area.

Each of these contests will be broadcast from WKOX on Sunday at 3 beginning next Sunday.

This year a modification of the system of play-offs will allow each team to play at least twice whether or not it loses the first quiz. Two wins will guarantee a team a quarter-final play-off.

The local winners will appear on TV, playing against the winners from several other greater Boston communities.

The series will get underway tonight (Thursday) when Hopkinton and Ashland will vie for honors at the Hopkinton High School. Dr. Langer will moderate the quiz.

The second contest will be held Oct. 10 when Wayland High School plays host to the Marlboro team.

A tentative schedule of the first series has been announced:

Week of Oct. 16 - Framingham H.S. vs. Marian H.S.

Week of Oct. 23 - Natick H.S. vs. Wellesley H.S.

Week of Oct. 30 - Westboro H.S. vs. Algonquin H.S.

Week of Nov. 6 - Lincoln-Sudbury H.S. vs. Weston H.S.

Great Books Study Starting in Weston

WESTON -- The second year of the Great Book discussions will start next Tuesday (place and time to be determined) and meet every other week thereafter -- on a day to be agreed upon by members of the group, according to Mrs. Robert Guest (TW 3-0606) from whom information may be obtained.

This year's study will include Ecclesiastes, Mill "On Liberty; Kant "Perpetual Peace"; Shakespear's "Hamlet". The program is under the auspices of the Great Town Engineer Needed?

Bent Av. Rhubarb in Making Over Boundaries

WAYLAND -- A real rhubarb is still in the making from all indications at the Monday night hearing before the Selectmen on proposed betterments to Bent av. from West Plain st. to the end.

This is the second attempt at an agreement between the town and residents of this area. The next round will be held in two weeks after another survey of the area by the Brooks Engineering Co.

Deeds held by the resident of Bent av. do not coincide with those on the town atlas. The Brooks firm has made two surveys and still has not come up with a satisfactory plan. Signatures were not forthcoming to release the "land necessary for laying out, grading and construction of said road and give the town the right to slope or erect a wall upon our remaining land to such an extent as proper construction of said road may require," as the document reads.

As a result of inaccurate drawings of the area there has been some talk of an article being inserted in the Town Warrant to vote for a Town Engineer who can give full time to settlement of matters of thi nature.

The majority approval was given for the plans presented for betterments to Sunset rd. from Main st. in Cochituate to Crest rd. Final plans will be drawn up prior to a final hearing before the Town Meeting.

Dominic Strazzulla, doing business at 31 Main st., Cochituate, as Dom's Cleaning and Tailoring, was informed this week in a letter from Ronald H. Wood, agent for the Board of Health, that permission for Mr. Strazzulla to connect with the Natick sewage system must be cleared with the Board of Public Works in Natick.

If this permission were to be granted, he would then be entitled to consideration by the local Board of Health and Selectmen. There is a question raised by Road Comm. Charles Peters as to whether the M.D.C. is not also involved because Natick is part of this system and, in the absence of any local sewer commissioners if the road commissioners would not be part of the final decision. According to Mr. Peters, the town by-laws state that if there are no sewer commissioners, the road commissioners are to act in their stead.

Application of Town Line Hardware, Inc. to sell shotguns and rifles was discussed. No action was taken.

Selectmen agreed to post no hunting signs behind the high school. Other signs on school properties have been posted, according to Mr. Peters.

A complaint from George Nolan of Old Connecticut Path concerning certain nuisances by his neighbor, Arthur Schofield were discussed briefly. A letter from Homer MacDonald to the Selectmen concerning the matter was read.

L.B.A. Supper, Oct.11

WAYLAND -- The Ladies' Benevolent Assn. are serving supper at the Trinitarian Congregationa Church, Wednesday, Oct. 11 at 7 p.m.

The speaker will be Rev. Lionel Whiston. All women of the church are urged to attend this interesting supper meeting.

For reservations call Mrs. Waldo Russell, EL 8-2903 or any circle chairman.

Something About Birds

By CHARLOTTE E. SMITH

WESTON -- Great blue herons have been reported by C. B. Boutell (9/19), and C. E. Smith (9/26); and a killdeer was seen 9/27 in the field behind the MacCleave home on North Ave. (MacCleave & Smith). The D.R.Davidsons saw a flock of several dozen mourning doves (9/24) on the grounds of the new Weston High School; Mrs. A. S. Fales heard a screech owl early in the A.M. of 9/26.

An immature yellow-billed cuckoo was found dead in woods near his home on Conant Rd., by H. L. Ogilvie. The bird was extremely thin and still showed a few pin feathers on the head. On 9/23 M. Davidson saw an adult pileated woodpecker with an immature in the Golden Ball Rd. area where these birds have nested since 1955. Migrant phoebes have been reported by L. S. Lawson (9/19) and C. E. Smith (9/24); and a flock of 29 migrating blue jays was seen at 8:30 A.M. on 9/28 by Dr. W. A. Elliston, South Ave., Mrs. J. L. Whittenberger, Gun Club Lane, reports an adult male bluebird in the midst of the downpour accompanying "Esther" on 9/21. A large flock (40 or more) of adult and immature cedar waxwings eating choke-cherries was seen on 9/24-25 by the Martells, October Lane.

Migrating warblers have been very much in evidence: first parulas (9/22) and first myrtles (9/23), Smith; blackpolls and pines in good numbers (a pine was found stunned by flying into a window on 9/23 --Mrs. H. B. Atkins, King's Grant Rd.; another Cape May on 9/22 (Smith); and a flock of at least a dozen redstarts on 9/22 (Lawson).

A male rose-breasted grosbeak was reported by Mrs. H. M. Mosher, Summer St., during the week of 9/18; and adult males (color-banded in May) were seen on 9/19 (Fales) and 9/22 (Smith). Both had been regular feeder visitors all summer but had not been seen since the end of July. A slate-colored junco was reported on 9/26 (Fales), and first white-throated sparrow on 9/27 (Smith).

There is an article -- The Migration of "Angels" -- about the radar study of bird migration (mentioned here recently) in the October issue of Natural History magazine, by Dr. W. H. Drury, Jr., Research Director of Mass. Audubon Society, who is in charge of the project.

sequences can be very, very terrific."

URA member Laurence Fordham suggested that:

"We want the money so we can go ahead and get these answers," to which Mr. McEnroy answered,

"We've hired Mr. Morton Braun as our guide and authority. He should know. Already we have had several "windshield appraisals and just another won't help."

Selectman Frank Tarr summed up the feelings of many by saying:

"I think you are all putting the cart before the horse. First we should appoint the committee of citizens. Then we should meet with them and everyone concerned with the area in question.

"We should present the Town with an approved plan and then petition the government for an advance to put these preliminary plans to work."

In answer to Mr. Tarr's pointed question: "Just what does it look like in dollars and cents to do this job?" no definite answers were offered although sums ranging from $100,000 to $1,000,000 were bandied about.

"Who approves the bills of this Authority?" Frank Tarr asked and was told that the money would be available to the Authority according to a budget approved by the government.

To quote Mr. McEnroy: "We are very confused at the present time . . ."

This is the first time that the workable program has seen the light of day before a town board.

None but the renewal authority members had seen the rport -- and they only briefly.

The Crier will attempt to clarify this for its readers.

Vacation Friendship Brings 2 Mexican Girls Here for Year

By HARRY PATTERSON

WESTON -- Two young ladies from South of the Border are spending a year in this town studying, learning about American family life and customs and, incidentally, helping to cement the bonds of friendship between the United States and Mexico.

Their names are Lilia Beatriz Torres Novarro and Guillermina Torres Novarro. Lilia, 15, is a sophomore at Weston High School. "Guille", 17, is a junior.

They came to Weston at the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. James Wilcock, who met them while vacationing in Acapulco last spring, and they are living in the households of two Weston families.

Their father is an accountant, musician and music teacher, while their mother takes care of their brother and two sisters in a modest apartment on the outskirts of the city.

Lilia, an art student, plans to continue studying when she returns to Mexico; but Guille, who has already worked a year as a secretary looks forward to getting another good job with an airline, perhaps.

They enjoy such sports as water skiing, swimming, basketball and tennis. And everywhere they go their soft, musical voices, ready smiles and quiet manners bring them friends.

Recently they were asked if they were having a good time here. Lilia grinned and cried: "Si! Si! Yes -- very good time!" Guille, more poised, added: "Oh, yes - mighty good!"

Nancy Post Engaged

WAYLAND -- Mr. and Mrs. James Otis Post of Old Sudbury rd., Wayland, announce the engagement of their daughter Miss Nancy Post, to Mr. Dexter Arnold Olsson of Plymouth. Miss Post attended Concord Academy, Beaver Country Day School and the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Walter B. Clifford and the late Mr. Clifford of Boston and of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Otis Post of Morristown, N.J.

Mr. Olsson graduated from Phillips Academy, Andover and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, '57.

Local Church Director on T.V.

WAYLAND -- Mr. Donald Ehat, Religions Educational director at the Trinitarian Congregational Church is one of eight New Englanders chosen to appear on Ch.2's "Dynamics of Leadership" each Wednesday at 8:30 P.M. Oct. 4 through Nov. 29.

Mr. Ehat and other members of the studio group will demonstrate problems of group organization and leadership, under the expert guidance of Dr. Malcolm Knowles, associate professor of education in the Boston University School of Education.

Members of organizations throughout Massachusetts will be watching in homes, churches and public halls and at the conclusion of each WGBH - TV broadcast, these groups will discuss and analyze the material presented.

Civil Defense —

so awesome that they are difficult for most of us to accept.

"Yet accept them we must. We must overcome our natural reluctance to admit such possibilities."

There is no foreseeable future when Civil Defense won't be "a part of our normal way of life," he continued.

But Mr. Gallagher pointed out:

"If Civil Defense is seen as such a continuing responsibility, to be planned for and worked for on its own merits, we can create and perfect the machinery that will help us withstand an enemy attack--and recover."

One practical sign of self-help is the signing up of 36 persons for a 10-hour course in first aid at the Parmenter Health Center more than had been expected. More classes will open up after this, Mr. Gallagher stressed.

The idea involved:

Only just so many professional medical persons but if in an emergency these doctors and nurses can be parceled out in one or twos to work with first-aid-trained laymen, the chances of survival are increased.

"I think that's just common sense," said Mr. Gallagher. "Every family owes it to itself to become its own nurse or doctor. Even without a bomb, that's a help isn't it ?"

One big question unanswered: tax policy.

The Wayland assessors simply cite the statement of Edward Wilson of the State Tax Department:

"There is no present exemption in respect to the construction of a fallout shelter and therefore, at the moment, the law provides for their taxation.

"It is, however, my understanding that legislation will be considered (next year) which would exempt from taxation fallout shelters which are limited to this purpose and which meet approval as to design and construction of the Civil Defense organization."

Mr. Wilson is the leading local tax authority in the state.

Best bet: tax deduction to the extent that the shelter is only a shelter and not a playroom or hideout for harried fathers.

There was no extimate of cost that was hard and fast: too many variations. But a shelter for four in the basement could be done by the family for about $250, Mr. Gallagher said.

Outside shelter, done by one contractor (8 by 10 feet), suitable for six, $1600.

No solution for the moisture problem has been found. This could be important in the case of a transistor radio which, it has been shown, picks up moisture and runs down its batteries as moisture builds up.

Also--no home warning device has yet been perfected.

YOU, YES YOU, are the most common cause of FIRES!

Last year, in the United States alone, an estimated 2,000,000 fires resulted in losses estimated at $1,541,000,000 . . . not to mention a tragic loss of lives that can never be replaced! Incredible as it seems, most of these fires were caused by people like you . . . average citizens who wouldn't dream of starting a fire deliberately, but who just got careless. Neither you nor your country can afford this wasteful loss of lives and property — be sure you don't give fire a place to start!

AND AWAY WE GO for 25 yards, with Wayland's Ken Houghton carrying. BUT . . . Ken's near-touchdown run ended in rough tackle, twisted ankle and a fumble recovered by Marshfield. Wayland did all right though -- 36-6 in first game. (Peter Fink Photo)

Wayland Wins 36-8; Home Saturday Vs. Lynnfield

WAYLAND -- Off and flying . . . Wayland High's football fortunes started with a bang last Saturday with a 36-8 win over Marshfield High.

The one big flaw -- especially since Wayland meets the Lynnfield champs this Saturday -- was the loss of Steve Kruse on the opening kickoff and of co-captains Ken Houghton and Bill Morris.

The injuries: Houghton, a sprained ankle and Morris, torn muscle in the thigh, and Kruse, a sprained back which may sideline him for most of the season.

Wayland starting lineup:

Le -- Kent; lt -- Myers; lg -- Hazard; c -- Arnold; rg -- Duane; rt -- Ferrante; re -- Morris; qb -- Perodeau; lh -- Houghton; rh -- Kruse; fb -- Bova.

Scoring: TD -- Kent - 2; Daly, Houghton, Perodeau, Henderson (Marshfield; PAT -- Kent 2(pass); Houghton (rush), Davis (rush).

Lynnfield Stops Weston – 14-0

WESTON -- Lynnfield, after all. That was too much for a game Weston High eleven which fell before the Class D champs, 14-0 in a hard-fought game last Saturday in Lynnfield.

Lynnfield put over two quick scores in the second period --one by DeBella on a flat pass that carried him 20 yards and the second on Quarterback Mucica's fumble-rumble which took him six yards.

Weston nearly got right back in the swim with Buddy Foster's 40 yard pass play that saw Steve Drowne make it to the Lynnfield 30 -- just as they blew the whistle to end the first half.

Coach George Harris' team dominated the second half play but couldn't get closer than 15 yards out and left guard Dick Evans received a neck injury which may keep him out for two weeks.

This Saturday at 2, it's Ashland -- and maybe on the new home field.

Both teams looked good in last week's tilt and many ranked them both the equal of any of the Class A, B, C teams -- but it's still the final score that counts.

Starting lineup: le -- R. D'Antonio; lt -- R. Aker; lg -- D. Evans; center -- T. Herrick; rg -- P. French, co-captain; rt -- P. Rivotski; re -- R. Hills; qb -- B. Foster; lh -- R. Trowbridge; rh -- S. Drowne; fb -- W. Rizzo, co-captain.

The dump is open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. every day but Wednesday when it remains open until 8 p.m. or sunset, whichever is later.

WESTON -- Boys interested in intramural sports have an opportunity to enjoy supervised play every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon near the field goal in the rear of the Weston Jr. High School.

Under the supervision of Mr. Phillip A. Wicky, seventh and eighth graders participate in touch football and basketball. As soon as the program has been fully organized, plans will be drawn for homeroom competition by grades.

7 Westonians Visit Rombas During Summer

WESTON -- The very fine and valuable affiliation between Weston and Rombas, France was again demonstrated by the visiting of Rombas by many Westonians this year who were traveling in Europe this past summer. The affiliation which has existed between the two towns for 12 years has made possible the exchange of high school students as well as the development of a great friendship between the two communities. This summer the following Westonians visited Rombas: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cummings, Miss Armine Avakian, Miss Helen Angelo, Timothy McGettigan, Tad Crawford and George Marshall, former curate of St. Peter's Church.

There are 4230 miles of rivers and streams in Massachusetts.

Ohio entered the Union in 1803.

Keeping up with the Joneses of Weston takes some intellectual muscle, writes Columnist Howard Russell delving into genealogy -- on PAGE 4.

OFF TO A GOOD START on the new Weston High football field is Bob D'Antonio, snatching a pass from Ashland defenders for a 38-yard touchdown play. And THAT, Weston fans say, was the way to inaugurate a new field. Weston won, 20-0. Details on Page 16 (Photo by Jonathan Bump)

Weston Hearing Splits On Southside Station vs. New Central One

WESTON -- "The door is not closed" to a possible arrangement with Wellesley for fire protection to Weston's south side, Edward R. Langenbach of the Board of Selectmen said at the hearing held on Tuesday to consider the special fire committee report and recommendations.

Mr. Langenbach said that the selectmen have informally discussed the problems of mutual fire protection with Wellesley but no formal presentation has been made to the Wellesley board for paying for fire protection.

Wellesley, it is reported, has turned down flatly a Weston proposal for a joint fire station near the south side of Weston as well as a mutual aid pact without any exchange of money.

In a sparsely attended hearing at the Town House which was not representative either of the central area or the southside, sentiment appeared to be divided between making changes to the central station or building a new substation in the southside.

The special study committee headed by William R. Dewey Jr., in a report completed last December had made the following recommendations:

--A new centrally located fire station to serve the whole town. An area in the High School area has been proposed.

--Two stations, one north and one south of Rte. 20.

--No construction for the present, until some mutual aid plan can be worked out with Wellesley -- or abandoned.

--Purchase of one or two sites and sale of the present station when the location is rezoned, to help defray costs.

Mr. Dewey pointed out that main-

Sizable Residential Buffer Zone On Lab Site Acceptable to Dow

WAYLAND--Dow Chemical Co. is agreeable to a substantial "residential buffer zone" along Rice rd. if it can get the proposed site of its Wayland laboratory rezoned limited commercial.

This is the word from responsible Dow officials last week to the Wayland Planning Board. A depth of 150 feet along Rice rd. is mentioned.

At the same time, there were these other developments in the move by Dow Chemical to obtain a 26-acre site at the corner of Rice and Commonwealth rds. For a pure-research lab:

--The Planning Board is drafting an article for a special or regular town meeting...the article to leave it up to the town voters whether they want this area rezoned from residential to limited commercial.

--Whether it will be special or regular (March) town meeting is up to the Board of Selectmen who have the final say on all town meeting calls.

--The Planning Board has begun a series of meetings with interested parties in town to outline what is involved in the proposed rezoning.

Winter St. Extension Routes Get Preliminary Hearing Tuesday

WESTON--A preliminary hearing on the proposed Winter-st. extension will be held next Tuesday at 10:30 a.m. at the office of the Middlesex County Commissioners in Superior Courthouse, Cambridge.

No definite route has been set. And next Tuesday's hearing will do no more than decide if the commissioners think an extension is feasible--and to set a tentative route which will then by studied by engineers.

Before a final route is agreed upon by Waltham, Lincoln and Weston and the commissioners, there will be another hearing.

As of now, there is no firm agreement even as to a tentative route.

Weston is submitting a route that would start at Merriam st. and North av. and continue easterly along the southern edge of the Valley Pond Trust property (south of a slight hill on this land), crossing Conant rd. just north of the Lincoln line and thence eastward to Waltham.

One of the biggest problems:

Weston Crash Injures Five

WESTON -- Five persons were injured in a two-car crash here at 7:35 p.m Friday at the corner of Brown and Winter sts.

Taken to Waltham Hospital for treatment were:

--James Cazanas Sr., 36, of 130 Hickory rd., Weston, his wife, Alice, 34, and their two sons, James 9 and Nicholas 5. They were treated for cuts and bruises and released.

--Peter Pollock, 18, of 21 Bogle st. Weston, treated for bruises.

The Cazansas car received damage estimated at $1200. The entire

Police Team Plays Cupid, Gets Her to Church on Time

WESTON -- Police believe in Cupid, too..

Like last Saturday when this Arlington girl was desperate: her car broke down in Waltham about 9 a.m. -- just two hours before she was due in Worcester as a wedding attendant.

Waltham police called Weston police -- and Weston police called Sudbury -- and Sudbury called Marlboro with this message: If she can catch the 10 a.m. bus from Marboro . . .

With a fast switch from cruiser to cruiser (four times, we think), she made it to Marlboro with moments to spare -- and as she breezed into Worcester on the bus, she was singing: "And they got me to the church on time . . ."

Last Minute Here Already: Get Sticker

BOSTON -- Don't be silly... you have only two days left (if you're reading this on Thursday) if you want to get your motor vehicle sticker on time.

Registrar Riley, Weston Police Chief Frank Shaw and Wayland Police Chief Ernest Damon say their officers will be checking laggard motorists first thing next Monday morning.

Hurry Call Leaves Firemen in a Fog

WAYLAND--Wayland firemen made the call Tuesday, just as quickly as they got the alarm at 9:15 a.m.

When they arrived at Ripley's Orchard on Draper rd., scene of a stubborn underground fire several weeks ago, there was smoke all right.

But on second look--by firemen and the fire-anxious nearby resident--it turned out to be just an early morning mist lying low on the meadow. Firemen were just as glad.

FIVE PERSONS INJURED in this Friday night accident at Winter and Brown sts., Weston. An estimated $1200 damage was caused to car on left. The other had to be towed away. (Larry Forman Photo)

WESTON -- The United Nations dinner will be held Tuesday, Oct. 24, at a different location. Now it's at the new Weston High School cafeteria, according to General Chairman Theodore Jones.

Foreign students from Wellesley, Regis and Brandeis have been invited to attend the dinner by Mrs. William Elliston, foreign student chairman. It is expected that enough students will attend to permit at least one to be seated at each table.

Nicholas Nyary, finance chairman of the U.N. committee, is accepting donations for the fund which annually sends a group of Weston High Schol students to New York to visit the United Nations.

He can be reached at TW 4-9095.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

Keeping Up With The (Weston) Joneses

Genealogy can be a fascinating study, even to others than your own family, provided you don't let it run away with you.

Take the Jones family of Weston. That name Jones doesn't sound especially distinguished, does it? Of course: I was acquainted with some of the Weston Jones', knew a little about the old Golden Ball Tavern, and of Jones House at the center, the community meeting place.

But some years ago I ran onto a long article in a western publication about one of the Weston Jones family who had emigrated to Illinois a century ago, with an air photograph of a beautiful level tract of farm and forest still occupied by Jones'.

When I began to write this column for The Crier, I read again in Col. Lamson's "History of Weston" about old Col. Elisha Jones, a leading citizen, selectman, and representative to the General Court, who died in 1775 a couple of months before the Revolution: also about Capt. Isaac Jones, the "wicked Tory" who sheltered a British spy just before the Battle of Lexington.

Not long after, browsing through Grace Greylock Niles' "Hoosac Valley," I found that in 1762 Col. Elisha Jones of Weston, father of fourteen sons and one daughter, became one of the four original proprietors of East Hoosuck Plantation in the Berkshires, now Adams and North Adams.

Eleven years earlier, he had bought a thousand acres in what is now Pittsfield, of which the founder, Col. Wm. Williams, was son of the minister who organized the parish church in Weston back in 1709.

One of old Col. Elisha's sons, Israel, built a house at East Hoosuck and brought to it Alithea, daughter of Rev. Samuel Todd, who was a father-in-law brilliant enough to have graduated from Yale at fifteen.

This Israel of Adams became a deacon of the Hoosac church, a leading man in Berkshire County and a worker for American independence; whereas one of his brothers, at the beginning of the Revolution, like so many Tories and other of the Jones family, sailed away to Canada, and the General Court ordered his North Adams mill property to be sold.

Next, in a biography of Thoreau, I learned that Mary, old Col. Elisha's one daughter, was the grandmother of that illustrious Concord native, Henry D. Thoreau, as we noted in a recent column.

When I mentioned these things to general Ralph Jones, present occupant of Weston's Golden Ball Tavern, he was so kind as to let me examine a yellowed copy book containing a manuscript "History of the Jones Family," set down a century and a third ago.

Would you like to know some of the things I found there?

Col. Elisha's brother, Josiah, it seems, sold his Weston farm and moved to Stockbridge in the Southern Berkshires, where his daughter Abigail became the second wife of Col. Williams, father of the founder of Williams College.

Their daughter Abigail became Mrs. Sargent, wife of the local pastor and minister to the Stockbridge Indians; not to mention the memmunities; not to mention the mem- and when this couple's children were grown, their daughter Electa was the choice of the famous Mark Hopkins as his wife.

Mrs. Sargent must have been an attractive woman, for she made a second marriage to Brigadier Dwight.

By him she had a single daughter, who when mature became the bride of Judge Sedgwick of Stockbridge, and the progenitress of Sedgwich clan of writers.

In fact this old Jones family chronicle is studded with the names of distinguished people.

Though written down early in the nineteenth century, in vey cursory examination I counted mention of at least nine college graduates, mostly Harvard and Yale, four physicians, four judges.

One girl married a Yale president, another a vice president of Williams, and at least four married ministers.

Of the Tory Jones' who sailed away to Halifax, they and their offspring furnished members of Parliament, magistrates, military officers and clergymen both in Canada and in England.

Other Jones scions went south to the Carolinas and Kentucky, north into Vermont, east into Maine, and west into New York State and the Western Reserve. Not all of these became notable: the chronicler speaks of one branch where "There was a Number of Daughters in the Family the history of whom is not interesting."

But a surprising proportion became sea captains, farmers and merchants, who, to quote the chronicler again, reached a "respectable" standing in their combers of the clan still resident in Weston, who include in their number a college professor.

Really, wouldn't it take a family of considerable brains and distinction to "Keep up with the Jonses?"

Letters To The Editor

Death of Miss Hamlen

To the Editor:

It may be of interest to the members of the Historical Society as well as to the senior residents of Wayland, that Miss Elizabeth Perkins Hamlen, older sister of the late Paul M. Hamlen, died on Sept. 30th after a short illness.

She would have been 89 years old on Oct. 11th (b. Oct. 11,1872 d. Sept. 30, 1961).

She was the authoress of the History of Mainstone Farm which I read to the members of the Historical Society at two different meetings.

She was a real character, very modest and unassuming, always ready to provide a helping hand -- a good geneologist, a hard worker either as a medical secretary to various doctors in Boston, or as a volunteer worker on different charitable enterprises which interested her.

She was probably the nicest person whom I will ever know, with a rare sense of humor, a contagious chuckle and delightful smile. Also, very independent--perhaps stubborn is the right word; she has accomplished a great deal of good in her own quiet way.

She is survived by a sister, Mrs. Daniel K. Catlin of St. Louis (Gertrude Hamlen), two nieces and two nephews.

Sincerely yours,
Dorothy Draper Hamlen

Ed. note -- Many Wayland and Weston residents may remember the late Miss Hamlen as an occasional summer visitor at the farm and, years ago, as a skillful skater in these parts.

Forget Me Not

This is the time of year when the memories of summer fade away. But not the wonder that was Frances.

To Frances, even a worm was a miracle. So too a flower. It was amazing what she'd never known. And watching her perk up with each simple discovery made you discover a few things about yourself.

Frances was a pint-sized grownup at 9 -- wise, suspicious, naive, curious, now and then happy.

She was one of 21 youngsters who spent two weeks in the country last summer, courtesy of the New York Herald Tribune Fresh Air Fund -- and 21 Sudbury families.

They had a whale of a time. As a group, they got around. F x Trailer had them over for an afternoon. Ano his pool and ponies and treats were thrilling for these youngsters off the sidewalks of New York. They had a ball at Mainstone Farm, too.

But the real story was "at home".

Flowers you could cut! Amazing. Frances couldn't find enough. In her "home" there were all sorts of wild flower arrangements, selected and supervised by her during her stay. Real flowers!

And one day, they were going fishing. Worms ? What are they? Amazing. They wiggle. They're alive. A hesitant smile crept over Frances' face. So wonderful. But only two weeks. Then deadpan again, her thoughts were on New York, her widowed mother and her six brothers and sisters. It couldn't last.

Mrs. Carl Liljestrand of Sudbury (HI-3-6740), Sudbury chairman, says Dr. Freddie N. Peterson of 234 Cochituate rd., Wayland (EL-8-2852), will be recruiting Wayland families next year as hosts for more youngsters from the tenements of New York. There's room for Weston families, too. Wellesley, Dover and Sherborn have been hosts for years.

All children are given a thorough medical check before being sent into local homes. The Herald Tribune foots their medical and transportation costs--unless the host does so, thus stretching the funds for more children to get off the sidewalks like Frances.

Frances nearly always kept that deadpan. But in little things, she "lived it up" : a turkey in the oven was a miracle, so was milk. And learning to ride a neighbor's bike. And picnics at the beach.

The only thing she couldn't stand was a bed of her own. Made her scared to be alone. She gave it up the first night.

You know, it wasn't that Frances was a brilliant girl, a "personality" or someone with gracious manners (she learned some basic ones, gladly). She was a wonder. How could anyone have seen so little! How could anyone find a miracle in a worm, a flower! Why not everyone?

You might be interested to know that when she gathered her meagre belongings for the return journey, she managed one of her rare smiles. No one could be sure if it was for those she was leaving behind or her mother she was going to see. But that was Frances -- a wonder in every sense of the word.

Emerson Hospital Calls for Menders

CONCORD -- The need for members for Emerson Hospital increases in the Fall season, according to Mrs. Julian Tolman who is in charge of seeing that the hospital linens are maintained in good condition. This service is one of the most important rendered by citizens of the hospital community and is one of the few which can be done in the home since all work is collected and delivered by Mrs. Tolman's committee.

Anyone interested in helping with this valuable work should call Mrs. Tolman at EM 9-4628. For those who dislike mending there is much new work to be done.

Firemen's Relief Assn. Explains

To the Editor:

For the previous eight years the Weston Firemen's Relief Assn. and the Weston Police Relief Assn. have conducted a joint annual ball for the purpose of raising funds for our respective organizations.

It has been the feeling of the Weston Firemen's Relief Assn. that this combined appeal was, and is, the fairest method of approaching the citizens of the Town for their support of our Relief groups.

This year the police Assn. has informed us that they no longer desire to conduct a joint appeal for funds and will hold their drive and annual dance in November.

We of the Weston Firemen's Relief Assn. wish to state that this decision does not have our support and that we feel it is not in the best interests of either department or the community itself.

We further wish to announce to those citizens who have so loyally supported us in the past that we will, of necessity, conduct our own appeal in the spring of 1962.

Hail to the Chiefs

No doubt you have read all the grlsly statistics that make their annual appearance during Fire Prevention Week . . . 6,000 home fire fatalities last year, 500,000 homes burned, losses of hundreds of millions.

This information is shocking and sobering. Yet, for Town Crier readers there is reason to be of good cheer. Few communities in the U.S. can boast the wonderful protection we receive here from our local fire departments. Regulars and volunteers work efficiently, speedily and heroically to save us from the trouble we bring on ourselves -- through carelessness with fire and fire hazards. Time and again thir skills and prompt action have spared llves and property.

"Thanks", we say, and "Hail to the Chiefs!" This year let's pledge to make their jobs easier -- by following fire preventlon rules and stopping fires before they start.

2 Weston High Seniors Qualify for Merit Awards

WESTON -- Two Weston High School seniors have been honored by the National Merit Scholarship competition and named semi-finalists in the annual qualifying examination.

Judith H. Hoagland and Jonathan Bump are among 10,000 seniors throughout the country who were named to be eligible for Merit scholarships, a financial stipend for each of four years of college study.

The two semi-finalists competed with students from more than 15,000 high schools in a test measuring educational development last March. They are part of a group which scored highest in Massachusetts.

Judith and Jonathan's Scholastic Aptitude Test results, which will be announced after the examination on Dec. 2, will determine their ultimate standing. If these performances, together with records of school citizenship and leadership qualities substantiate their earlier achievement, they may become merit scholars.

Stipends, distributed according to need, vary from $800 to $1500 annually for four years.

Merit Scholarships were established in 1955 with grants from the Ford Foundation and the Carnegie Corporation of New York.

Bloodmobile Visits Weston on Oct.20; Donors Needed

WESTON -- The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be in Weston on Friday, Oct. 20, at the First Parish Church (Unitarian) from 1 to 7 p.m. Appointments to give blood may be made by calling TW 4-4079.

Weston receives a number of credits for the next year based on the number of pints of blood collected during the bloodmobile visit. Having no industry with consequent regular bloodmobile visits, Weston relies on its citizens for blood donations. The more you give, the more credit Weston will have.

Last year all requests for blood aid by Weston residents have been met by the chapter.

Giving a pint of blood is an easy way to help save lives, and insure your own blood needs, officials point out.

Given a clean bill of health, a blood donation is in no way harmful to the donor, and cannot be compared to blood loss through accident or illness. We all carry between four and five quarts of blood, and the liquid lost during the donation of one pint of blood is replaced by the body in a matter of hours.

Who is eligible to give? Anyone 21 - 59 in good health and weighing 110 pounds or more, excepting those who have a history of malaria or jaundice.

Young people between 18 and 21 may donate blood if they have the written permission of a parent, or may donate without such permission if they are married or in the armed forces.

Don't donate if you have had surgery within six months or a pregnancy within a year.

"GROWING WITH QUALITY & SERVICE"

Speaking of the ultimate get-together of President Kennedy and Mr. K, someone wrote graphically: "the ultimate crunch." Doesn't that sort of lay it on the line? PRESH-ure.

And speaking of words: serendipity. Roll it off your tongue. The happy faculty of stumbling upon fortuitous circumstances. Or this one from the ads: "hangover dirt".

Or this one that always appears in the classifieds: "upholstery dirt cheap. "Well, we have a ready supply of that at home . . . after the urchins bolt through the living room.

Speaking of words: Nixon has just announced, which must be something like waiting for the other shoe to drop.

And already Mr. Knight has accused him of bribery. And Mr. Nixon has responded by reaching for a Gideon. Looks like the irresistible force has met the immovable object. Something's gotta give.

Speaking of books: Did you know that eight publishers now offer paperback editions of The Scarlet Letter?

Even the magazine publishers are getting into the book field: Life-Time will publish four million books this year, bringing it up among the top six book publishers. McCall's is looking around for a way to get on the gravy train.

Since 1958, there have been 20 new publishers in the paperback field. Everything from interior decorating to Henry Miller's "Tropic of Cancer" will soon be out in these Instant Books.

A cookout in May will wind up the schedule.

100 Years Ago ... in the Civil War — V

Bay Staters Get 'Paid' Touch Tag With Lee

By SOUTHWORTH LANCASTER

Oct. 8 - 14, 1861

THE NEWS: Sterling Price's Confederate force in Missouri began falling back to stronger positions following capture of Lexington last month. Union pursuit under Fremont continues sluggishly ...

Oct. 9 - 7 New York (Zouaves), holding outpost on Santa Rosa Island, off Pensacola, Fla., was routed by a surprise raid led by Brig. Gen. R. H. Anderson, but Confederates had to withdraw in face of reinforcements from nearby Fort Pickens . . .

Oct. 10 - McClellan tells Lincoln he expects to make a strong reconnaissance in force in a few days but adds, "Don't let them hurry me." . . . First Union ironclad gunboat, "St. Louis", was launched at Carondelet, Mo. . .

Oct. 11 - McClellan spent day looking at out-posts . . . Massachusetts troops received first U.S. pay for period up to Aug. 31.

Oct. 12 - Minor actions at Cameron, Mo., and Upton Hill, Ky.

Oct. 14 - Sherman informs Lincoln that Southern forces under Buckner in Kentucky amount to about 20,000 men.

BEHIND THE NEWS: Pompous and self-willed, Fremont's good intentions only emphasize his unfitness for important command . . . Anderson's attacking force numbered one thousand and if successful could have threatened the Union occupation of Pensacola and its harbor.

While its prompt retirement suggested a hit-and-run raid, its size hints at a more serious purpose which even today is not wholly clear. Anderson later won distinction as one of Lee's Lieutenants . . .

The blockade of Southern shores, with possession of certain key ports, was Gen. Winfield Scott's famed "Anaconda Plan", in which the Navy played a vital though unspectacular part. First signs of supply shortages in the South already began to appear. . .

Control of the Mississippi River was included in the Plan which called also for a fleet of river gunboats. James Eads, of bridge fame, and Samuel H. Pook were prominent in the project, the very newness of which caused agonizing delays . . . McClellan's aversion to definite action and his continual quarrels with Gen. Scott his repeated promises to do something and his failure to follow through were already causing distress in the North, though Lincoln remained unruffled. . .

Southern leaders, with a better appreciation of affairs in the East and of McClellan's potential, stood watchfully on the defensive, but there were many grumblings in Richmond over the lack of progress beyond the Alleghenies.

Robert E. Lee, commanding in western Virginia, was being outmaneuvered by Brig. Gen. John F. Reynolds, who held a field command under Maj. Gen. William S. Rosecrans.

A number of violent skirmishes took place, notably at Carnifex Ferry and Gauley Bridge, but Lee was denied favorable ground while Rosecrans, hampered by poor communications through rough country, was not strong enough to force the issue.

Weaknesses were noticed in Souther railroads. Fuel was no problem, for wood was universally used, but rails, car wheels, locomotive parts and lubricants became harder and harder to get.

The Southern railroad net consisted of over 100 separate lines, with varying track gauges and relatively few junctions, so that through movements without break of bulk could only be made by roundabout routes of excessive length. These factors accounted for many supply problems as the war proceeded.

MYSTERY MAN -- There goes Tony Bova, Wayland high back with a host of teammates (six running, one sprawling) going with him. He's got it made, but -- See if you can find the mystery man (from Lynnfield) who stopped him dead. Oh -- we'll teli you: that's his dark-jerseyed arm wrapping around Tony. Sorry -- that was the story of the game: good start but. Wayland lost, 39-0.

Lynnfield Buries Wayland, 39–0

WAYLAND -- The whole trouble was . . . plenty of traffic but ali of it was one way in the wrong direction.

Wayland High was steamrollered by the high-flying Lynnfield High, 39-0 -- but it might have been a different story had co-captains Bill Morris and Ken Houghton not been sidelined with injuries.

Now get this: Wayland had i0 first downs to Lynnfield's 6 but Coach Ralph Saivatti's gridders couldn't stop those long-running Lynnfield backs.

With three touchdowns in the second period, the visitors held a 28-0 lead at the half. And although they were slowed down in the second half, the margin was too great to erase.

Four times Wayland penetrated the Lynnfield 20 but on three occasions, Dwight Perodeau's passes were intercepted. Beradino, Bleiler and DeBeila are three names the local gridders would iike to forget. DeBella turned in an 87-yard run in the second period.

Coach Salvati hopes for the return of Houghton and Morris by this Saturday when the team travels to Maynard for a rough contest.

The lineup -- le-- Kent, Marini; it--Myers, Dusseault, Morrell, Phillips; lg--Hazard, Flannagan, Gary, Guethner; c -- Arnold, Brown; rg -- Duane, McIver; rt -- Ferrante, Thorp; re -- Young, Parker; qb -- Perodeau, Langley; ih--Richmond, Plump; rh -- Daly, DeMarini, Miiler; fb -- Reeves, Lufemina.

WHAT CAN YOU DO? -- Sitting out the Lynnfield game in mufti are injured co-captains Bill Morris (in jacket) and Ken Houghton, here watching a losing cause. With them (from ieft): Dick Muller, Steve Garry and Bob Ferrante.

Something About Birds

By CHARLOTTE SMITH

WESTON -- Fall migrants started moving again in earnest when the weather turned clear and cold with NW wind on Sept. 28-30, and a good variety of warblers was reported between Sept. 28 and Oct. 4: black-and-white (Lawson, Hayes, Noyes); parula (Hayes), yellow and black-throated blue (Davidson); myrtle (Smith); black-burnian (Hayes); black-throated green (Lawson); blackpoll (Smith, Hayes, Noyes); yellow palm (Focte) western palm (Hayes); ovenbird (R. & D. Blacklow, Derby); redstart (Perry). A Connecticut warbler was seen on 9/17 by Mr. & Mrs. R. M. Hills, South ave. -- the second record for Weston.

A great blue heron and a killdeer were seen at 80 Acres, Lexington. (Smith); Mrs. C. B. Ilsley, Shady Hill rd., says that a pair of wood ducks has re-appeared on her pond, and a male was seen at the Duck Feeding Area on 10/4 by W. R. Koe. H. Patterson, Conant rd., had a good look at a red-shouldered hawk on 9/28, and the Howers, Concord rd., have been hearing a screech owl recently.

Migrating phoebes were reported from 9/26 to 10/3 (Davidson, Lawson, Smith, Cummings), and a crested flycatcher was seen on 9/29 (Davidson). Mrs. W. Noyes, Webster rd., saw a red-breasted nuthatch on 10/4, and a single golden-crowned kinglet was heard on 10/1 and seen on 10/3 (Smith). A solitary blue-headed vireo was heard singing on 9/29 (Smith). Mrs. A. S. Fales says a catbird still comes to her feeder for currants and 3 brown thrashers were in her yard on 10/1. Wood thrushes were reported on 9/28. (Smith) and 10/1-3 (Foote); the bluebirds which nested at the Woodland School were seen again on 9/25 (Mitchell) 1. and Mrs. F. G. Goodale, Concord rd., heard several on 9/28.

In the late afternoon of 10/4, 2 male rose-breasted grosbeaks were seen eating flowering crab fruit (M. Gross), and purple finches have been reported (Davidson, Ilsley). Towhees were still migrating, and small groups of juncos were reported from 9/29 on (Carine, Hayes, Hills, Smith). Mrs. Goodale saw a white-throat on 9/29.

The "Bird of the Week" was a tufted titmouse seen by Mrs. L. M. Cugini on Sept. 28. It came with white-breasted nuthatches to her feeder.

Harold Wilson, Prohibition Raider And Anti-Liquor Crusader, Dies

WAYLAND -- They never kept Harold Wilson out when he wanted to get in.

And get in he did as Boston's top Prohibition officer, tagged "Three Gun" for his zealous ferreting out of illegal booze handlers -- and drinkers.

Funeral services were held Wednesday, Oct. 4, for Mr. Wilson who died in his 78th year at his home, 46 Davelin rd., Sunday, Sept. 30, where he had lived with his wife for several years.

He was twice suspended in Boston for his non-partisan raids on both Republican and Democratic political organizations living up the good life for all it was worth.

His most famous raid was on the old Quincy House where he confiscated several barrels of beer at the height of a political picnic attended by top political leaders.

And once, he left the judge talking to himself when he refused to tell the court how he'd gotten the key to enter and raid an exclusive social club. He was held in contempt of court.

For bribe-taking underlings he was a scourge. He fired them on the spot. And to make sure things got done, he did them himself. Almost daily he was out on raids.

After two years, this got to be too much and he was transferred out of Boston in 1922. One of his last "affairs" was his hauling of a carload of citizens into court because he swore he smelled liquor on their breath as they passed. Sorry, said the court: dismissed.

After he left the Federal service, he continued as a lecturer on temperance.

But before he left, he also saw service in Pittsburgh, Wilmington, Del. and in Indiana. In Pittsburgh soon after his dismissal in Boston, Mr. Wilson "did it again".

He raided the "Amen Corner" picnic, a major social event for Pittsburgh politicians -- and the fat was in the fire. Soon afterwards, he was transferred.

He was executive secretary of the Massachusetts Temperance League and the Foundation for Alcohol Education. A firm foe of liquor advertisements in the press, he campaigned for prohibition in Massachusetts through local-option vote.

Born in Kansas, Mr. Wilson was a graduate of Tufts where he starred in basketball, football and baseball.

He was past president of the Brown Class of the West Somerville Baptist Church, a member of Friendship Lodge of Masons and Caleb Rand Lodge of Odd Fellows in Somerville.

He leaves his wife, Mary (Burroughs); a son, Weston P. of Westwood; and a sister, Mrs. Eleanor Donlin of Detroit.

Interment was in Wildwood Cemetery, Wilmington.

Country Garden Club Opens Season

WESTON -- The Country Garden Club of Weston began it's 1961-1962 program with "an operation clean-up day" on the embankment of the Weston Memorial Pool on Sept. 27.

Under Mrs. Frank V. Best, civic chairman, the future community projects are the continuance of year round maintenance and general planting of the pool; a three way civic program with the other Weston-Garden Clubs in town beautification; holiday decorations of the Woodland and Country Schools and cleaning of undergrowth and wildflower planting for the Weston Forest and Trail Assn.

On Oct. 5, the first in a series of workshops was held at the home of Mrs. Alfred Backstrom in preparation for the Christmas sale. This sale will be held in conjunction with Mr. Harold F. Lindergreen's exciting lecture and demonstration on " Decor for Christmas" at St. Peter's Episcopal Church on Dec. 13. Tickets will be on sale sometime in Nov.

The club's first business meeting was held on Oct. 11 at the home of Mrs. Weston Howland Jr., Mrs. Arthur Reid, Mrs. Charles H. Abbott and Mrs. Robert G. Fitzgerald spoke on various aspects of conservation.

Foster, Trowbridge Lead Weston to 20-0 Ashland Win

WESTON -- Rock 'em and sock em--and Weston High's Wildcats did just that to Ashland High to inaugurate the new Weston High football field here last Saturday.

The final score, 20-0 but Coach George Harris' squad, led by Buddy Foster, made it look bigger than that to the home crowd.

The home team nearly scored in the opening minutes but was held on the one by the visitors but on the next exchange, Foster hurled one to Bob Trowbridge that was good for 35 yards and the first TD. Bud and Bob led the way in this victory.

It was the third period before the Wildcats could shake loose again. Bill Rizzo carried eight yards to the 48 and on the next play, Bob Trowbridge brought it to the visitors' 38 where a Bud Foster pass connected with Bob D'Antonio for the second TD. In the last period Foster made 20 to Ashland's 40 and Rizzo brought it to the 25 on a screen pass. A penalty placed it on the 10 and Foster skirted end for the score. Rizzo rushed for two points.

SATURDAY'S GAME: at North Reading, 2:30.

the starting lineup:

Le-R. D'Antonia; lt--Aker; lg--Herrick; c--Connolly; rg--French, co-captain; rt--Rivorski; re--Hill; qb--Foster; lh--R. Trowbridge; rh--Drowne; fb--W. Rizzo, co-captain.

Lincoln insists on the road going south of the hill on the Valley Pond land, so as to afford some privacy for this group's swimming pool.

Four pieces of property sold by the trust are involved in the Weston route. No houses are affected at any point by Weston's suggested route.

This route would carry through the James Anthony property in the trust lands about at the neck of his right of way.

Plan Board Seeking Town Meeting For Decision on Lab Site Proposal

"Public hearings do well," said Chairman Robert Charnock, "but to keep the public fully aware of what is involved in such matters, we've found it worthwhile to schedule smaller meetings where people can have some give and take on the subject."

One such meeting was held with opponents from surrounding residential areas this week. Other meetings are available by calling the town hall.

The Dow spokesman at a meeting with town boards on Sept.25 said the building and lab equipment would probably be worth about $8,000 at the start and might climb to as much as $2 million overall eventually when a maximum of 125 employees is forseen.

They cited this as a relief for the climbing Wayland tax rate which is now $86 and is expected to rise with each of two new school additions and other expenditures in the next two years.

The Dow spokesman were asked by Mr. Charnock on Sept. 25 if the company would be willing to have less than the 26-acre site rezoned limited commercial and the answer was: yes, a residential buffer strip along Rice rd. would satisfy the firm and probable be more acceptable in a residential zone.

Next probably steps in the move for rezoning:

--Public hearing on the proposed rezoning article. (This article is being framed so that the town meeting can vote to rezone any or all of the site.)

--At about the same time, the Selectmen would be expected to have a hearing on whether to call a special town meeting before the end of the year.

--Dow must decide soon to renew its option which runs out on Dec. 15 and which probably can not be exercised at that time because of necessary delays in town study of the matter.

--If the town meeting were to approve the rezoning, Dow would still have to apply to the Zoning Board of Appeals for a building permit and for approval of a site plan.

(As things stand now, Dow has not drawn up architectural plans because of the cost but its assurances to town officials have been such that it is expected its proposed building and site plans would be in order for possible acceptance by the Appeals Board. However, a decision on that would come from the board.)

--Dow's directors so far have authorized the purchase of a site if--it is rezoned and a building permit and site approval are obtained. This is the condition of sale.

--At least 21 days' notice must be given for any public hearing on the proposed article being drafted by the Planning Board--the same time that must be allowed for any hearing before the Appeals Board.

Proposal for Central Fire Station Draws Fire

tenance of a new station on the southside would cost about $50,000 a year, or $2 on the tax rate for an indefinite period.

On the other hand, he said that paid cooperation with Wellesley would cost approximately half that amount.

Mr. Dewey said that town cooperation of this type is new but it is coming.

Frederic S. Mann of the special fire study committee pointed out that a mutual aid deal with Wellesley would be beneficial to Weston since Wellesley has three fire stations within two miles of the Weston line.

Some of the southside Weston homes are as much as four to five miles from the present central fire station.

Henry Wheeler of the Planning Board pointed out that Weston's police headquarters are inadequate and urged that any fire station proposals consider housing both of these protection services.

The firemen, who live with the problem daily in Weston, argued for a southside station. Chief Maurice L. Upham forecast that before the end of 1962 over 200 houses will be built in the south section. Weston is a $69,000,000 corporation, he said, and only one central station with 13 men -- only three actually on a call are available to protect this huge valuation.

Comparable towns such as Lincoln, Wayland, Sudbury it was pointed out, have two fire stations to protect their homes.

Mr. Dewey again emphasized a recommendation of the study report which proposed to augment the fire brigade. He said the town should have two pieces of apparatus with eight men to answer each call -- four regular and four call men. "Attacking fire quickly with an adequate number of men" is the key to good protection, he said.

There was a note of economy in the air which made it apparent that augmenting the fire department without new construction would probably be favored.

Sentiment was overwhelmingly in favor of preserving the present traditional "open" town meeting instead of the representative town meeting proposal outlined by the Selectmen's Committee on Town Government. The committee, headed by Richard Field, reiterated its June 15 report favoring the open meeting. But Mr. Field pointed out that the ultimate growth of the town may "leave us no choice but to establish a representative town meeting."

Following a discussion of other portions of the town government report, a show of hands indicated that 60 percent of the townspeople at the hearing favored placing on the ballot a proposal that the town caucus method of selecting candidates for office be voted upon instead of the citizens' caucus which has been employed in Weston. Under the town caucus, two candidates would be selected for each town post, instead of one candidate as is now chosen at the present caucuses. Feeling was that the town caucus would introduce more contests for posts in town elections.

Urban Renewal Still Rural Confusion for Wayland—Queries Grow

WAYLAND -- Rural confusion is still the best description for urban renewal in Wayland.

Is the right map being used?

Are the facts about Dudley Pond on record anywhere?

Can the Harris report be jettisoned?

Is the Dudley Pond area being misrepresented to the town and Federal government?

To get the story straight -- the Wayland Civic Assn. sat down with the Planning Board at the Town Hall Monday night. Sorry -- nothing settled.

"Look," said John Karman of Lakeshore dr., "we're told the Harris report used the 1959 town atlas for its report to the Federal government.

"But on the map they (the renewal authority) has, they still show Adelaide av. and Lakeshore dr. coming together at a sharp angle -- but that hasn't been so for 12 years. They cut off that corner 12 years ago."

The point: If this mistake showing crowded road conditions is accepted as fact, what other "mistakes" have been made.

Mrs. Casey, speaking for the civic association:

"If this is what the rest of the town thinks of the Dudley Pond area, when they read this report, we're going to be out of luck down there."

Her point: Throw out the Harris report as it applies to living conditions, road conditions, drainage, etc. and start afresh.

"The rest of the people of Wayland" was her common complaint.

"They don't understand what our problems are and how much we do to improve our property."

One thing was determined: the Harris report has not been approved by the State Department of Commerce only as to performance of a contract. Harris' contract is with the state -- with town and federal money involved.

Chairman Robert Charnock told the assembly of about 70 persons that twice the approval of the $500 Increase Sought For All Wayland Teachers

WAYLAND -- A request for a $500 across-the-board increase for Wayland school teachers was placed before the School Board at its meeting Monday.

Based on the 140 teachers in the system, this would amount to about $70,000 as an appropriation.

The committee took it under advisement after Chairman John Arnold questioned the salary committee on the background for the move.

The School Board must consider this along with its other appropriations which it will seek at the March meeting.

The board has been faced, as have many progressive suburban communities, with the need to meet rising salary schedules elsewhere.

In a survey of teachers as to why they might leave, the salary committee said it found that

--Twenty-five percent might leave from overwork, 30 percent for better pay and 15 percent for advancement possibilities and 22 percent because of family moving.

--As against the committee's estimate that 70 percent might leave for reasons of better conditions or possibilities elsewhere, Supt. Edward J. Anderson said it had been his experience that fully 50 percent of the teaches leaving this system do so for moving, marriage or pregnancy.

The average work week of Wayland teachers, the salary committee said was 54.8 hours.

Of this 35.8 hours are devoted to school work, 2.2 hours weekly for professional improvement, 15.9 hours in home preparation and .9 hour on PTA and similar work.

Weston Chief to Ask Town For Second Station Site Nov. 10

WESTON -- Purchase of land for a second fire station on the southside will be sought in the special town meeting on Nov. 10, Fire Chief Maurce Upham declared this week.

"I am going before the selectmen to ask that that article be inserted," said the chief, "and if that is refused, I believe we have the signatures to have the item placed on the warrant for Nov. 10.

"After that, I will ask the regular town meeting in March to appropriate funds for plans and specifications for a station."

And the amount: $15,000 for the site, or thereabouts.

The site proposed: South av. and Ash st.

Chief Upham said he felt the Oct. 10 hearing showed support for a second station as against the committee's proposal for a new central station only -- after further consultations with Wellesley.

As for conferring with Wellesley, Chief Upham said this is impossible:

"Wellesley can't give us any more mutual aid than now without a special act of the legislature to set up a fire district," said the chief.

A fire district was one proposal made by one of the experts consulted by the study committee.

Zoning Laws—Yes or No? Nolans Want to Know

WAYLAND -- Give the Nolan brothers, George and Frank credit for trying.

When they want to find out just what are the bylaws they don't take no for an answer, so they told the Board of Selectmen Monday night.

Neighbor Arthur Schofield is conducting a business in a residential zone, they said, because he is parking his dump truck, his pickup truck and his 10-wheel Mack truck on his property.

How about that, they asked? Against zoning laws?

Not illegal, Selectman George Lewis assured them.

"A man who conducts a business away from home," said Lewis, "can park his vehicles on his own property.

"If he couldn't, why we'd have to act against half the town of Wayland. Maybe if he got too many working vehicles there, we'd have to act.

"But to act under those circumstances," continued Lewis, "would be to work a hardship on people--business people."

All right, persisted the Nolans, but how about putting this in writing, so we know where we stand. That's all.

Granted, said Lewis, "We'll have a letter out to you right away. And if they cause too much noise (another complaint brought by the Nolans) again, call Mr.

This announcement was made this week by C. D. Directors Florence Freeman in Weston and Francis Gallagher in Wayland.

4-Car Crash Injures 3 on Rt.27, Wayland

WAYLAND -- A four-car crash Sunday near the Parmenter Health Center on Rte. 27 sent three persons to the hospital.

A Brookline couple was hospitalized and an Attleboro woman was treated and released at Leonard Morse Hospital, Natick, after the crash.

Injured were:

--Bernard Parronchi, 57, a cellist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, admitted with scalp cuts and possible chest injuries.

--Mrs. Mildred Parronchi, 54, of 1768 Beacon st., Brookline, his wife, admitted with a broken right leg.

--Mrs. Margaret Bowen of 45 Dewey av., Attleboro, treated and released.

Patrolmen Fred Perry and George Driscoll said Mr. Parronchi was the driver of one car and Mrs. Bowen was a passenger in a car driven by her husband, William F. Two other drivers involved: David Carr of Old Farm rd., Wayland and Allen R. Chandler of 9 Upland rd., Burlington.

Selectmen Line Up 200-Car Lot In Wayland Center

WAYLAND -- A 200-car town parking lot near the Wayland Center railroad station is moving closer to reality.

Town Counsel Frank Kilburn told the Board of Selectmen Monday that he has an appraisal for the approximately one acre involved.

And Chairman Thomas Linnehan reported that the State Department of Public Utilities is agreeable to the transfer of the Boston and Maine station to town or private hands -- if shelter is kept there for commuters as long as the rail service survives.

Also -- the railroad and the Boston Edison Co., two owners of property involved are willing to sell for such a development, provided their rights are preserved.

Word of such a development first came out at a selectmen's meeting in the late spring.

Wayland Kiwanis Readies 10th Annual Halloween Parties

WAYLAND -- The Wayland Kiwanis is getting ready for its 10th Annual Kiwanis Halloween parties for all Wayland school children, according to Co-Chairmen Joseph Martin and Joseph Trubiano.

Just 12 days away -- on the 31st . . . Tuesday.

Details are being worked out for the schools by the following:

Co-chairmen James DePaulo and George Deverell, Cochituate Grammar; Co-chairmen Robert Farrington and John Simonik, junior high; Chairman Frank Smith for the high school.

Full program -- next week in The Crier.

An Idea for You ...

SORRY -- We like to help all we can but --

Beginning with the Oct. 26 issue (next), we will be unable to publish long lists of committees . . . all in one issue.

Our suggestion: If it's important enough to have a gigantic committee, then it's important enough to send us a few dribs and drabs weeks in advance -- and the committee names can get before the public in that manner.

Objectors Get First Crack At Winter-St. Extension

WESTON -- Protests against a proposed Winter-st. extension from the Waltham Industrial park to Merriam st., Weston, were voiced by residents of Waltham, Lincoln and Weston Tuesday morning.

At a hearing before the Middlesex County Commissioners in Cambridge, there was also strong support from Russell Cox of Weston -- of Cabot, Cabot and Forbes.

Mr. Cox said that up to 25 percent of the users of the Waltham industrial complex come from the west and narrow town roads in Weston hamper this traffic.

As for objectors (Morton Braun of Lincoln, a planner) who insisted on a further study by the state, Weston officials pointed out that the State Department of Public Works has already given informal approval to such a road.

No route was agreed upon at this hearng which found most Lincoln residents against the plan.

County engineers will make aerial and on-the-spot surveys before coming up with a proposed route which will then go before another public hearing, probably in two months.

Some Lincoln objectors found the proposal sour because they planned to build in the area, but as one proponent said: "Well, that's as good a reason for this vital route as any -- it doesn't destroy built-up areas."

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

4000 Years Ago ... Hereabouts

Remember all the excitement about the finding of "Indian" remains two years ato, when the bulldozers moved onto the Mansion Inn site between Dudley Pond and Lake Cochituate?

An illustrated article by J. Alfred Mansfield of Watertown in the October quarterly Bulletin of the Massachusetts Archaeological Society, accompanied by authoritative editorial comment, establishes this commanding spot high above the two ponds as having been an ancient crematorium, with burial places adjoining.

These Dudley Pond remains are believed to date back to Stone Bowl people who lived in Massachusetts 4200 years ago.

That was nearly 1000 years before Moses led the Israelites out of Egypt, and 1500 years before either Athens or Rome began their ascent to greatness.

These Stone Bowl people had not yet reached the stage of development where people make pottery. Instead they hollowed vessels for cooking out of steatite, or soapstone, a soft easily hollowed, rock, which stands fire. The nearest soapstone quarry to us is 20-odd miles up the Old Connecticut Path, in Millbury, south of Worcester.

How do the archaelogists come to the conclusion that this high knoll contained a site where the bodies of many people of high standing were cremated so very long ago?

One piece of evidence is this. While a multitude of stone artifacts were found there, including knives, hatchets, gouges, drills, a pestle, and numerous projectile points, a great proportion of the tools had been fractured or broken before the diggers found them, or else broke to pieces after being excavated.

This made it apparent that they must once have been subjected to great heat. Ordinarily ancient tools turned up in archaeological excavation are as solid as other stones. Confirming this view was a deposit of a peculiar sticky charcoal, with small fragments of bone. Graves were found nearby, to which remains had apparently been removed after cremation.

An interesting find at Mansion Inn was two knife blades of stone, one chipped from mineral known to come only from Mt. Kineo, at Moosehead Lake in northern Maine, and the other from Coxsackie in New York, across the Hudson River.

How do archaeologists reach the conclusion that these remains are somewhere near 4000 years old?

Careful detailed comparison of these stone artifacts shows their characteristics to be identical with similar tools found at certain other excavations; with one Massachusetts site in particular where the charcoal in the deposit has been tested by the recently developed and accurate carbon-14 method.

Charcoal remains of animal and vegetable matter give off a certain amount of radio activity. The strength of these emanations decreases at a known rate with the passage of the centuries. Hence a scientific determination of the age of a charcoal deposit can be made in a laboratory properly equipped.

Then, just as an expert in antiques can tell you by comparison whether a piece of furniture was made in Queen Anne's reign or Queen Victoria's, a trained archaeologist will decide from what prehistoric era the spear point, arrowhead, or bit of pottery comes.

Often he can also determine the particular quarry or geologic region whence the stone to make it was procured.

Why did these Stone-Age people choose eastern Massachusetts to live in?

Perhaps for some of the same reasons as yours: they could get a living here, and they liked the countryside. That spot just between Dudley Pond and Lake Cochituate was not only high and dry, but the ponds furnished fish for food summer and winter; and out of Cochituate flowed a brook into the Sudbury River close by, where a dugout canoe would provide transportation, and more food.

Deductions such as these, relying chiefly on bits of stone, charcoal, and similar evidence, may seem to you far-fetched.

But several hundred enthusiastic people, some professional, but mostly laymen, spend weekends all summer excavating the many sites in this region, where our predecessors have left evidence of the life they lived long, long ago.

At Bronson Museum in Attleboro, the headquarters of the Massachusetts Archaeological Society, you may see graphic exhibits of how those long gone people lived, and many examples of their utensils and tools, including some from this area; and of course a visit to the Peabody Museum at Cambridge shows you a splendid exhibit of prehistoric life all over the country.

The Bonus Boys' Gifts

Booze and bangtails perfectly okay -- but don't try to buy a house, a car or do some shopping . . . on Columbus Day. Wasn't that the most -- a Full Holiday, as we say reverently in Massachusetts, except for what counts, of course?

This little weirdie, we'd like to note, was devised by the same legislature (minus a few drop-outs) that will be asked to "liberalize" the Blue Laws. Some prospect.

And our advice to you is -- get your little pressure group going on this project or the Bonus Boys on the Hill aren't going to take care of you.

One odd thing strikes us: maybe this revision of the Blue Laws will find the ($1500) Bonus Boys extending the Columbus Day Principle to Sundays. Just imagine -- plenty of booze and you can play the horses on Sunday but for sun tan oil you'll still need a prescription, "legally".

A Few Certainties

For the most part, we think Gov. Volpe stumbles his way into predicaments.

But certainly the recent vote of the Executive Council to refuse him the right to ask the State Supreme Court for an advisory opinion was not of his doing.

Certainly no one can argue that the result did not make Massachusetts, one of the two fond possessors of that antiquated council, look ridiculous, not to mention helpless.

Certainly one has a right to argue that the governor of a state has the maturity to be trusted to act in such matters without "advice" from a self-seeking group of no-sayers as those who masquerade as the Executive Council.

Certainly it matters not that the question is one of the toll road-versus-freeway nor that the 7-1 decision was rendered against a Republican governor by the all-Democratic council. The question might be different and certainly the council has acted capriciously even when its political complexion was that of the governor's.

And certainly, it becomes plainer every day that those who argue for the abolition of this outdated council know what they're talking about. How about it?

In Brief . . . .

If we are where our presence is felt, then those Weston youngsters whose paintings and recorded songs are on exhibit in Thailand are probably farther from home than they've ever been before. This exchange of arts between the Arts and Crafts Assn. and the Thai government is an interesting and, we hope, continuing experiment. . .We note both Vokes and the Friendly Society are tuning up for their first plays of the season. Nothing like this to remind us fall is here . . . Add to that, the resumption of activities by the Leagues of Women Voters and you know life is no longer season in the sun . . . Something to note: the high school science quizzes every Sunday at 3 over WKOX . . .

Letters To The Editor

Lauds Weston Police

To the Editor:

Enclosed is a copy of a letter to the Weston police:

On Saturday night the 7th of October we were involved in an accident at Winter and Brown sts. In the excitement and confusion of events I was unable to acquire even the names of the officers who so ably and capably assisted us.

This is written, sir, to inform you that these officers were very quickly at the scene, and extremely efficient.

I am humbly grateful for their courteous and gentle care and wish to say that I am so very proud, being a resident of Weston, of our wonderful Weston force.

I am embarrassed that even in the hospital I didn't thank the officer who drove me there and wish at this time to convey my most heartfelt thanks for myself and my family, to both these fine men.

3 Weston Students Win Praise on Merit Tests

WESTON -- In addition to the success of two Weston seniors (Judith H. Hoagland and Iohnathan Bump) who became semi-finalists on the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test in the spring of 1961, Weston High School has been informed that three additional students have earned by their work on this test a letter of commendation. They are Elizabeth Eldridge, Susan Lee Jones, and William Vaughan, Jr.

Garden Interest Group

WESTON -- The Garden Interest Group of the Women's Community League of Weston will hold its first meeting on Thursday, Oct. 26 at the Weston Town House. Refreshments will be served at 12:45. At 1:30 Mrs. Edwin Porter will speak on "Color for Winter Arrangements" and discuss the sand and borax technique.

The chairman of the day will be Mrs. Edward H. Petrick.

Kindergarten? -- Why Not?

Hope townsfolk will go along with the Wayland School Board's request for $6500 to set up a test kindergarten next summer. This "shakedown cruise" for youngsters about to enter school should not be left to family funds or the availability of a car pool.

(Incidentally, let it be noted that this is one educational function that receives no state aid, thus leaving the expense to fall upon progressive communities.)

The board seeks the funds for a six-week summer trial period for about 120 pre-schoolers. And if this works out, it may become a public school function in Wayland. We hope so.

Even First Graders Learn By Tape -- in Weston

WESTON -- Tape recorders and head phones greet first graders at the Country School these days as modern devices in educational techniques are added to the traditional teacher oriented classroom situation.

Groups of various sizes are being taught reading and phonics via these electronic means. As a result of the Accordion Plan theory of operation, children meet with several teachers at a time and are often members of both large lecture groups and small teams.

Placement of children according to ability in order to assure highest achievement in these areas is given careful attention. Although it is too early to determine results of the project, careful teacher planning will help to insure sucessful execution of the program.

Child & Religion First Parish Topic In Wayland Nov.1

WAYLAND - Parents of all children in the First Parish Church, Wayland, will meet in the church vestry Wednesday, Nov. 1 at 7:30 p.m. to discuss the child's religious development with a woman well qualified to advise them.

Dr. Dorothy T. Spoerl, curriculum editor in the Department of Education of the Unitarian-Universalist Assn., has been a minister's wife, a mother, a rural school teacher in New Hampshire, pastor of the Second Universalist Society of Springfield, religious education director of Boston and Detroit churches, and professor of psychology at American International College, Springfield. Her husband was the late Dr. Howard Spoerl, professor of philosophy at American International College. He died in 1957.

Opening the meeting with Wayland parents by speaking on "The Child Learns His Heritage," Dr. Spoerl will answer questions and lead general discussion. The meeting will open with dessert and coffee at 7:30.

Emerson Hospital Harvest Day Appeal Friday

CONCORD -- Harvest time is here again and, for Emerson Hospital, Harvest Day will be tomorrow (Friday). On this day members of the hospital auxiliary will collect fresh foods and canned goods contributed by citizens from all the towns served by the hospital.

This annual event is especially important this year because of the increasing demands on the services of the hospital. Contributions in the past have helped greatly in relieving hospital costs and it is hoped that this year citizens will contribute fresh vegetables and canned goods even more generously than in the past.

Weston Drive Seeks to Make Paul Revere Bell Toll for All

By HARRY PATTERSON

WESTON -- There's a campaign underway in Weston to raise enough money to replace the Town clock in the belfry of the First Parish church with an electric one - and to "reactivate" the great Paul Revere Bell that hangs beside it.

Back in March 1801 Article 10 in the warrant for Weston's Town Meeting read: "To appropriate such a sum of the money now assessed as may be found necessary to make up the deficiency of the Sum raised by subscription to purchase a bell for the Publick meeting-house." Article 10 was passed over, and the parish members footed the rest of the bill.

This bell is the 44th cast by Paul Revere.

He cast it specifically for the Weston church, and it weighs 997 pounds. It cost the Parish about $400, and is valued by experts today at well over $2000.

Until about 1883 it was rung to summon worshippers to church, and at weddings and funerals. Then an anonymous philanthropist offered to give the town a tower clock -- provided the town could find an appropriate location.

The obvious spot was the belfry of the wooden Colonial First Parish Church, which stood, until it was torn down, where the present First Parish Church stands. So the clock was installed, and a striking mechanism was rigged up which caused the Paul Revere Bell to strike the hours. When the present church was built, clock and bell were transferred to its belfry.

Some years ago the striking mechanism was disconnected. Meanwhile the clock, which is run by weights and cables and is, of course, more than 75 years old, began to wear out. Today the sexton has a great deal of trouble keeping it running -- and somewhere near on time. And the town does not care about replacing or repairing it. It is, in fact, past the stage where repairs would be of more than temporary value.

Today, of course, with electric clocks in every home and a reliable watch on every wrist, belfry clocks have lost some of their usefulness.

But many people, including the group sponsoring the fund-raising campaign, believe that in towns of Colonial origin they still have a place -- especially when connected to a mellow Paul Revere Bell. The group hopes that enough Weston families and organizations will contribute to The Paul Revere Bell Fund to make it possible to install a new electric town clock -- provide an electric mechanism to strike the hours -- and to add an automatic switch which could prevent it from striking during the night if people objected to the noise.

If the campaign is successful, then Weston will have a belfry clock that is reliable and accurate, and also the pleasure of hearing once again the beautiful sound of the big Paul Revere Bell marking the community's daytime hours.

As a critic from Concord remarked when he learned of the project: "Do you mean to say that Weston has a Paul Revere Bell and it doesn't ring? You ought to be ashamed of yourselves!"

Weston Girl Scouts Active at Conclave

WESTON -- Girl Scout leaders and workers from all over New England convened at Portland, Me. from Oct. 3 - 5 for the N. E. Regional Conference. Attending this conference were Mrs. Frank Vinal, president of the Weston Council, Mrs. Howard Rogers, mariner training leader, Mrs. Theodore Jones, program chairman, and Mrs. Norman B. Saunders, Mrs. Harold Lingley and Mrs. David Kingsbury of Weston. They were joined by Mrs. Mead Hartwell from her new home at Lake Sunapee, N. H., member-at-large from Weston.

In 1962 the Girl Scouts of the United States will celebrate their 50th anniversary. Weston is not far behind, for a program for Girl Scouts was started in Weston in 1919 - just seven years later.

Ernest J. Jones

Ball's Bluff -- Why North Muffed the Ball ... Again

By SOUTHWORTH LANCASTER

October 15 - 21, 1861

The News: Oct. 16 -- At Bolivar Heights, Md., opposite Harper's Ferry, Col. John W. Geary attacked a Confederate brigade under Col. Nathan G. Evans. Each side claimed success; the line remained unchanged. Geary's 14-company force included three companies 13th Mass., part of Brig. Gen. Charles P. Stone's division on the Upper Potomac. Stone, Massachusetts native, was a West Pointer . . .

Oct. 17 -- Fremont's tardy pressure against Sterling Price's command in Missouri started 4 days of inconclusive skirmishing . . . Oct. 21 -- Ordered by McClellan to reconnoitre positions of Evans' brigade, including 15th and 20th Mass. and Rhode Island Battery B across Potomac at Edwards' Ferry.

Brave but inexperienced, Col. Edward D. Baker aimed at the high banks of Ball's Bluff, mishandled his force and brought on an unintended battle. Evans' brigade drove Union troops into the river. Confederates held the high banks, boats for withdrawal were missing and retreat became a rout.

Baker was killed, Col. William R. Lee and Major Paul J. Revere were captured; Lt. Oliver W. Holmes was badly wounded -- all 20th Mass. Col. Charles Devens, 15th Mass., after great efforts to extricate his men, made a last minute escape by swimming . . . Union losses exceeded 900, Confederate losses were less than 100.

Behind The News: Ball's Bluff, a minor action, came close after Bull Run and further increased Southern prestige, while striking the North as a calamity Baker was a popular figure and a close friend of Lincoln, so a scapegoat was needed.

Stone later became the victim. He erred in giving the assignment to Baker who, lacking military knowledge, failed to comprehend his mission.

McClellan, seldom tolerant of subordinates' mistakes, nevertheless upheld Stone . . . More will be heard of the captured officers . . . Lt. J. W. Grout, 15th Mass. and Worcester native, was killed in the battle; he inspired the song, "The Vacant Chair", still known to many . . . Evans, though not on the field at Ball's Bluff, was shortly rewarded with a brigadier's commission.

A West Pointer, called "Shanks" for his handsome legs, he had done well at Bull Run . . . Fremont, knee-deep in Missouri troubles, was near the end of his tenure despite his political power. Next year he will turn up in the Shenandoah Valley where, with other incompetent commanders, he helps make Stonewall Jackson's reputation . . . The Army of the Potomac, well trained by McClellan, lacked now only a resolute leader.

Weston Tromps No. Reading, 24-0

WESTON -- Weston High ran its season's record to 3 - 1 last Saturday with a 24-0 victory over North Reading on the latter's home field.

It was Buddy Foster's passing and co-captain Bill Rizzo's running that gave the Wildcats the impetus.

NEXT: Ipswich High, Saturday at 2 - at Weston.

Foster's fourth down pass with 18 yards to go set up the first touchdown in the second period, carrying from the 25 to the 3. After a penalty, Bob Trowbridge carried over from the 8. Foster's double fake on the extra point set up a flat pass to Russ Hills out in the flat. A beautiful play to watch. Cool handling by Foster.

Foster's 27-yard pass to Bob Trowbridge scored another TD in the third period. Foster's pass to Bob D'Antonio scored two extra points. Then in the fourth period, Rizzo intercepted a North Read-aerial and scooted 46 yards to score. He scored the extra points on a rush.

Starting lineup:

Le-R. D'Antonia; lt - Aker; lg - Herrick; c - Connolly; rg - French, co-captain; rt - Rivotski; re - Hill; qb - Foster; lh - R. Trowbridge; rh - Drowne; fb - W. Rizzo, co-captain.

Substitutes: line: Parlee, McKenzie, DiSimone, Pexton, Evans, Bursaw, Gibson, Fabrizio, Scott.

Maynard Hands Wayland TD, Takes It Back to Win, 12-8

WAYLAND -- Unbeaten Maynard won a heartbreaker from Wayland High's injury-ridden eleven at Maynard last Saturday, 12-8. Worse yet--on a touchdown pass with less than three minutes to play.

Of course the whacky way in which things went that afternoon, this was probably proper in a strange sort of way. The man [illegible] Bill Morris who promptly scampered 44 yards for the touchdown.

Ted Langley made it 8-0 on a rush for the extra point. Unfortunate for Coach Salvati's charges, they couldn't scrounge up another TD. Maynard scored late in the first period but could not convert.

NEXT--Saturday at 2 at North Reading against North Reading High.

The lineup: le--Kent; lt--Myers; lg--Bolduc; c--Griffin; rg--Lapointe; rt--Lapointe; re--Cunha; qb--Langley; lh--Morris; rh--Bolduc; fb--Lapointe. Substitutes: line--Brown, Gary, Young; backfield--Reeves.

Weston Selectmen Get Fast Reply On Bid for Tax Aid on Shelters

WESTON -- Ask, and ye shall receive. Weston selectmen are not sure but they think this has just happened to them.

On Sept. 21, they wrote to Senators Saltonstall and Smith and to Cong. Donohue, urging support for tax relief for the "Construction of bomb shelters and fallout shelters."

And the very next week, they had a letter back from Cong. Donohue agreeing with their idea and enclosing a bill he had filed on Sept. 23: providing for deduction of one half of the cost of construction -- such deduction to be taken only once: in the year the shelter is completed, although all expenses, whenever incurred, can be deducted. Senators Smith and Saltonstall promised support.

This has nothing to do with local tax relief for shelters -- only for income tax deductions.

High School Taps Wayland's Know-How to Help Students

WAYLAND -- Wayland's rich resources in talent will be put to work to help its high school students find a career in college or immediate work after high school.

Under an unusual program devised by the Wayland High School Guidance Dept. members of the community are being asked to notify the guidance department of their college, present occupation and time available to meet with students interested in that college or profession.

The idea: there are many things about specific colleges that only those who have been there can pass along to a student--with authority.

The same goes for the professions.

The method: With such names and information on hand, the guidance department would serve as a broker in getting the student and the adult together.

It might come in the form of one-to-one meetings. Or at gatherings in the high school attended by several students...if the graduate has the time. The same goes for the profession.

Said the guidance department in putting out the form below:

"We feel that there are, in Wayland, many residetns who, because of their educational backgrounds and professions, would be most helpful to us in bringing to students information on various schools and occupations. If you are willing to share with students your experience with a particular school and your knowledge of a certain profession, we should appreciate having you complete and return to us this form.

"We shall file the information and make it available to students for whom it would be pertinent.

"In the event that there is an interest expressed in your school or profession either we or the student will feel free to communicate with you."

Weston Schools, C.D. Plan

WESTON -- The Weston School Committee are working on proceedures to be used in the event of enemy attack.

A survey for existing bomb shelters in the schools is under way by Civil Defense.

In the meantime, the following plans can be announced:

1. The Superintendent of Schools has been given emergency authority to close the schools upon his discretion should warning of danger or attack appear.

2. The School Committee and the Civil Defense will work out a possible dispersal plan to homes, by bus and foot, to govern situations when enough warning is available to make this possible.

3. Parents should recognize their own parental responsibility and should act according to their best judgment in keeping their children home from school should they consider the situation dangerous.

Other five-star attractions will be a display of a radiosonde and two weather baloons, two Sparrow missiles, and a 2-foot model in glass of three Hawk missiles taking off into space.

For parents, the Sporting Goods Exchange, new to the fair this year, will feature excellent used or outgrown sports equipment of all varieties. Mrs. Thomas S. Barrows, Mrs. Henry E. Cooper 3d, and Mrs. Philip W. Trumbull are in charge, assisted by Mrs. Hugh R. McBride.

In addition to the Treasure Hunt and the Space Age Costume Parade for children, there will be a midway with many games. Meadowbrook fathers Weston Howland Jr., Sherrerd B. Welles, Samuel R. Selectmen –

(Thomas) Linnehan or myself--and we'll be right over to see to that."

That seemed to satisfy the Nolans--but only as long as it is in writing. And that Lewis promised.

The Nolans nearly didn't get their hearing. Chairman Linnehan received word at 7:55 that Mr. Lewis "would be up to a half hour late."

The Nolans and others came and gone and the chairman busied himself with papers until 9:30, Lewis came in with a glowing report of affairs at the Wayland Junior High PTA.

"The best program you ever saw," said Lewis. "Showed us just how the classes operated. I only missed one of the classes."

And with that--the seclectmen got down to town business.

Renewal –

Planning Board had been asked for the Harris report -- and twice refused.

He said that by the end of the year the Planning Board must decide on a master plan which can be based, in part, on the Harris report.

The report came in for considerable criticism, both from the floor and from Mr. Charnock and L. William Bertelsen.

Guy Newhall, ex-president of the association, said that reports that Dudley Pond was polluted were baseless. No records had been kept by Norman Fair and he (Newhall) had been present when the state representative had found the water pure.

Why closed? Because the town couldn't afford two beaches.

The point: another error -- how many more?

In a parallel action, the Board of Selectmen named three members to a six-man advisory board on renewal (as required by the Federal authorities):

John Karman of 211 Lakeshore dr.; Miss Jean F. Caul of 38 Lakeshore dr. and Louis Russell of Pelham Island rd.

WE SERVICE AND SELL WASHING MACHINES - DRYERS - TELEVISION - RADIO - DISHWASHERS

Driving through Weston we noticed them first: little knots of people outside the post office, the town hall, up on North av.

In Wayland, there were similar groups. And we began to notice in one gatheing at Five Corners, that everyone seemed to be making reports to two "recorders." Very busy.

When we ran into the same thing in Cochituate, we just had to get out of the car and inquire what was going on.

And the answer is the Webster Gwemleyites have started a Birch-Watching Society, with reports on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays -- and twice on Sundays.

You think you have problems? Think of the Pentagon -- and we don't mean Berlin or Laos either. This precise, scientific letter was received recently from some West Coast "scientists" claiming the invention of a four-ounce ray gun . . . that could neatly slice granite.

A Pentagon expert in the area dropped by for a check-out: Sure, they told him, it could also regenerate matter -- even levitate.

Turned out they were mystics who, they said, had picked up this gun in a trip back through time to Egypt. The expert never did see any gun. And this might have been the end of it, but --

The chief medium subsequently phoned the Pentagon to learn of any plans for the device. Told the "inventors" had never produced the weapon, the medium was equal to the occasion:

"You see my wife was present at the time. Women are so negative. Nothing works when they are around . . ." Amen.

Wet leaves -- that's the trouble now, as ice and snow and frost will be soon (soon? -- last Sunday). So take it easy -- and don't skid on wet leaves. Just as bad on the car, the pocketbook and your physical well being as winter snow and ice.

Halloween is sneaking up on us again. But the Wayland Kiwanis, we note, is getting ready with its sponsorship of those keep-em-busy parties. This takes a lot of work -- and money. Anyone with an extra dollar or time on his hands can help them out. Call Joe Trubiano or Joe Martin.

Mock Air Attack Gives Wayland Lab 'Wartime' Test

WAYLAND -- That "early Christmas" look -- strips of tinfoil around in trees and on lawns -- were all a part of Operation Sky Shield.

The old World War II trick -- drop tinfoil strips to confuse radar -- was all a part of the scheme, and Wayland Lab of the Raytheon Co. just rubbed its collective hands and scanned the skies.

If President Kennedy was "gratified", then Raytheon engineers were "simply delighted" by the sudden influx of "hundreds of aircraft, operating under realistic war conditions."

Usually, Wayland Lab can hope for one or two Navy planes to show up on time every so often to give the new radar a test but a "multiplicity of targets complete with those Christmas decorations and all sorts of evasive tactics" was the best test ever, a company spokesman said.

The lab had four radars up and a full crew testing for the duration of the operation.

Weston Students Work On Skilled Craftwork

WESTON -- Weston homes will soon be adorned with perfectly crafted and skillfully executed ob-objects d'art if the boys of Weston Junior High School keep up their busy pace in the school's workshop.

Under the supervision of industrial arts instructor Galen Green, seventh and eighth graders are working on a variety of projects which will teach them needed skills and result in functional articles for the home.

While seventh graders are learning basic shop operations and making flexa-hexagons and periscopes, eighth graders are engaged in activities as diversified as fireplace sets and record files.

Magazine racks, made of such materials as walnut, brass, wrought iron or wood, are being constructed by homerooms 103, 106, 202, 204 and 206. The boys in 206 are making walnut and brass book racks while those in 102 are building fireplace sets. Record files are the project for 108.

Anybody for a Christmas gift?

Weston Youth at Homecoming

WESTON -- Jonathan Bartel of 12 Robin rd. attended the annual homecoming celebration of The New Hampton School in New Hampton, N. H. recently. It was a special occasion, for a new gymnasium was dedicated honoring Frederick Smith who served as headmaster, 1926 - 1959.

An afternoon of sports highlighted the day-long program.

Sudbury's Old Time Value Days

SUDBURY -- The Old Time Value Day promotions of past years have gone over so big, both with the merchants and the people of Sudbury and nearby towns that this year over 40 merchants and services from the Chamber of Commerce have joined together and are offering three grand prizes instead of the usual one.

Individual door prizes will be awarded and many merchants will offer on-the-spot prizes for best costumes. All door prizes, the Chamber's costume prize and the three grand prizes will be given away at the grand drawing to be held Sat. night, Oct. 21, at 8 p.m. in the Raytheon parking lot, Post rd., Sudbury. The Chamber is also offering a prize for the best costume worn on the night of the grand drawing.

In order to be eligible for the prizes people must be at the grand drawing, which in itself is to be an event well worth attending. This year all participating merchants will give a numbered ticket to every shopper, whether a purchase is made or not. However, if a shopper does buy something, he will receive one additional ticket for every 50 cents worth of purchase. In other words, if someone buys $5 worth of goods or services he will receive 10 tickets in addition to the original free ticket. The ticket stubs will be deposited in a sealed container by the merchant. All containers will be taken to the Raytheon parking lot Saturday night, Oct. 21, and the winning stubs drawn from each container for individual door prizes. Then, the stubs from all the merchants' containers will be deposited in three larger containers for the three grand prize drawings.

The three grand prizes will be area prizes; that is, one grand prize for each of Sudbury's three shopping areas, West, Central and East. Shoppers will have a chance to win any one of the three grand prizes (or all, if he's really lucky) if he shops in all three areas during the three day promotion.

So dig out that old gray bonnet and get ready to take advantage of some terrific bargains during Old Time Value Days.

Hunting Taboo On Town Lands – Especially Schools

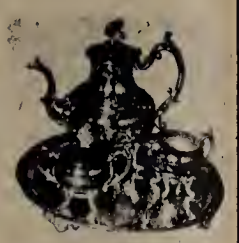
WAYLAND -- Pheasant hunting season is on -- but not on town property, especially not on school properties, weekdays or weekends.

That's the rule this year as issued by the Board of Selectmen Monday.

"I just couldn't face it if something happened on those properties through our neglect," said Selectman Chairman Thomas Linnehan.

Previously, the area behind the new high school seemed fair game for hunters -- and habits are hard to break. That's why the special order from the selectmen to the police went out.

Too much hunting near school grounds to be safe is the way they looked at it.



"Hunting is dangerous business these days the way we're growing up," Mr. Linnehan continued. "I can recall going out as a youngster . . . but now it's built up everywhere, and you're just asking for trouble."

As far as town property goes, you will be in trouble -- with the police -- if you go hunting.

Heard House? You Haven't Heard Anything Till Ballou Moves

WAYLAND -- The Heard House is nothing. Wait until they go to move the Ballou house.

Trees--and then some.

The home of Everett T. Ballou at 298 Post rd. will be shifted soon to 107 Concord rd. but, according to Tree Warden John E. Nelson, here's what stands in the way on Concord rd.:

Two branches of a maple tree on lot 10, one elm branch on 17 one maple branch on 20, one ash and one elm branch on 25, two elm branches at pole 136, one dead oak tree at 128, two branches on maple at 130, one maple branch dangerous to traffic at 125. two more of same variety at 122, one elm tree at 121, one branch on maple at 114 and one oak branch at 113.

These are all owned by the town. And there are others on private property that must be surveyed.

As for the town trees--all trimming will be paid for by the owner or mover, except for the elms which are town responsibility because of elm disease.

And after following an intricate procedure guaranteeing legal clearance, this can all be done "without detriment to the town," Nelson says in a report to the Board of Selectmen whose responsibility it will be to decide on a permit to move.

Dow to Extend Option; Vote on Lab in March

WAYLAND -- The question of a change in zoning for a Dow Chemical Co. pure-research laboratory in Wayland will go before the regular town meeting in March, Selectmen Chairman Thomas F. Linnehan announced this week.

Mr. Linnehan said that after selectmen had met with legal representatives of the nationwide concern recently it had been decided to put over until March the question of rezoning the 26-acre plot at the corner of Rice and Commonwealth rds.

Edward McLafferty, director of the Framingham lab, said that Dow expected to get an extension of its option to buy this property, probably until late spring or summer 1962.

This will be necessitated, he said because of a number of hearings and special clearances which the firm must pass through if the rezoning to limited commercial passes at the town meeting.

There is considerable opposition to the proposed $750,000 lab (building and equipment) from some property owners in nearby residential areas.

And Dow has said it would accept a substantial residential strip along Rice road, to serve as a buffer strip in this residential zone.

The Planning Board is continuing to draw up an article for the town meeting warrant and at about the time the selectmen vote to place the issue on the warrant there will be a hearing on the proposal.

There will be another airing at the March meeting and probably two more -- one before the Zoning Board of Appeals which must approve pertinent data if the exception is voted and perhaps before the Attorney General when the proposed by-law is submitted to him for approval.

Young Firebug Gives Authorities Run-Around in Cochituate Area

WAYLAND -- Wayland authorities and state officials are hunting a Wayland teen-ager believed involved in arson on property in and around the Town Beach.

A search party of 25 police and firemen nearly captured the youth, believed to be about 14-17, early Tuesday after the fourth of five alarms had been rung in this area.

Fire Chief Francis J. Hartin said that while the manhunt was in progress, the youth suddenly appeared in their spotlights and invited a chase. Chief Hartin said he chased him for more than a quarter of a mile, lost him and then found the youth calling to him again.

Police Chief Ernest Damon, Chief Hartin and a representative of the state fire marshall's office canvassed the Maguire rd., Parkland dr. and Fuller rd. area later Tuesday to alert residents as to the fire threat.

Chief Hartin said the first of five calls traced to this boy came in Thursday at 8:48 from Box 132 (Town Beach) and that at 10:59 p.m. Friday, firemen discovered materials indicating that a fire had been set at the rear of a garage at 94 West Plain st. Damage was light. The method used was described as crude.

Then on Monday night at 11:14 the Town Beach box was rung and again Tuesday at 12:25 a.m., about an hour later. There were signs there that a fire had been set.

Wayland police, cooperating, almost caught the youngster in re-

More Than Fallout Protection

Neighborhood Blast Shelters Are Musts For Weston, C.D. Says

WESTON -- Neighborhood shelters sufficiently strong to resist bomb-blast effects were firmly recommended for Weston residents last week.

The recommendation came from the local Civil Defense's Shelter Advisory Committee -- a panel of experts headed by Manson Benedict, director of atomic research at M.I.T. and a member of the general advisory committee to the Atomic Energy Commission.

The reasons: more economical and better psychologically.

But why blast rather than fallout shelters for Weston?

A special reason all should know.

C. D. Director Florence Freeman explained:

"Too much is misunderstood about protection because too much information is generalized.

"Each community needs special information to help its own citizens.

"In Weston's case (and maybe most of Wayland nearly to the Sudbury line), blast shelters are best because we are so close to Boston and Bedford."

--What size neighborhood shelters? Depends on the density and willingness of neighbors to cooperate. Maybe up to 50 persons could be accommodated. Miss Freeman is working on a proposition in her

Wayland Won't Tax Fallout Shelters

WAYLAND -- Civil Defense-inspected shelters will not add one cent to Waylanders tax bills--for the present--under a policy announced this week by the Board of Assessors.

Said Assessors B. Allen Benjamin, William S. Lewis and Fern A. Taylor:

"Pending the 1962 session of the General Court, it will be our policy, in Wayland, to consider

Kindergarten Hours Shift in Weston

weston -- Kindergarten youngsters will follow a new time schedule beginning Monday.

Dismissal will take place at 1:30 on Tuesdays and Thursdays. School will begin at 8:45 a.m. every day. First pick up of pupils by buses will be at 8:15 a.m. instead of 8:30 a.m.

The afternoon sessions of kindergarten will begin at noon every day instead of at 12:30. On Monday, Wednesday and Friday, dismissals for the afternoon students will be at 3:15 and on Tuesday and Thursday at 1:30.

There is no reduction in the weekly instructional time under the new schedule.

This change will permit parents to plan afternoon appointments on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons and will allow teachers a block of time for conferences, program schedules and curriculum evaluation. It is believed that the revised schedule will increase the strength of the present student-teacher relationship and improve the quality of the educational program.

Weston School Girls Learn How to Babysit Like a Pro

WESTON -- Teach babysitting? Well, why not? Ever wish you could find a sitter with just the right touch? One who could step in at the proverbial moments notice with the right approach to our children?

Beginning in the seventh grade, Weston youngsters are learning the technique -- 185 of them.

That ought to make the parents of Weston -- and Wayland, an maybe even Sudbury -- happy.

Already they have ideas. Like how to handle little Dennis the Menace child.

Says Marilyn Barnes (7th grader): "If they're very naughty, just a little spanking."

Says Principal Aimo H. Tiettinen whose school is offering one of the first classes in babysitting (now considered a part of home economics in the state curriculum) and whose daughter had already had the standard year of cooking and year of sewing:

"I would much rather she had had this course.

"Lots of girls will never do more than a minimum of cooking and sewing -- but almost all of them will have something to do with a family.

"Besides, this is something they can do immediately."

The course was launched this year by Mrs. Marcia E. Schwenke who came to Weston this year from Burlington.

The six-week course covers everything from responsibility of the babysitter, her parents, her employer to the best ways of entertaining small children (it can be done, it seems).

AND THAT'S THE DOGGIE -- Pat Surette gives the kindergarten class of Mrs. Betty Ann de Mol van Otterloo an exciting story to hang on to, as Daphne Petri, Joan Slater, Debbie Lindsley and Gail Rheinlander, all Weston seventh graders learning babysitting techniques listen with their young charges. (Town Crier Photo)

Mrs. Schwenke has some definite ideas: Fairy tales are of doubtful value.

Take Cinderella -- are all stepmothers evil? And will every girl find a prince charming?

The way she puts it: "Kids today have so much to learn that they should have facts -- not fairy tales."

Still, she is inclined to the views of some of her students -- that a love of reading for its own sake is more important than its content.

And her students do have some strong views. Like fathers: shouldn't be forced into changing diapers.

Also -- on the delicate matter of staying up another half hour for "something important". Says eighth grader Shelly Dunn: "I gave my 10-year-old an extra half hour for the eclipse."

With all these floating about, it is a fact that about half the students have never had a babysitting assignment.

But others like Shelly have met the challenge of a family of seven.

"Girls at this age are interested in children," says Mrs. Schwenke, "When they get to high school, this interest turns to boys. Now is the time to whet their interest."

Once a week her charges have a double-period class which includes field work in the kindergarten next door.

What they learn, they add to what they've picked up in home-babysitting, with their younger brothers and sisters. This professional training, teachers believe, gives them that extra bit they are not apt to pick up at home.

Some things a professional thinks of that no mother would -- that's about it.

The girls discuss the relative benefits of television vs. reading aloud.

And each is required to create some toy or write a children's book.

One book so delights Mrs. Schwenke that she plans to turn it over to a publisher. And if that succeeds, seventh grader Sherrell Lee is going to have more fun than anyone -- reading to her charges a book she wrote herself.

But the purpose of the course is to make babysitting a talent that junior high girls can pick up now and use for the rest of their lives.

And what could be better in suburbia?

Emily F. Adams, 84, Weston Ex-Teacher

WESTON -- One of Weston's more beloved elementary school teachers of two decades ago died last Thursday in Concord.

For the last 20 years, Miss Emily F. Adams, a teacher for 35 years in Weston, had lived in retirement at her home, 47 Foote st., Littleton. She was 84.

Born in Littleton on Jan. 27, 1877, she was the daughter of John W. and Emily (Porter) Adams and had been educated in Littleton schools and at Framingham Teachers College from which she graduated in 1896. She had taught in Littleton and Northboro before coming to Weston.

She was a member of the First Church, Unitarian, in Littleton, the Kings Daughters and the Daughters of the American Revolution. She is survived by several neices and nephews.

Funeral services were held from the Badger Funeral Home last Sunday with services in the First Church, the Rev. Robert L. Hadley, minister, in charge.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

Baked - Boiled - or French Fried

Today we are going to talk about the lowly "spud," for our gardeners are right now harvesting potatoes; and if any of my readers have a chance to buy potatoes grown here in the Sudbury Valley sandy loam, dry and mealy, there are none better anywhere.

We owe a lot of things to the Irish besides St. Patrick and President Kennedy: one of them is the potato.

Not, indeed, that the Irish originated the potato. Both sweet and white, the tubers are natives of the Western Hemisphere.

Like so many other delectable and nutritious foods, Europe and Asia knew nothing about potatoes until explorers found them on this side of the Atlantic.

The plants and seeds that de la Vega took home from Peru were far more valuable than the gold and silver which the Spaniards so feverishly sought.

If the Spaniards took the potato from the Indians of the Andes by force, the English acquired it from the Spaniards by the same method. Some say Sir John Hawkins picked it up on a raid on Spanish Florida: some say that another English commander, Sir Richard Grenville, acquired the potato as part of the booty of a Spanish ship he captured off San Domingo.

The Irish, however, got it honestly, from the English; found that the crop suited their cool climate perfectly, and the potato became their staff of life.

Though the potato is first mentioned in Massachusetts records in 1628, and the Plymouth colonists ordered some seed in 1629, the first to be eaten here came in a shipment of 15 tons from Bermuda in 1636, to supplement the colony's scanty food supplies; and these may have been sweets.

At any rate no one did anything serious about growing the crop until a century later. Then a hundred families from the North of Ireland settled at Londonderry in Southern New Hampshire, about 1719. There on the common field at Derry, you may today see a monument to the first white potatoes grown for food in the English colonies, planted on Apr. 11, 1720.

They say that Harvard, always priding itself on being ahead, had gotten some somewhere to serve at its 1707 commencement.

It didn't take long for the new crop to spread. Old diaries show a farmer up in Westboro digging them this very day of publication in October, 1737, and a Connecticut farmer first mentions digging some in October 1739. But at first the potato was a rarity such as you ate only when you cooked a roast.

Not everybody was enthusiastic about them. Some folks said they were unhealthy and would shorten your life: better stick to parsnips. It wasn't calories that worried folks then either. Some raised them only to feed the hogs.

In Europe it took the soup kitchens opened for the poor of Paris at the time of the French Revolution to make potatoes popular.

With the opening of the 19th century, as their use became more more common, New England grew them in large quantities. And would you believe it -- aside from home consumption, the biggest market for our potatoes was the South.

Up to Civil War times much of the cotton and tobacco growing South bought its potatoes from New England.

So valuable a crop was it here that the Massachusetts legislature in 1851 offered a reward of $10,000, then a very large sum, to anyone who could find a cure for the potato rot which had recently become widespread.

You would hardly think of a disease of potatoes as an important influence on population trends, but a letter in a Boston publication of 1850, from Washington County, Maine, says that potato rot is so bad there that 150 to 200 persons, who had depended on the crop to feed their families and fatten their hogs, have left their homes for the far West in the past two years, "and are still continuing to go."

Not all new England's potatoes went South, or to feed hogs. Before the temperance movement became widespread and powerful in the first half of the 18th century, distillers in Western Massachusetts learned that a bushel of potatoes, costing there twenty to thirty cents, would yield three to four quarts of whiskey.

The amount was "somewhat dependent, as in the case of city milk, upon the proof of the spirit or the convenience of water," according to a contemporary Massachusetts official report.

(We mentioned, in a piece on milk recently, the influence that a nearby pump was then alleged to have on the milk supply.)

And I noticed last year that things have come full circle, for now the Maine potato growers with their efficient machinery and high fertilization are growing so many potatoes, and so many women are now drinking metrecal, that the government is turning potatoes once more into alcohol.

But I prefer mine baked, boiled, French-fried, or in potato chips: and if they grew right here in the Sudbury Valley, so much the better.

EDITORIAL

It Won't Hurt a Bit

Of course it's inconceivable that Ch. 2 won't be rebuilt.

We all know it will rise again. So maybe we're slow in getting up the check to make it possible.

The Town Crier hopes that will not be the case in Weston and Wayland. Sit down now and do it.

Maybe you don't realize what an asset we have in Ch. 2 and WGBH-fm. Newton Minow, the new chairman of the FCC, has called it "probably the best station in the country". And Life Magazine, for what that's worth, refers to Ch. 2 as "the most prestigious station."

Its programs even rate a full-page review in Newsweek now and again.

Hardly a week passes that foreign visitors, most at the ministerial level, tour the WGBH studios -- just to get an idea of how this educational station operates.

But never mind what others think. We'll wager there's hardly a Town Crier reader that hasn't listened to a favorite program now and then.

And our children are constantly using its grown-up classroom shows. (We've even lolled, unshaven, in front of the TV set of a morning to watch Ch. 2's incomparable music education classes.)

Let's not wait. Write that check now.

Wish We'd Had That Chance

Everyone's interested in the young's careers, judging by responses to Wayland High School's career appeal in last week's Town Crier. We even got two or three of the help-the-students blanks ourselves . . . and forwarded them to Lewis Oxford, director of guidance whose idea this was.

We wish we'd had the chance when we were scrambling around for the "right college" a few years back to have a firsthand glimpse of some of our first choices. That's what Wayland High is offering -- and we'd say that with the number of professional people in this area it could prove highly successful.

At any rate, we'll keep you informed on this project. Meanwhile, those who did not clip out the coupon from last week's Town Crier, might do so this week and help your youngsters help themselves.

Letters To The Editor

But Suburbs Can't Ignore Responsibility

To the Editor:

It is wholly possible that no citizen of Wayland or Weston was at Franklin Park in Roxbury on Columbus Day when a riot took place at a high school football game. It is almost certain that nobody from Wayland or Weston wielded a knife or threw a rock in a fracas which was to a real and unhappy degree a race riot.

While our two towns have no immediate connection with this event, have we a responsibility as Americans and as citizens of Greater Boston to consider the conditions out of which social tensions and riots of this sort may grow? Some wise observations in a Boston Globe editorial of Oct. 14 deserves our attention.

The problem goes deep, says the Globe. "Some idea of its depth may be gained . . . from a walk through sections of Roxbury and Dorchester, paying due notice to the congested slums, the overcrowding, the lack of adequate playgrounds. This is a price the community must pay for not moving ahead sooner with urban renewal and planning. Who would not expect that out of the jungle would come jungle warfare?

". . . the blame can be apportioned far and wide. It can reach out into the suburbs, and fasten itself upon multitudes of comfortable people who have thought all along that Boston's problem was not theirs, and that they were not their brother's keeper.

"It extends, moreover, to those responsible in buisiness for what is, in effect, a segregation policy, and to those many others who by their attitude support this practice.

How can an individual help?

One way is to support city planning and urban renewal. One way is to support the United Fund and the Community Services it represents.

Another quite specific way is to support the Wayland and the Weston Fair Housing Practice Committees and the Federation of similar committees now active in some 30 towns on the outskirts of Boston.

Integration in housing and schooling promote integration and democracy in a community.

Segregated housing creates division, misunderstanding, and inequality, and therefore undermines democracy and a healthy society.

Wild Movie Ads -- How Much Longer?

To the Editor:

At first glance at the enclosed, one could sit back and have a hearty laugh, but is it as funny as it looks?

(Ed note -- Mr. Hoblitzell attached to his letter a theatre advertisement for "Blood of Dracula" and "Scream of Fear" at a Boston theatre.)

To be sure, we are not in the Dorchester area, but it could happen here.

Why do theater managers feel that in order to lure neighborhood children into their "den" they have to display movie posters showing half-clad women and monsters rising from coffins?

Going a step further, why do they think that this type of motion picture trash would stand up with the children any better than cartoons, Laurel & Hardy, Little Rascals and Walt Disney?

Having once had the experience of serving on a Film Review Board in a large Eastern city, I say that it is time to let these Hollywood producers know that their "two-week quickies" are not wanted in Massachusetts and that there is enough fear and trouble during these times without adding more coals to the fire.

W. W. Hoblitzell III

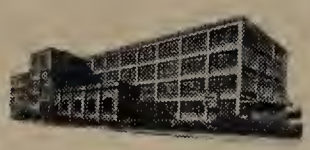
Historical Society To Open Season In Wayland Nov.2

WAYLAND -- The first meeting of the 1961-62 season will be held at the Heard House on Thursday evening, Nov. 2, at 8.

The many people who enjoy Howard Russell's articles in The Town Crier will have an opportunity to hear him speak on the topic "Four Directions from the Heard House."

Mr. Russell's happy faculty of making the past come alive in settings of the present makes this an appealing subject for old-timers and newcomers alike.



There will be a display of Wayland maps, showing early roads, the location of earliest dwellings along Bow rd., the original 1775 map, as well as the Mossman survey ordered by the General Court in 1794.

Mrs. Newton Harris is the chairman of the refreshment committee.

This is an open meeting. Visitors are cordially invited.

Good things come in small packages

We make no bones about it. Ours is a "local" agency. We want it this way, and so do our clients. They figure they're spending good money for all kinds of insurance protection, so naturally they want someone they can get to know and trust. More important, they want this someone johnny - on - the - spot if trouble strikes.

"True", you say, "but the big city agency can give me a broader choice of companies and coverages".

"Not so!", say we. Only the very largest insurance agencies in Boston can match the quality and scope of the companies we represent.

Right about here we should probably recite our company list -- but that would smack of name-dropping. Suffice it to say that we write policies for only the cream of the crop in this business.

And remember, we offer you a relaxed, head-to-head relationship that inevitably buys you the best possible insurance program at the lowest possible cost.

2000 See Foster Lead Weston

WESTON -- Buddy Foster passed for all three touchdowns last Saturday to give Weston High its fourth victory (only one loss), 20-0 over Ipswich High.

More than 2000 fans were on hand at the new high school field to see the veteran senior quarterback, a star in three sports, hurl the Wildcats to victory.

He did it first in the second period with a 10-yard toss to Bob Trowbridge in the end zone.

A bit later he and Trowbridge teamed up on a 50-yard pass play. And then in the fourth quarter, Foster found his target again reserve end Kim McMullen who took a Foster pass from the visitors' 27 on the 5 and scampered over. Bill Rizzo made one conversion on a rush in the second period.

NEXT -- Saturday at 2 p.m. at Westwood. The lineup: Le, D'Antonio, McMullen; lt, Aker, McKenzie; ig, Evans, Dexter; c, Herrick, Gibson; rg, French; rt, Revotski; re, Hills; qb, Foster; lhb R. Trowbridge, J. Trowbridge; rhb, Drowne, Kelley; fb, Rizzo.

Wayland Edges No. Reading

WAYLAND -- Victory-hungry Wayland High scored twice in the second quarter and held on grimly against a game North Reading High on the latter's field last Saturday to claim a 14-12 victory.

Coach Ralph Saivati's forces scored first on a 21-yard pass from Bud Perodeau to Bob Kent in the losers' end zone. And Mike Daly added two on a rush.

Just a few minutes later, Perodeau threw the home team off the scent and sneaked over from the 10 on a keeper play.

North Reading came right back in the second half with two scores -- but each time the Wayland line held and neither point after was converted.

NEXT -- Ashland High at home Saturday at 2 p.m. The lineup: Le, Kent, it, Myers, Dusseault; lg, Hazard; c, Arnold R. Brown; rg, Duane; rt, Ferraute, Gart; re, Young; qb, Perodeau, Reeves; lhb, Bova, Houghton; rhb, Daly; fb Morms, Morris.

Roland Butler, Circus Press Agent, Wayland Native, Word Juggler - at 74

WAYLAND -- He could talk you under the table.

That was Roland Butler, extraordinary press agent for Ringling Brothers and Barnum Bailey Circus.

He talked more men, women and sticky children to a day under the big top than any sideshow barker, but now this wizard with words is dead at 74.

He spoke his first words in Wayland, a reasonable time after his birth here on June 2, 1887.

And he began to write his first words for the Boston Globe -- as an artist and copywriter. His first drawing illustrated the San Francisco earthquake of 1906.

Later, in his heyday as a circus press agent, readers of his wild copy sometimes thought they'd been shaken by a (friendly) earthquake. At any rate, in large numbers they responded to such unabashed word-foolery like this:

"We will unfold four spectacles of breath-taking vision and beauty.

"Let me tell you about 'Picnic in the Park' -- it is an extraordinary equestrian fete, a regal cavalcade.

"We invite audience participation, whether on or off key, in our presentation of 'Circus Serenade', a stupendous new musical superspectacle, glorifying in stirring pageantry, whimsical fantasy and processional splendor the songs that uplift the heart of mankind!'

Amen. But that's not all. He might descend upon newspaper editors, his tongue wagging at the speed of sound, with such talk as this which often sounded like double-talk but had its effect:

"Twenty-six displays, boy, with scores of acts! Funambulists with unparalleled terpichorean gyrations that beggar description; proboscidian mammals in the most amazing display of pachydermic skill the world has ever known, boy!"

Whew! From him, the movies got the idea for the wildest of press agents for the flicks.

Nothing stopped him. As a promotional artist par excellence, he made Gargantua into a household word.

Simple. With the aid of a photographer, he whomped up a jungle scene in circus headquarters and then publicized the resulting pictures of "this daring capture of a live gorilla" all over the nation.

To make it stick, he made Gargantua a jungle killer: just had the gorilla stomping through the jungle grass holding a bleeding native above his head, while the victim's friends followed in "hot pursuit."

Described as a distinguished-looking man of medium height, heavy black eyebrows, carefully slicked-down hair and a square jaw, Mr. Butler had a conversational voice they say would carry a quarter of a mile through the rain.

His career started with the Globe and included stays on the Boston Herald and Boston American before he branched out as general press representative, chief news and copy writer, bill-poster artist and promotion man.

Mr. Butler was asked by Charles Ringling to leave a smaller circus in 1923 and by 1929, he had the top press job with the circus.

In 1954, Mr. Butler retired. And last Friday, he died in Veterans Hospital, Bradenton, Fla.

He leaves a widow, Estelle Mary (Ryan) and a daughter, Mrs. John Brennan of New York City.

22 HASN'T GOT A CHANCE as he is tackled by Revotskie (74), Aker (75), and Bill Gibson (62) in Weston-Lynnfield game.

Weston Gridders Claw For Winning Season

The Weston gridders are battling their way toward a winning season. Victories over North Reading, Ashland, and St. Mary's prove that this year's team is one of the best. Although defeated by Lynnfield, the Weston defense managed to hold them to a 14-point lead when the opponents had been averaging 45 points a game.

In Coach Harris's opinion Bud Foster is the best overall quarterback he has seen at Weston. Bud calls the plays, passes and runs like a pro. Coach Harris also speaks in superlatives about the team's co-captain, Bill Rizzo, who has tremendous drive and field running ability. Spectators who watched the team demonstrate the slot-right flanker-right formation at the pep rally are aware of the hidden ball tactics of the offensive squad.

Bob Trowbridge has an "amazing pair of hands," which in football jargon means that he is the team's best pass receiver. Steve Drowne, often playing slot-back, is another receiver. Russ Hills and Bob D'antonio, the only sophomore on the first string, play the ends. The two best defensive blockers and tacklers are Bob Aker and Peter Revotskie. Co-captain Pete French, Dave Evans at the guards and Ted Herrick at the center offer good pass protection to Foster. Dave Connoly is a good utility man who can play any position when a substitute is needed. John McKenzie, Kim McMullin and Bill Gibson complete the first string.

With only two starters returning from last year, the team has grown up in a hurry, as the records show. The various plays run like clockwork. The remaining games are the toughest ones on the schedule according to Mr. Proctor, Director of Athletics. The games left to be played are with Westwood, Oct. 28; Millbury, Nov. 4; Bedford, Nov. 11; Wayland, Nov. 23.

Clubs Focus On School Spirit

By MARYBETH MEYERS

Four student organizations are busier than the Jackson Twins in the daily paper, thinking up ways to build up more student enthusiasm and school spirit at the football games. Here is a rundown on their activities.

The cheerleaders were responsible for the success of the first pep rally of the season before the Weston-North Reading match, which we won 24-0. Besides leading cheers, they are talking about sponsoring a girl-invite-boy masquerade dance after the Weston-Westwood game on October 28.

School spirit is the after-school avocation of five coeds who are majorettes. Led by Sue Morgan, they will be spinning their batons in a new routine for each home game. The other four members of the squad are Betty Chapman, Rennie Leiser, Nancy Newbert, and Laura Wolfe. The girls bought their crisp, new maroon and white uniform themselves.

Maybe you have noticed an enthusiastic group of girls sitting behind the cheerleaders during the games. These pompom wavers are members of the newly organized Pep Club. Nancy Woodland was elected president of the forty-one members. One of their first goals is to double their membership.

What would a home game be like without the brass and boom of the band? Directed by Mr. Corley, the band has added some new music, which they play with as much enthusiasm as the "Star Spangled Banner." "Hey, Look Me Over" from Wildcat, "I Ain't Down Yet" from The Unsinkable Molly Brown, and "Bill Bailey" are the spectators' favorites. A pep club all their own, the band reinforces the cheers, accompanies the kickoffs, and keeps the majorettes in step.

Even with all these clubs there is plenty of room left in the grandstands for Weston students. Our motto for this year is "Let's put the WILD back in Wildcats!" Wild about Weston that is!

Vol. II, No. 2 Weston High School, Weston, Mass. October 26, 1961

College Frosh Moan, Rave in Letters Home

By BEVERLY BODEN

Although last year's seniors are scattered all over the "U.S. and A." in search of higher education, they think alike. "College is great. It's hard. There's lots of reading. There's plenty of freedom, but it's lonely." This was their general feelings after one week. Now, as the first month comes to a close the opinions remain the same, minus one detail. It isn't lonely anymore.

Weston High lost Ken Childs to Bates. In a letter home he had just enough time to dash: "Boy, I feel as though I've been here a year. I eat three meals, go to soccer and study, study, study."

Julie Doebler went off to Smith for her next four years. At least that's where she was headed. After talking to her mother, we find that Julie's attention is not solely focused on Smith. Mrs. Doebler explained, "Julie is supposed to be going to Smith but she seems to be attending Amherst, Williams and Yale." Julie likes her courses which are psychology and religion and claims that her government teacher makes even Plato interesting.

RADCLIFFE

The one member of the class of '61 to go to Radcliffe was Linda Townsend, who had this amusing tale to tell. "The night of the freshman mixer our house mother said we could come to dinner with our hair in curlers. Then who should (unexpectedly) appear but the president of Radcliffe!"

It seems only natural that a comment from Dick Tabors should follow. Dick, a frosh at Dartmouth, has some advice for all future senior boys. "Don't send your girl to Harvard."

Carol Taber writes to her family from Endicott. She says, "College certainly is a lot harder than high school but more enjoyable. I love it, the people and everything."

Sue Koester has two impressions of Connecticut College for Women. Susie says that everyone seems to be a brain. Secondly, she can't quite get used to the constant noise in the halls, the dorms, and late at night.

KALAMAZOO

Betsy Wigginton, a freshman at Kalamazoo in Michigan, has shown her school spirit by becoming a cheerleader and getting a part in the first play, "Sergeant General." Bets misses the pine trees and the New England countryside, including the M.T.A. A famous motto at Kalamazoo is: "The end of knowledge is gracious living." Bets adds, "Have you ever heard such an obnoxious quote?"

"It's a real midwestern town, the train runs right through the middle of the place." This is John Rich's description of Albion where he is now, in Michigan. He also said he enjoyed visiting other colleges, Michigan State, Dennison, and especially Kalamazoo.

MANHATTANVILLE

Paula Toner, who is in New York at Manhattanville, praises the beautiful campus, and especially spacious new gymnasium that John F. Kennedy donated in the memory of his sister who had attended this school. Paula remarked that she couldn't possibly have prepared for her present courses in high school since she'd never heard of a couple of them.

Although she's just around the corner, Edie Wypler seems to be in another world. She's working hard but enjoying every minute at Wellesley. She quoted a phrase which has been the welcoming motto for the last thirty years. It is: "I am a Wellesley girl, and therefore, I am a lady." Apparently the freshmen girls question this. Another legend at Wellesley is that the freshmen, as a whole, gain a ton on Wellesley's delectable food. Edie confessed that she is doing her share to make this statement true. She has gained ten pounds.

Well, seniors, hope you've enjoyed this. It's your turn next.

Susan's Musin's

I'm pretty open-minded. I realize Weston's first football game took place on a hot, humid day. Also, why bother to cheer when the team is winning?

I understand the Weston's second game was away. It was such a long distance to travel, and there weren't many buses available for transportation.

I'm sympathetic with many of Weston's students who are studying to be lyric sopranos. A girl can't be expected to cheer for her team and strain her vocal cords.

The band loves practicing five hours a week, not because they want to be a part of the game, but because they enjoy knocking their teeth on trombones while marching.

The football team isn't proud of being the best representatives of Weston High. They don't actually enjoy the game, but after all, there isn't much else doing on Saturday afternoon. They might as well tackle a few guys for kicks.

Obviously, the cheerleaders don't enjoy yelling. They want attention. One of them wasn't really injured cheering; she was just acting.

Let's give up this crazy game and go back to complaining about all the homework we have to do.*

*Attention readers! Please bear in mind that the above article is written completely with tongue in cheek. Obviously, none of the above statements are true. In actuality we recognize that Weston's student body does contribute great support to its team but let's not forget that there is always room for improvement.

Now rip up this article and use it for confetti at our next game.

This Is Your Life

By RENNIE LEISER

At the tender age of three, the boy you see bundled in a snow suit could count the number of beads (there were more than 30) on a bead board, one of his favorite toys. Kindergarten in Arlington was a snap as were most of the courses he has taken since with the exception of English.

One of his early hobbies was drawing cartoons of Donald Duck, Pluto, and other Disney characters that he watched regularly on television. One day, when he complained he had nothing to do, his mother suggested that he write a letter to someone to practice script writing he was learning at school. The young artist chose to write to Walt Disney and tell about himself as well as enclose a few of his best cartoons. Much to his surprise, Walt Disney answered the letter and complimented his artistic efforts.

This popular senior migrated from Wayland to Weston in the sixth grade. He is the oldest of five children. He has learned a lot about bookkeeping and geography from part time work in his parents' business. After graduating from high school, he wants to attend Amherst or M.I.T. where he will study science and math.

"Of all the members of the football team, this boy has the most spirit," remarked Coach Harris. For the past three years his friends were accustomed to seeing him at all the basketball games with a score book in hand as manager of the team. With a remarkable memory for statistics and a knack for organizing things, he was selected to be co-editor of the yearbook in charge of sports.

THIS IS YOUR LIFE, John McKenzie!

Whoo's Whoo On Halloween

In answer to requests from Wildcats who are looking forward to celebrating Halloween, the Smoke Signal has taken many risks to publish a list of costumes members of the Weston High School faculty may be using as disguises. For your own safety keep this information with you at all times on the night of October 31, so that you will know whom to treat instead of trick.

Mr. Cummings may make the scene as one of his finger-snapping case histories. In a trench coat and low-brimmed hat, Mr. Hale is expected to turn up as an undercover agent for the C.I.A. Mr. Corley plans to make personal appearances that evening as Bo Diddily. Mr. Zorn will be imitating the golden voice of Sir Cedric Hardwicke.

From TV land Mr. Walker will fly in as Rocky, accompanied on the ground by his friend Bulwinkle, Mr. Clawson. Sharing a picnic basket between them, Mr. Sawyer and Mr. Kellett will gather goodies as Yogi Bear and Boo Boo. Mr. Carini, in a leopard skin and tie, will be recognizable as Fred Flintstone.

Mr. Keene cannot decide between going as Felix the Cat or Fosco Peachy. Accompanying him might be Mr. Smith and Mr. Hatch who will jointly portray an accordion. Miss Deisher, wrapped in a Navajo blanket, is plotting to black out the moon with smoke signals. Miss Butera will appear as William Tell, and under the apple will be the next student that calls a bow a quiver. Mrs. Czarnowski, "The Great Imposter," will go as her real self.

Again, Wildcats, be on the alert for these and any other strange costumes. Anything can happen on Halloween!

The Peace Corps is a relatively new institution whose object is to aid and educate by sending teachers to foreign countries. These teachers are to work with the people of the country to which they are assigned and to help them improve their living condition. In return, the teachers study the history, economics, and culture of the country in which they are stationed. As has been shown by the recent "post card incident," members of the Peace Corps are not prepared well enough.

When visiting another person's home, it is unthinkable to openly criticize the host. Shouldn't this basic knowledge pertain to international exchanges as well? As a member of the Peace Corps it is Miss Michelmore's job to help by action, not by criticism.

The fact that Nigeria is underdeveloped is widely known. Just HOW underdeveloped the country is was what Miss Michelmore did not know. "With all the training we had had, we were really not prepared for the squalor and absolutely primitive living conditions rampant both in the cities and in the bush," wrote the unfortunate worker. Other naive representatives like her were approved by Minister Washuku, handed a "Welcome to Nigeria" poster and presumably a list of suggestions on how not to get typhoid, patted on the head, and sent off. We can sympathize with Miss Michelmore's feelings, even though we disapprove of the means she used to express them.

If we wish to prevent further unpleasant incidents, it is the responsibility of the Peace Corps to thoroughly inform their applicants of the primitive conditions under which they are expected to operate

100 Years Ago ... in the Civil War — VII

Fremont's Freewheeling Puts Lincoln on Hook

By SOUTHWORTH LANCASTER

BEHIND THE NEWS: Butler won fame at Fortress Monroe and added a new word to the language when he declared that escaped slaves were contraband of war. . .

Navy Dept. shifted boundary between Atlantic and Gulf blockading squadrons from Key West northward to Cape Canaveral. . . Oct.24- Rumor that 10,000 Confederates were moving on Maryland put 21st Mass. on all-night alert; it proved to be just a rumor . . .

Maj. Gen. Fremont reported a "glorious victory" over Sterling Price at Springfield, Mo.; actually it was a mere skirmish. Price had considerable success in standing off Fremont, which brought him much popularity in Richmond and much jealousy on the part of Southern "West Point generals"

Brig. Gen. U.S.Grant broke up a Confederate recruit camp in Kentucky. Three days later he said his command was in a good state of training but unready for serious forward movement because of supply shortages. . .

Oct. 28 - Richmond was worried over large-scale Union naval preparations, fearing loss of Gulf and Mississippi River ports. . . Gen. Jos.E. Johnston had 41,000 combat-troops in Virginia.

He put opposing Federal forces at 150,000 " according to information give us by spies".

THE NEWS: Practically all Massachusetts troops in the South were stationd in Maryland and northern Virginia, except 16th Inf. at Fortress Monroe under Maj. Gen. Benjamin F. Butler of Lowell. . .

Lincoln had already dicided to remove Fremont and orders were on the way. Apart from his military fumbling, Fremont intruded in major political matters and his ill-timed "emancipation proclamation", which he was ordered to withdraw, complicated Lincoln's policies . . .

Grant had reason to complain of shortages. His chief, Fremont, was absent in the fied, while the War Dept. was pre-occupied with the Eastern theatre. Grant's oponent was Bishop Leonidas Polk, a West Pointer who had left the army for the Church and returned to serve the Southern cause as Major General. . .

Southern fears of naval operations were well-founded. A few minor operations during the summer had been successful. Larger plans for amphibious movements were openly made and freely discussed, for the technique of secrecy was still unknown and Confederate agents easily obtained information. . .

Johnston's estimate of Union strength was surprisingly accurage, another instance of good intelligence work. However, he did not know that about one half of the 150,000 was needed for guard and garrison duty, so that the potential Northern striking force was little more than 75,000. . .

The 15th Mass. asserted that heavy losses at Ball's Bluff were due to rifle-armed Confederates, who could out-shoot Union troops equipped only with smooth-bores.

The 21st Mass. also reported uneasiness on this score. Some Bay State regiments had Enfield rifles procured with state funds, but not all troops could be thus supplied. . .

The War's great names still were clouded in the mists of the future.

Lee had failed in West Virginia Longstreet was only a major general , Stonewall Jackson too but a very new one.

Jeb Stuart was a brigadier.

In the North, Sherman, Thomas, Meade and Hooker were one-star generals, and not highly regarded in the bargain.

500 Westonites Join Forces to Help United Nations

WESTON -- More than 500 Westonites turned from their United Nations dinner Tuesday night to look for new ways to support the world orgaization on the local level.

In fact, this was the theme -- "what next?" -- propounded by Chairman Theodore Jones who answered the question on the minds of many with this statement:

"Instead of trying to inaugurate further meetings in competition with existing ones, we chose to survey any activities which promote international understanding in harmony with the U.N., urge interested persons to support already-scheduled activities and to offer help in obtaining speakers or in other ways promoting knowledge of the U.N.

Fifty foreign students from Greater Boston were guests at each of the tables which had been taken by 36 local organizations. The dinner was in honor of the late U.N. Secretary Dag Hammarskjold.

Six foreign students at Weston High School participated in the activities which included an opening flag scene done by the Girl Scout Mariners and an address by Dr. Harlow Shapley, world-famed astronomer, and a closing ceremony by high school students, Carol Grumman, John Harnish, Bill Herrick, Bicky Jayne, Barbara Jones, Joan O'Toole, Edward Owens, Pamela Piper, Kathryn Rider, Donald Sanders and Betsy Weaver.

section that would include three families.

--Cost? Everyone asks. No one can pin it down. Some community shelters might run to $2000 per family. But too large, they might be prohibitive in cost.

--Why neighborhoods? Easier to get to. Far enough away to avoid flying debris but not more than two or three minutes of walking.

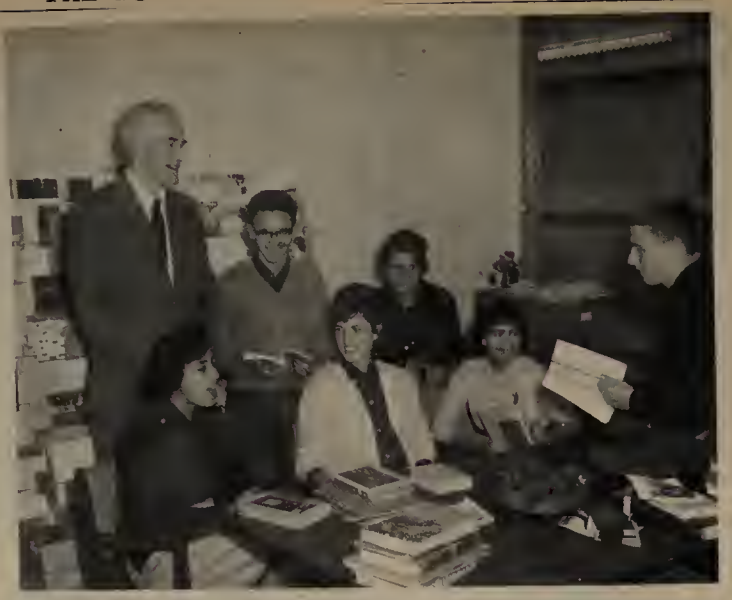
--Also, community shelter gives time to let leadership develop . . . an important factor underground and afterwards.

--Also, there is security in numbers . . . a lack of aloneness that families might suffer.

--Also, adds Miss Freeman, if the attack came while the men were away, "it is far better to have other women to share the burden, especially where children are concerned."

Mr. Benedict recommended a steel tank as the best get-right-to-it blast shelter.

Emergency suggestions: Look to ledges near your home. They may be better investment than concrete or steel shelters.



Also, hillsides. They afford a quick start and natural protection.

Highly recommended: First aid courses for at least one member of every family. Also -- provision of a good first aid kit and training of more grownup members of family. (Doctors and nurses will be far too busy -- if they survive.)

The Shelter Advisory Committee, comprises, in addition to Miss Freeman and Mr. Benedict, Frank Lewis, retired M.I.T. professor; Kenneth Wolfskill, private construction engineer and Hector Osmond, private housing contractor.

Allen Barker Plays In Capital Recital

6 Foreign Students Find Selves at Home in Weston

WESTON -- "Gracias", "Merci" and "Dunkeschoen".

These are "familiar" words these days in the halls of Weston High School as newcomers from across the sea make themselves at home in their new environment.

This year's visitors from abroad include sisters from Acapulco, Mexico, a young man from Brazil, and students from Rombas, France; Westphalia, Germany and Norway.

The six young people, new to Weston this year, all reside with local families and are fast becoming acclimated to their American colleagues.

Representing Acapulco, Mexico, are Guillermina and Lilia Torres. Guillermina is 17 and a junior. She lives with Dr. Willard Dotter's family on Radcliffe rd.

When Guillermina arrived in June she stayed with Mr. and Mrs. Wilcock. Sister Lilia is a sophomore of 15 who is living with the Noah Herndons on Meadowbrook rd.

When the girls return to Mexico, Guillermina hopes to become a secretary while Lilia has her sights set on the study of art at the university.

Brazil's ambassador is Fernando Viegas-Rangel, an 18-year-old senior who will concentrate in the sciences, hoping to enter the university in 1963 to major in psychiatry. Fernando is living with Professor and Mrs. Evon Vogt on Spruce Hill rd.

Wayland High Symposium on Nov.2 To Bring Scientists, Students Together

WAYLAND -- How does a student who is working on a science project find an experienced scientist to advise and help him? This is the subject of a science symposium to be held at Wayland High School, Thursday, Nov. 2, at 7:30.

Six scientists will briefly describe their interests and the possibilities for significant projects in these areas. An additional 30 to 40 scientists will be on hand to talk informally with students in a social hour to follow the speakers. The idea is to establish helpful relations between students and scientists who can assist them.

The symposium is the first endeavor of the Science Fair Committee consisting of laymen and faculty members.

At their first meeting a month ago the committee stressed the need of an early start on science projects.

It was pointed out that in today's world a successful science project is often the first recognition of the budding scientist and also that there are many outstanding scholarships offered to winners in these affairs. The Westinghouse Science Talent Search, for example, offers five four-year scholarships each year ($3000 to $7000) as well as a number of lesser awards.

The fair is not scheduled until next March, but the fair committee hopes the symposium will stimulate students to begin work immediately on their projects.

Wayland Woman Seriously Injured Crossing Street

WAYLAND -- A Wayland woman was seriously injured Tuesday, Oct. 17, at 7:30 p.m. when she was struck by a car while crossing Main st., near Matthew dr.

Mrs. Katherine O'Connell, 65, was taken to Waltham Hospital by the Natick Ambulance Service where her injuries were diagnosed as a fractured hip, injury to the spleen, cracked pelvis, bruises, head injuries, according to Wayland police. Her condition was described as fair.

Officer George Driscoll, investigating, said Mrs. O'Connell was crossing Main st. to visit a friend when a car driven by Warren Jenney, 57, of Monument st., Concord, presumably struck Mrs. O'Connell. Mr. and Mrs. Jenney said they were returning from Stamford, Conn.

Earlier that day, at 8:30 a.m., Mary A. Gleason, 32, of 15 William rd., Ashland, was shaken up when her car and one driven by Carl S. Ericson, 35, of 120 Potter rd., Framingham, were in collision on Old Connecticut Path between the Mainstone Farm and the Red Coach Grille.

She told Officer Thomas Murray that she had stopped to comply with the school bus law when a car struck hers from the rear.

sponding to this alarm and then while the manhunt was on, another box was rung at 12:54 a.m. at the corner of Maguire rd. and Pleasant st. extension.

Authorities surmise that the fire attempts, which never seem designed to succeed, are being set by a disturbed youngster.

In other fire calls:

Tuesday, Oct. 17, at 3:51 p.m., broken steam pipe at the high school; Wednesday at 12:23 p.m. same thing; Thursday at 12:40 p.m., washing machine smoking at 6 Country Corners rd.; Saturday at 6:17 p.m., woods fire at 50 Moore rd.; Monday at 8:05 p.m., smoke investigation at 3 Emerson rd.; Tuesday at 11:45 a.m., lost child on Davelin rd., found before call completed.

Warm October Hints Some Birds May Be in 'Reverse Migration'

By CHARLOTTE E. SMITH

WESTON -- Because weather has a very strong influence on migrating birds, the unusually warm days we have had this month bring to mind the long-held theory that "reverse migration" could take place at such times in the fall (and in spring when cold spells occur).

Although bird-banding has given some hint that reverse migration was a fact, it was not until radar migration that the theory was proved.

In the Natural History Magazine article mentioned here recently, Dr. Drury gives specific instances, as shown by films taken of the radar screen, when reverse migration can be seen actually taking place, and points out how closely it is correlated with the weather.

When the films of the 1961 fall migration are available, they will probably show "wrong-way" migration during the warm spells of this October.

Although it is hard to judge from the comparatively small number of Weston reports, birds like the yellow-throated vireo seen on Oct. 7, and the magnolia warblers on Oct. 9 often provide a clue to what is happening.

A common loon, flying low in early morning fog, was seen 10/13 (Smith); G. F. Amadon, South av., reported a flock of 30-35 Canada geese which circled and then formed a "V" before continuing on their course (10/12).

An immature goshawk was flushed from the ground with what appeared to be a starling in its talons, then perched on a branch for several minutes before disappearing through the woods, still carrying the starling (Smith, 10/13).

Sapsuckers continued to be reported (Lawson, Atkins, Hills, Barrows), and phoebes were seen by Mrs. E. F. Foote (10/12) and Mrs. D. R. Davidson (10/16). Good-sized flocks of migrating bluebirds were reported during the week of 10/12-10/18 by Mrs. L. W. Dean (5), Mrs. J. D. Glover (5), Mrs. E. S. Drowne (9), and E. E. Holmes (several heard flying over).

Blackpoll warblers, which had been so numerous since the latter part of September, disappeared completely after the night of 10/12. Myrtles became the commonest warbler migrants and were widely distributed throughout the town. There were reports of black-and-white (DeLeeuw), parula (Hayes), magnolia, palm, redstart (Lawson), and black-throated blue (Gates, Paine, Lawson) but all these were seen before 10/13.

Flocks of grackles increased tremendously, and an interesting observation came from Mrs. E. P. Ripley, Webster rd., who saw three very large flocks on 10/17 -- the first at 7 a.m., the second at 9 a.m., and the third at noon. Purple finches were migrating, with four reports of 1 or 2 birds, and one of 6 (Mrs. D. Foster, Church st.) There were increased numbers of white-throated sparrows from 10/17 on; a fox sparrow was seen 10/13 by Mr. R. L. DeLeeuw, King's Grant rd., and one was heard singing on 10/17 (Smith).

Two birds share honors for the rarity of the week: a dickcissel seen by Mrs. J. D. Glover, Concord rd., on 10/12; and a female cardinal which appeared briefly with several blue jays on 10/18 (Mrs. W. Noyes, Webster rd.). The golden pheasant was seen again on Oak st. by G. F. Amadon (10/12) and Mrs. L. B. McConaghy

Turn-Out Crashes Damage 4 Cars

WAYLAND -- Two turn-out accidents kept Wayland police busy Thursday.

At 10 a.m., Emanuel Caruso, 38 of 87 Cushing st., Waltham, told police that he was turning left into the Wayland dump when a car driven by Richard M. Faepne of 106 South st., Randolph, passing him on the left, appeared to strike a soft shoulder and shot into his car. Both cars were extensively damaged. No one was hurt.

At 4:20 p.m., William R. Hawes, 17, of 15 Pequot rd., Wayland, was turning left into Maiden lane from Old Connecticut Path when his car and one driven by Mrs. Alma B. Anderson of 38 Stonebridge rd., Wayland, were in collision. No one was hurt. Damage was extensive. Mrs. Anderson was coming out of Maiden lane, according to police.

The place of charity, like that of God, is everywhere.

that such shelters do not add to the total assessed value of property, provided that they are inspected and approved by the local Office of Civil Defense."

Indicative of what may become the statewide policy next year, the assessors quote an advisory from Comr. Edward C. Wilson, local tax expert in the State Department of Corporations and Taxations:

"There is no present exemption in respect to the construction of "fallout shelters" and, therefore, at the moment the law provides for their taxation.

"It is, however, my understanding that legislation will be considered (in 1962) which would exempt from taxation 'fallout shelters' which are constructed on property limited to this purpose and which meet the approval as to design and construction of the Civil Defense organization."

Inside Reading

Did General Fremont fall or was he pushed? Read Southworth Lancaster's intriguing column on the Civil War, Page 4.

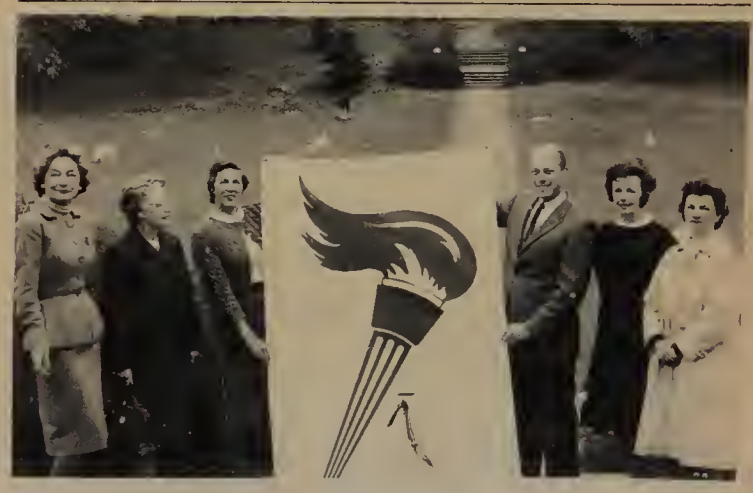
DON'T LET 'EM SCARE YOU -- They're only hobgoblins and "worse" having the time of their lives at the Halloween Party for 240 youngsters in the Cochituate School on "that night". They almost frightened the Kiwanians who sponsored three parties for free for close to 700 Wayland youngsters here and in the high school (dancing) and at the junior high (a real go-go record hop). There wasn't a gripe in a classroom at the Tenth Annual Kiwanis Halloween Party. (Town Crier Photo)

Weston Town Meeting to Vote On $10,000 C.D. 'Cave Shelter'

WESTON -- The world crisis has stepped in to take over a routine special town meeting here on Tuesday, Nov. 14.

What was to have been a meeting to ratify a growing demand for a two-precinct voting setup has spread into:

--A request for $10,000 to begin construction of an adequate underground shelter for Weston Civil Defense headquarters.



--Appropriation of funds for increased Civil Defense operations and for safeguarding of the town's underground water supply.

"None of the public buildings of the town appears to be suitable for conversion to a shelter of the type required to give some reasonable assurance that its occupants might survive the effects of nuclear attack" in the metropolitan area," write the selectmen in explanation of the new shelter plan.

Needed is a place sufficiently close to the town hall, perhaps to make use of its generator and certainly close enough to make transfer speedily.

Problems: Whether to dig into

WESTON UNITED FUND -- Set for a record 1962 United Fund drive which starts in Weston tomorrow (Friday) are six members of the 150-man team slated to cover the town's 2100 families. From left: Mrs. John B. Condon, Mrs. Albert B. Joy, Mrs. David M. Kellogg Jr., Richard King, Mrs. John B. Crawford and Mrs. Berton V. Phinney Jr.

. . .And Now Another Weston Fire Study

WESTON -- Back to the drawing board, men.

Weston's much-studied fire protection situation will be studied further by a special committee expected to be appointed at the special town meeting Nov. 14.

This committee, to be appointed by Moderator Glen N. Lempereur, will include Fire Chief Maurice Upham who has been a strong advocate of a second station on the southside.

The previous committee, which recently reported to the selectmen, after a two-year study, did not include any professional fireman.

The committee will be asked to "carry forward the work initiated by the selectmen's committee" and report as soon as possible as to when and where any additional stations should be built.

The previous committee recommended a new central station with an increased work force -- at some future time.

Town officials now believe it may be possible to have a joint study with Wellesley officials about a fire district for the area near the town lines.

They say no special legislation is needed at the state level. State law now provides for the setting up of such districts if two or more towns so desire.

The selectmen, in a letter to the question of fire protection is sufficiently serious as to warrant a fuller study before taking action.

The new committee would have

Wayland Twins Spilled in Crash, Car Drives Away

WAYLAND -- Life has a way of duplicating itself for twins-- and this was certainly so for a Wayland pair last Friday when their car threw them like a bucking bronco and then taking off on its own after a two-car crash.

Twins Jerry and Jerome Guenthner of 128 West Plain st., driving along Old Connecticut Path near Wallace rd., were involved in a collision with Donald H. Kimball of North av., Mendon.

Their car pitched them both to the roadway and proceeded, on its own, to make a U-turn and head back up the road. One of the boys took off after it but it had come to a stop 300 feet away before he could reach it.

The twins had some minor cuts and bruises. Mr. Kimball was uninjured. Cochituate Motors towed both cars from the scene. Officer George Driscoll investigated.

Just Plain Bad Luck

WESTON -- Key trouble gave one Weston resident a flat tire last Thursday.

The culprit, turned over to the police by the motorist, was a key ring, a key and a tag, with the number 362 on the tag and key. Owner may have same by calling at the police station -- no repair bills involved.

Historic Wayland B&M Depot Doomed

WAYLAND -- The historic Boston & Maine Railroad depot in Wayland Center has been condemned and will be razed within the next two weeks . . . unless someone comes to its rescue.

The Town Condemnation Committee at its meeting Monday voted to raze the decaying structure as part of its improvement program.

The Board of Selectmen is working on a plan for a town parking lot on the site where thousands of commuters over the decades have gone to Boston for business and pleasure.

Present at the meeting were Town Counsel Frank Kilburn, Selectman George Lewis, Fire Chief Francis Hartin, Health Agent Ronald Wood, Building Inspector Homer MacDonald.

Why $10,000 in Wayland? United Fund Gives Answer

WAYLAND -- Robert Haydock of Weston, Boston attorney and Greater Boston co-chairman of the 1961-62 United Fund Drive, addressed a meeting of Wayland United Fund workers at Vokes Players Theater last week.

Noting that United Fund giving in Wayland had increased in recent years, he urged Wayland to make every effort to continue the trend.

Wayland's quota: $10.000.

He cited statistics showing the tremendous increase in the demand for United Fund services without a corresponding increase in United Fund contributions.

He said the Boy Scout population in this area has nearly doubled with no corresponding increase in United Funds available for support of the scout program.

Mr. Haydock concluded on a note of optimism by observing that early contributions by a group of pace-setting corporations indicate a substantial improvement in United Fund giving, if the general public follows suit.

Robert Emmons of Wayland, worker education chairman of the Wayland drive, and William Porter of Wayland, residential solicitation chairman, also addressed the meeting.

The residential drive in Greater Boston opens Nov. 3. Small business solicitation is now under way.

$50,000 Anonymous Gift For Rivers Country Day

WESTON --Rivers Country Day School in Weston has received an anonymous gift of $50,000, it was announced by Mr. William B. Tyler, new president of the board of Trustees, at the annual meeting of the school's Corporation.

The gift is to be the opening contribution toward construction of a science building on the School's new 35-acre campus off Winter st. In making the announcement, Mr. Tyler appointed Frederick W. Haffenreffer, retiring president of the Board of Trustees, as chairman of the development committee.

Mr. Tyler also announced the following elections: as Corporation members -- Dr. George T. Bottomley, George V. Brown Jr., George Hemenway, Denholm Jacobs, Theodore R. Magoun, Mrs. Raymond B. Roberts, John L. Simonds, Allen D. Willard, and John P. Watson. Elected to the Board of Trustees for three-year terms were: Dr. Hathorn P. Brown, J. Edward Downes, Henri Prunaret, George W. Roberts, Miss Phyllis Scoboria, and Dr. Philip W. Walker.

Rivers Country Day School, founded in 1915, is a school for boys in Grades 6 to college. Until last year it was located in Brookline.

Turn Over a New Leaf Or the Burnt Out Case

WESTON -- Well, if you don't like potholes, don't make them. As simple as that.

Weston authorities warned householders this week that burning leaves in the roadway (or on their hottop driveways) are one sure way of making potholes -- come cold weather.

Conant-Rd. Detour To Start Nov.13

WESTON -- Residents can expect a two-to-three-week detour on Conant rd. to begin about Nov. 13, because of repairs to the Conant rd. bridge.

J. Ward Carter, town executive secretary, said the Boston & Maine Railroad workers will carry out the work paid for by the town. Town workers will work on improvements to the approaches at the same time.

Also -- an appropriation of $3000 is being sought at the special Nov. 14 town meeting to pay for much-needed sidewalks at this point.

Through traffic will be shut off at North av. and Church st. during repairs. Most traffic will detour over Church st.

Current repairs are being footed by the town. Any subsequent ones will be shared evenly with the railroad.

PLAN WAYLAND DRIVE -- Mapping plans for the drive to collect $10,000 for the United Fund in Wayland are (from left): Charles Goodhue, chairman; William Bridge, Mrs. Robert Charnock, Mrs. Kemp B. Reade and Edward Neufer; back row: Bradford Schofield, George Bogren, Robert Emmons, William Dewey 3d, and William Porter. The drive begins Nov. 3, continues throughout the month. (Town Crier Photo)

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

There Were Taverns in the Towns

An intelligent young woman not long ago expressed surprise to me that certain colonial figures of respectability should have kept taverns in Weston and Wayland: which calls attention to how the connotation of words changes with the years.

The good old word tavern, once denoting a respectable lodging place serving travelers with food and drink, was substituted for the word saloon of former ill repute, when the Massachusetts liquor statutes were rewritten at the end of prohibition.

So let us recall that in the old days, the tavern was an essential convenience to provide lodging and entertainment for the traveler on horseback, the teamster, drover, and later the stage coach rider, much as hotels and motels serve motorists and truckmen today.

In addition, since most towns lacked town halls, the tavern's public rooms were meeting places for public officials, courts and committees, in much the manner of Boston's Parker House today.

Sometimes, in areas where facilities for travelers were lacking, persons with large houses were almost forced into inn keeping by public pressure. Public funds, even, were provided at times, to set up "ordinaries" where they were lacking.

All these taverns sold rum, and that universal drink of travelers then, hot flip; and there were sometimes abuses. But the primary function of a tavern was to furnish food and shelter to the wayfarer.

In Weston and Wayland, as elsewhere, prominent men, selectmen, militia officers, deacons of the church might be innkeepers. For public inns flourished here in our towns, located not quite a day's journey on horseback from Boston, one of the three great centers of the colonies, and later, of the young republic.

We were on the high roads to and from Hartford, Springfield, Worcester; and Lancaster and the upper Connecticut Valley.

As to transportation, Sudbury farmers had used two - and four-ox carts almost from the beginning in 1638 to haul in hay and wood, and take loads of grain to Cakebread's mill; but for the first century and a half nearly all long distance travel was by horseback.

Stagecoaches, except in a few places, began regular runs only after the Revolution, and carriages were almost unknown in the countryside until the era of turnpike building which began about 1800.

Yet there were many people on the road who needed accommodation: judges, lawyers and litigants on the way to court; public officials, surveyors and merchants about their business, militia sent for duty in the almost continuous century of wars with the French and Indians.

Headed for the markets in Cambridge, Medford, Brighton and Boston came drovers from western Massachusetts, with cattle, sheep, hogs and turkeys.

In winter, when snow had filled the bad places in the roads, long lines of "sleys" with walking drivers crunched over them from up country, loaded "with butter, cheese, apple sauce, dressed hogs" and all sorts of country produce; to return with molasses, rum, tea, and drygoods. All these people stopped at our taverns.

So did French officers assisting our armies in the Revolution, and, later, British travelers bent on reporting the state of the new country. At the taverns where they stayed, the Frenchmen naturally noticed the fair complexions, comely rosy faces and neat dress of the innkeepers' daughters who served their meals, and commented on them in their published journals.

At the same time they warned their readers that here in New England "a tavernkeeper must be a respectable man, his daughters are well drest and have an air of decency and civility", all of which made essential an altogether different manner toward them from what French army men might be accustomed to in Europe.

The English who came to observe our mores in the early nineteenth century, in the words of one of them, found "The innkeepers," and others of similar standing "distinguished from the corresponding classes of my countrymen by greater acuteness and intelligence, more regular habits of reading, a wider range of ideas, and a greater freedom from prejudices, provincialism and vulgarity." They were constantly surprised at the number and character of books found in country inns.

So when we read of taverns kept in past centuries in Weston by families bearing such long respected names as Jones, Warren, Upham and others; and in Wayland by Parmenters, Reeves', Bents and Baldwins, perhaps it may be to us also a signal for "a wider range of ideas, and a greater freedom from prejudices"; as well as for a quite drastic dissociation of the once respectable word tavern from its present dubious context.

Did Fremont Fall -- Or Was He Pushed?

By SOUTHWORTH LANCASTER

THE NEWS: All was quiet along the Potomac . . . Oct. 31st -- 25th Mass. Infantry left Worcester for Annapolis. Bay State regiments went South pretty much in numerical order but for military reasons, the 25th leap-frogged the 23d and 24th . . .

Nov. 1 -- Old and sick, Lt. Gen. Winfield Scott retired. McClellan succeeded him as General-in-Chief, while retaining command of the Army of the Potomac. Lincoln thought this was a rather heavy load.

"I can do it all," responded McClellan coolly . . . Fremont's HQ ordered Grant, with Brig. Gen. C. F. Smith, to make demonstrations along the Mississippi, to forestall Confederate movement from Kentucky to Missouri. . .

Nov. 2 -- Fremont's HQ ordered Grant to drive off a Southern force under Brig. Gen. M. J. Thompson, menacing central Missouri. Grant sent a column under Col. Oglesby, but changed the mission from "drive off" to "destroy"... Maj. Gen. Fremont was replaced by Maj. Gen. David Hunter and returned to St. Louis . . . Rumors spread that Gen. Sherman was "upset in his mind". He had told Secretary of War Cameron that 200,000 men were needed to clear the Mississippi Valley. Cameron told reporters that the idea was crazy. The press took it from there.

BEHIND THE NEWS: Fremont's command arrangements were peculiar. In his absence, Headquarters were in charge of his adjutant (a captain), but some historians assert that the real chief of staff was his wife, Jessie Benton Fremont, daughter of Senator Thomas H. Benton and reputedly a power in Washington.

Orders were often mixed . . . Fremont's relief order was to have been withheld if he was about to give battle. The emissary, seeing no signs of serious action, delivered the order. Fremont's adherents later alleged that Gen. Hunter, a Regular officer, forced the issue.

This was untrue, but the incident was characteristic of the early days of the War. . . . Brig. Gen. Smith had been Commandant of Cadets during Grant's West Point days. Later he came under Grant's orders, an unusual circumstance, and served loyally, also an unusual occurrence in an era of tender feelings and rampant jealousy . . . The complex orders of Nov. 1st and 2d introduced Grant to the vagaries of a higher command, but gave him valuable experience. In strengthening the orders he gave to Oglesby, he showed an early indication of the aggressiveness he afterwards became famous for.

A third order from Fremont's confused headquarters was already in the making. It would present Grant with a fresh problem and would lead to the Battle of Belmont, an important step in his career... Sherman, unhappy in his assignment, was betrayed by his impulsive nature and ready tongue. He was not far wrong in his estimate of the size of the force required, but the country was still unprepared to face realities while he lacked the tact to state a case in easy terms.

In other ways, he had antagonized war correspondents and the press was eager to strike back in any way that offered. In the end, matters straightened themselves; meantime, he was in danger of ruin.

Well, It's Like This . . .

No one in this area could fail to notice the news recently that a jetliner skidded at Logan Airport into Boston Harbor. Too many of us travel by plane. We automatically absorb such news. But how many noticed that among the first on the scene were the Salvation Army and the Red Cross?

Not many, we'll wager. But right now that speedy response should mean something for us all. For now is the season when we're writing checks for the United Fund, the agency responsible for such helpful services.

Now wait a minute---

Don't reach for your checkbook without thinking.

Maybe you're like us: a little tired of giving without thinking.

Well, we looked into it--tried to answer a few of the questions that--well, yes, bothered us.

1--How much of this money we give actually goes to these do-good agencies?

Just about 93 percent of what goes to the charities. That includes expenses for the campaign--and year-round expenses of the U.F....And that is far below the average nationally.

2--Maybe Wayland would do better alone--or maybe each of these charities would do better on its own?

Look at it this way: The complexities of modern life make it highly impractical to conduct programs of medical research, disaster relief, servicemen's assistance, etc. on a strictly local basis.

Just take hospitals. Wayland has none. But 821 Wayland residents were admitted to hospitals in Greater Boston last year--hospitals that received more than $750,000 in direct support from U.F.

As for a drive for each agency, it would probably double the cost of collection and day-to-day expenses of the agencies. Not to mention the wear and tear on our pocketbooks...and nerves for each separate solicitor.

3--If I don't favor one of the U.F. agencies, Must I support it anway?

No. Simply say so on the back of your concontribution card--and your wishes will be respected.

As for cutting up the pie, an examination of the U.F. methods of operations reveals a fair allotment, based on procedures that are every bit as demanding of efficiency as is our town finance committe's efforts. That shoud be some assurance.

We're giving. We hope you will, too--for a reason.

ledge where one can be free from water or into a hillside?

Either way is expensive, although the hillside plan may prove more expensive than drilling downward.

Such a shelter might be open to a 50 - 50 financial arrangement with Washington in the near future, selectmen feel.

As for the water supply, already well protected since it comes from deep wells, there is the further concern that some type of protective superstructure may be needed to keep fallout out of the well. An emergency generator may also be needed.

The Water Department may have a solution to this by town meeting time.

Other articles:

1--Two-precinct voting setup.

2--Appropriate $3500 for "several matters of litigation" being handled by the town counsel.

3--Another $3000 for six-foot sidewalks with fence to be added to the Conant rd. bridge project about to get under way. Originally, $6000 was voted for the project -- without sidewalks.

4--Appropriation of $300 for inspection of gas piping and appliances . . . to conform to state law.

5--Fire protection study.

6--Authorization for the acquisition by purchase, eminent domain or gift a parcel of one-quarter acre owned by the Weston Athletic Assn. and another small parcel owned by Charles O. Richardson, both on the northeast corner of School st. and Post rd. bypass. Also funds for improvement and demolition.

And the reason: to provide a public park.

Buildings there now: Old locker room and swimming pool. Title to the land and structures not legally clear. Requested: $1500.

7 & 8--Funds to relay water mains and to provide expenses for the Water Department for the current year. This affects the Water Blanket extensions account Revolving account now empty and requests in hand.

Letters To The Editor

A Worthwhile Investment For Only $10,000 . . .

To the Editor:

I appreciate the opportunity through your newspaper to direct the attention of the Citizens of Wayland once again to that great humanitarian community effort which we know as the United Fund and to ask the residents and small businessmen of Wayland to respond to its appeal more generously then ever before.

Beginning Nov.3 an unpaid volunteer organization of 200 Wayland residents will begin solicitation of their neighbors who have not had an opportunity to contribute through employee payroll deduction plans.

The financial objective of the Wayland drive this year is $10,000. This is somewhat higher than any previous goal or achievement for our town, but in view of the tremendous increase in the need for the services of the Funds participating organizations, it is imperative we make every effort to achieve, if not surpass, it.

Every United Fund solicitor in Wayland is equipped with a facts booklet and other material which describe the activities of member agencies and how the proceeds of United Fund giving are allocated.

Every Wayland resident called upon by a United Fund solicitor in the next two weeks owes it to himself and to his neighbor to examine the facts of the United Fund before he makes his commitment.

And the fact is that the United Fund does contribute directly to the operations of several Wayland organizations, including the Wayland Junior Town House (serving about 1200 youngsters), the Girl Scouts (451 youngsters) the Boy Scouts (488 youngsters), and the Camp Fire Girls (114 youngsters). Furthermore, more than 100 families in Wayland were served last year by such out-of-town United Fund agencies as the Boston Legal Aid Society, the Family Service Assn. of Greater Boston, the Wellesley Friendly Aid Assn., the Judge Baker Guidance Center, The Boys Club of Waltham, Inc. and the Boston, Cambridge and Newton Y.M.C.A.

"People Helping People" is the current slogan of the United Fund and it is aptly descriptive of the Fund's objectives and activities; but people helping people is old-hat in this country.

I am confident that the residents of Wayland will carry on the tradition of people helping people by their support of this year's United Fund effort.

Sincerely,
Chuck Goodhue
Chairman
Wayland United Fund
Committee

Weston Youth Among 13 to Rate Advanced Classes

WESTON -- Richard Lehne of Weston, now a student at Reed College in Oregon, earned high honors in American history and credit in mathematics on the Advanced Placement Examinations of the College Entrance Board.

He is one of 13 Cambridge School students of the Class of 1961 who have an opportunity to take advanced courses as college freshmen this fall as a result of their success in the Advanced Placement Examinations.

On 20 tests, equivalent to rigorous final examinations in college freshman courses, the Cambridge students made honors or high honors 11 times and earned credit in freshmen level test in every case.

Something About Birds

BY CHARLOTTE E. SMITH

WESTON -- There was a good migration of Canada geese on the night of Oct. 19/20--the biggest flock being heard over Weston just at midnight (Gross, Patterson, Holmes), smaller numbers earlier in the evening and again along toward morning. The so-called "crazy season" of ruffed grouse appears to have started. On Oct. 18, Mrs. D.R.Davidson, Golden Ball rd., found one dead in her yard where it had apparently flown into a wire fence; and another was picked up on Oct. 22 by T. C. Clarke at the junior high school, probably killed by flying against a window.

Migrant robins continued to be very numerous and some were heard singing on the warm morning of Oct. 19 (Smith). Mrs. A. Johnson, Baker's Hill rd., reports that she has been seeing 5 bluebirds around her home recently; cedar waxwings were noted Oct. 18-19 on King's Grant rd. and Westland rd. (Smith); and golden-crowned kinglets have been increasing.

Myrtle warblers are still being seen (Hills, Hayes, Smith - Oct 25), but in much smaller numbers than in the previous week. On Oct. 19, when the temperature was in the 80's, Mrs. L. S. Hayes, Gypsy Trail, saw one carrying a small twig into a wisteria vine, as if the warm weather was giving it ideas of nesting!

The only other warbler reported was a single blackpoll which visited Mrs. Hayes' birdbath on Oct. 24. A meadowlark was seen by Mrs. H. B. Atkins, King's Grant rd., on Oct. 20, then two or three more with a flock of starlings on the following day; and N. B. Saunders, Ellis rd., saw three on Oct. 24.

Dr. & Mrs. Miles Hanson Jr., Conant rd., had an exciting view of a male cardinal in their yard (with blue jays) on Oct. 21, and a little later a female appeared--very likely the same on seen by Mrs. W. Noyes on Oct. 18.

Mr. & Mrs. R. M. Hills, South av., had a large flock of pine siskins in evergreen trees around their house on Oct. 22, and several were still present the next day.

Great Books Course Nov.7

WESTON -- The next meeting of the Great Books group will be at 8 P.M. next Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Earl Harvey, 63 Pinecroft rd., Weston. The discussion will be on The Odyssey, Homer. Anyone wishing to sit in on the discussion is welcome. Please call Mrs. Harvey TW4-3783.

Weston Police Help On Lincoln Disappearance

WESTON -- Police Chief Frank O. Shaw and members of the department have conducted a search for clues to the Lincoln housewife's disappearance.

Weston police have checked along the back roads and in wooded areas and in vacant barns and houses.

Charity is injurious unless it helps the recipient to become independent of it.

Loker Book Fair At School Nov.6-10

WAYLAND -- The Fourth Annual Book Fair, sponsored by the Loker School PTA for the benefit of the school libraries, will be held Nov. 6 - 10 at the school. Loker children will have an opportunity to browse through the fine display of books for children and young adults and to indicate choices for their parents to order.

Loker fathers and mothers will have an opportunity to "book-browse" and to place their orders with Fair committee members next Wednesday evening, starting at 7 p.m. preceding the regular PTA meeting. Orders will also be taken during school hours on Thursday and Friday, Nov. 9 and 10.

$340 worth of new books for the school libraries were purchased last year from Book Fair profits. It is hoped that full support from all parents can increase the amount this year.

Serving on the arrangements committee with Mrs. Freedman are Mrs. Florence Leffler, co-chairman; Mrs. Christos Stergis art direction and Mrs. Donald Klein, publicity.

Wayland Downs Ashland, 16-0

WAYLAND -- Ralph Salvati's Wayland High forces are beginning to find their power, Last week, two sustained drives of 93 and 53 yards gave them the edge over Ashland High, 16-0.

Dwight Perodeau sneaked through the line for the first score from the four in the first period and Bob Kent crashed through for the points after. Then in the third period, Wayland took over on its 47 in an exchange of punts and in eight plays had scored again.

A Perodeau-to-Kent pass ate up 33 yards on this advance and Kent caught a Tony Bova pass in the end zone for 10 yards and another TD. Perodeau rushed the extra points.

Wayland's record, after a slow start due to injuries, now stands at 3-2.

NEXT--Saturday at 2 at Bedford.

First Parish in Wayland To Dedicate Organ Sunday

WAYLAND -- Dedication of a new pipe organ in the First Parish Church, Wayland, with a recital and special service at 4:30 p.m. Sunday, will mark another major occasion in the long history of the old meeting house facing the town green.

The new organ is the fourth for the church which was built in 1814 and dedicated in January 1815. The first, a small 3-stop organ bought in 1831, satisfied the congregation for 35 years. Another, installed in 1866, was destroyed in a fire which damaged the church about 1930.

In the depression year of 1933 the congregation purchased a second-hand Estey organ which remained in use until the past summer. Its strains came to be associated by many present-day residents of Wayland with weddding marches, funeral services, Christmas vespers, and Sunday morning worship.

The new organ was built in Schwarzach, Austria, by the Rieger OrganCompany. It is constructed according to the mechanical and tonal principles of the 18th Century organs of Europe. These include tracker action, direct mechanical connection between keys and pipe valves; slider chests; low wind pressure; free-standing construction, with pipes not enclosed in swell boxes or chambers, but backed by cases which project the sound forward. The audible effect of the two-manual and pedal, 11-stop instrument is one of brilliance and lightness.

Mrs. Carolyn Brock, New England Conservatory graduate, has recently been appointed organist and choir director.

Wayland Firemen Join 'Key Club'

WAYLAND -- Wayland firemen joined the key club more or less last week, helping no less than four homeowners back into their houses in what must of been a harried week.

On Thursday at 1:15 p.m. came the first call on Loblolly lane, then on Friday about the same time (1:37 p.m.) on Glezen lane, on Saturday at 3:22 p.m. on Old Connecticut Path and finally 9:16 Sunday night helping a householder into a Concord rd. home.

Other calls included a stubborn brush fire on Forest Hills rd. from 4:36 a.m. to 8:30 a.m. Tuesday; on Friday at 8:47 a.m. Edison wires down on Loker st. and at 8:49 a.m., a sequel: smoke in the boiler room of the Loker Street School as a result of this power failure.

On Sunday at 5:01 p.m. a grass fire on Wheelock rd.; on Tuesday at 1:58 a.m., auto fire at 225 Cochituate rd.: car virtually demolished; and at 12:05 p.m., a brush fire on Draper rd. opposite Ripley's Orchard.

Co-Op Announces Its 3d Expansion — In Framingham

FRAMINGHAM -- The Co-Op. Inc., has opened its third supermarket...this one in Framingham.

General Manager, Warren D. Brown, in announcing the third expansion of the consumer cooperative since its inception in Natick in 1949, said, "I am certain that a consumer business organization has a vital place in our ecomony."

In addition to the new store at Franklin st. and Mt. Wayte ave., Framingham, the Co-op has its colonial-styled store in the Village Shopper, Wayland, its original store in Natick and fuel oil plant opened in 1955.

The new store is part of a shopping center owned by the cooperative and offers a community meeting room, a demonstration kitchen and public rest rooms. A cooperative-owned service station is part of this expansion.

With a 10 percent growth in members noted last year, the cooperative now has more than 5600 members in Eastern Massachusetts and serves more than 50,000 residents in the area.

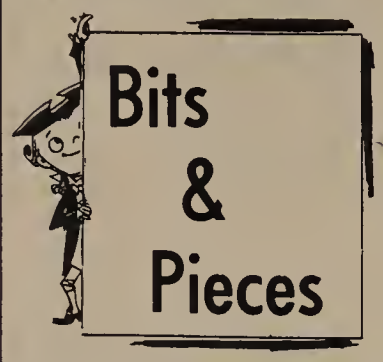
Early-to-School Schedule Broadens Outside Activities

WESTON -- Weston elementary schools are now on a new schedule which will provide a more effective teaching-learning situation without detracting from the present number of school hours per week.

School will begin every day at 8:45 instead of 9. On Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, youngsters will be dismissed at 3:15. On Tuesday and Thursday they will be dismissed at 1:30.

First pick up of pupils by buses will be at 8:15 instead of 8:30 a.m.



Because of earlier starting and an adjustment in recess periods, there will be no reduction of instructional time under the new schedule.

Under the new program, parents will be able to plan outside appointments for music lessons, doctor's visits, etc., on Tuesdays and Thursdays. This will reduce the number of interruptions currently made in the school program.

In addition, teachers will have three and one half hours of additional planning, consultation and conference time each week. This will enable members of the faculty to keep abreast of the latest techniques currently employed in the field of education and to adapt those they deem suitable to Weston's needs.

Accordion Plan activities, which are being carried out extensively, require much time and effort. These large blocks of time on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons will permit faculty members to revise and evaluate their curriculum, institute needed changes and work together toward maximum utilization of teacher strengths and student abilities.

He who wants to persuade should put his trust, not in the right argument, but in the right word.
- Joseph Conrad

Things we've never understood: Why is it some radio stations can give you the news in a clear bell-like tone. Very satisfactory... understandable. Then, they turn you over to Bill Floozis "at the scene" and Bill sounds like he's talking into a box full of blankets.

* * *

Reading a newspaper recently (not The Crier) we ran across a picture of some candidate for office posed with 14 of his 15 children. And next to it: a plea from the Planned Parenthood League.

* * *

Another interesting side-by-side: "Couple Held in Nudist Camp Charge." Then: "Some Neighbors Don't Like Fun."

History by the 3-year-old: "You know...you know...there's a boy named Khroooshev who lives in a White House. And he...he...he wets his bed and his mother says she's going to spank him. Yes..."

* * *

That was a nice little note Margery Michelmore had from President Kennedy the other day. And--there is no truth he wrote it all on a postcard. (Just forgot to seal the envelope, that's all.)

* * *

Can we go international for a mement? Maybe this would be the time to remind Nikita Khrushchev of Machiavelli's remark: "I never liquidate old friends; I liquidate new enemies."

* * *

As for the Wayland High School football field --this is the first time, they say, the building committee has been known to go off the deep end...on all four sides. One solution: midget football. And to be safe, with six-man teams.

Some Wayland fans are suggesting that nothing be done to the field until next year (after spring practice), what with the way the team is making out this year.

Foster, Rizzo Lead Weston

WESTON -- It looked like curtains for high-flying Weston High Saturday after that 100 -yard runback of an interception gave Westwood High a first-period, 8-0 lead.

But led by Buddy Foster's superior pitching and co-captain Bill Rizzo's running, Weston snapped back with five touchdowns in the last three periods to earn a 36-14 victory and run its record to 5-1.

Climaxing a 98-yard march in the second period, Foster carried over from the 7 on a keep play and then flipped to Russ Hills for two points after. Rizzo reeled off 33- and 22-yard runs along the way.

Starting Weston's 28-point second half, Bob Aker hit quarterback Bill Buzzell with a hard tackle in the end zone and Ted Herrick was right there to fall on the resulting fumble for Weston's second score. A few minutes later, Bob Trowbridge swept over from the 21 in a neat bit of dodgem in the Westwood backfield.

Then in the fourth period, Bob Trowbridge returned a Westwood punt 30 yards to the losers' 46. A pass to Bob D'Antonio gained 16 and Trowbridge followed with a 21-yard sweep to the 9. Rizzo shot off tackle to score. Foster carried around end for two points.

D'Antonio intercepted a Westwood pass on his 17 and returned it to the Weston 44. John Trowbridge then carried 26 yards to the loser's 30 then again for 25 to the 5 where Rizzo swept around left end for the TD. A Foster-to-Hills extra-point pass finished the scoring for the day.

Foster connected on 10 out 13 pass plays in what Coach George Harris described as "the best game I've seen here"

Fair Housing Group In Weston Meets Nov.7

WESTON -- The Weston Fair Housing Practices Committee will hold a meeting for its members on next Tuesday at 8 at St. Peter's Church in Weston. The film "All The Way Home" will be shown with a discussion following the Film.

Teen-Agers' Free Enterprise Triples Weston Jimmy Fund

WESTON -- Talk about free enterprise. Two Weston brothers, with nothing better to do this summer, more than tripled the regular Jimmy Fund collection with a house-to-house collection.

Brought in by Jim Loder, 17, and his brother, Ben, 10, with the occasional help of neighborhood youngsters, was $137.47, according to Police Chief Frank O. Shaw. That's twice the $66.67 collected in cans, according to Chief Shaw. The boys are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Loder of 100 Montvale rd.

Chief Shaw said Jim came into the station and offered to make a special canvass -- and more than doubled the usual collection.

Together with 89 cents from the Panther Club of Golden Ball rd., Chief Shaw said this year's collection amounted to $205.03, far above the usual $60-plus.

Miss Alice Atwood

WAYLAND -- Funeral services for Miss Alice B. Atwood, 92, of West Commonwealth rd., who died Friday at the Leonard Morse Hospital, took place in the Gibbs Memorial Funeral Home on Sunday at 1 p.m. with Rev. Robert K. Jones, pastor of the Cochituate Methodist Church officiating.

A native of Abington, she was born Sept. 5, 1869, a daughter of the late Elijah and Mary E. (Holmes) Atwood and had lived in the community for over 70 years.

She leaves a brother Arthur Atwood of Munson and a grand niece, Mrs. Homer Smith of Norwich, Conn.

Think the Blue Laws are getting bad again? Well see just how bad they can get - PAGE 9.

Trouble Spot Lighting to Be Studiedin Wayland

WAYLAND -- A study of the lighting needs of Wayland will be undertaken according to a plan suggested by Frank S. Tarr at the Monday meeting of the Selectmen. Mr. Tarr cited the need to get the advice of the Boston Edison experts to determine what would be adequate lighting in several trouble spots.

To be considered are West and East Plain sts., Commonwealth rd., east and west, Old Connecticut Path, Rte. 20 and Main st. from Rte. 27 to the Lincoln line. The feasability of using blue mercury vapor lights would be considered.

This study was triggered by an increase of requests by Wayland citizens for more adequate lighting in several areas, particularly in so-called "trouble" spots.

Robert O'Connell of King st., Wayland, was appointed to the vacancy in the police Department made by the recent resignation of John C. Hodges. Patrolman O'Connell was born and has lived in Wayland with the exception of his service with the U. S. Navy. He graduated from the Wayland High School in 1958.

THREE-CAR CRASH AT WEDGEE CORNER -- Three cars were smashed up at the corner of Pelham Island rd. and Rte. 27 in Wayland Center last Friday during the I-dare-you-to-make-a-move rush hour crush. Two persons wee injured. Traffic was tied up for more than half an hour. Traffic is normally jammed right at this spot.
(Town Crier Photo)

2 Hurt in Rush-Hour Crash At Wedgee Corner, Wayland

WAYLAND -- Two persons were injured in a three-car crash during the Friday rush hour at "Wedgee Corner" in Wayland Center.

The normal 5 o'clock I-dare-you - to - make - the - next - move traffic jam was in progress when Mrs. Marilyn D. Evans of 17 Shermanbridge rd., Wayland, attempted to cross from Millbrook rd. into Pelham Island rd.

In some manner, police said, Mrs. Evans' car and one operated by Andre J. Lane of 10 Edgewood av., Natick, collided and Mrs. Evans' car also was in collision with one operated by Mrs. Bernice C. Sherwood of 16 Loblolly lane.

Traffic trying to go two ways on Pelham Island rd. triangle becomes enmeshed with Rte. 27 traffic daily with frequent near misses.

The absence of a policemen to unsort this mess and the desire to "make" the Rte. 20 traffic light about 100 feet away complicates matters.

With this result: traffic on Pelham Island rd. backs up onto Rte. 20, further blocking east-west traffic.

Also: cars attempting to enter the narrow Pelham roadway frequently thread their way right up to the grille of an east-bound car. Hence: Wedgee Corner.

Mrs. Evans told police she had injured her neck and Mr. Lane reported bumps around the left eye. He said he was starting up (going south on Rte. 27) when, blinded by traffic, he suddenly saw Mrs. Evans' car.

Now Wellesley's Willing To Talk Fire 'Action' If Weston Votes Study

WESTON -- Wellesley is back in the Weston fire picture.

Wellesley Selectmen are willing to discuss possible future "joint action . . . in furnishing fire protection," Weston Selectman Chairman Edward M. Dickson announced ths week.

Receipt of a letter from John T. Griffin, Wellesley executive secretary, revealed that the Wellesley Board of Fire Engineers (that's the Selectmen with another hat) were standing by to see what Weston did at its special town meeting next Tuesday at 8 at the Town House.

Mr. Griffin said, in part that if the town meeting "votes to accept a committee to study and report on the possibility of joint action by the towns of Weston and Wellesley, in furnishing fire protection, we shall be glad to appoint a similar committee of Wellesley residents to work in

Civic Assn. Opposes C.D. Shelter, Warns 'Go Easy' on Fire Study

WESTON -- The Weston Civic Assn. asks for a "go easy" approach on the fire study and Civil Defense shelter proposals at next Tuesday's town meeting at the Town House at 8.

Hillard W. Welch, president, said, the association feels:

1--It's too early to know what the Federal government requires in underground shelters for C.D. and the chance of money wasted on an unapproved shelter is too great for action now.

2--Sufficient thought has not been given to determine whether the town should have a central fire and police building, rather than a new fire station.

The society meets tonight at 8 at the lower Town House to hear Dr. Anthony Brackett, superintendent of schools, explain how the department evaluates its curriculum.

Mr. Welch pointed out that the association was anxious to make

Homework Upsets Weston Firemen

WESTON -- Well, you could've knocked the Weston firemen over with the spray from a garden hose . . . but that smelled like smoke.

And smoke it was, at 4:15 a.m. Monday -- coming from downstairs.

Quick, like in a real fire, down the pole they slid . . . to a real fire in the wiring of their soft-drink machine. With the CO-2 extinguisher they had it out in no time but it wasn't until breakfast time they were sure it wasn't all a bad dream.

Woman's Whim Walls Wellesley in, Weston Out

AND THAT WALL IS SOLID -- Cement is the tie that binds this stonewall together where Evergreen rd. used to pass freely from Weston and Wellesley and back again. This driver just can't figure what's happened.
(Photo by Larry Forman)

WELLESLEY - WESTON LINE (somewhat altered) -- When Mrs. Evelyn Vester says stop -- she means just that.

To prove she means what she says and has the power to make it stick, she had a stone wall erected right across Evergreen rd.

Most people thought that was a thoroughfare -- at least until Mrs. Vester's orders brought the wall into being . . . and halted traffic on Evergreen rd. in both towns.

Now, The Curious who just refuse to believe the rumors drive up periodically to look, shake their heads and drive away.

But no one gets through. That wall is solid. And it's cemented. And it's growing.

It's there to stay, and the traffic pattern is changing hereabouts.

Mrs. Vester's claim, backed up by quick official checks, is that less than 20 years ago a contractor moved the wall on her land to get his equipment through.

Over the years a road grew up there. And in recent years nearby residents contributed $1600 ($100-plus a piece) to pave it.

Recently, another builder has cut through a road which enables motorists to make the border-crossing without using Evergreen rd.

But Mrs. Vester has scotched all that. And if you think you're going through, you're going to learn some lessons even the East Germans haven't been able to get across in Berlin.

Conant Rd. Bridge 'Out For Repairs' — Monday

WESTON -- Note to commuters (and others): don't try to make that run over the Conant rd. bridge after Monday.

For about three weeks, starting Monday morning the bridge will be "out" to through traffic.

An appropriation is being sought to construct a six-foot sidewalk as well as improve the bridge and its approach. The request will come up at the special town meeting Tuesday at 8 p.m.

It's Un-Heard of—Historical Society Out on a Limb

BY BETTY GEIGER

WAYLAND -- Have you Heard the latest installment of Wayland's two-year melodrama based on a simple plot to move a house? This week's episode finds the cast of characters in a quandary about Who Will Cut the Limb and Where Will the Money Come From?

The Wayland Hysterical Society, pardon, Historical Society, now wants the town to bear the cost of trimming trees and they rightfully cite Sec. 5 - Chapt. 87 of General Laws as amended in 1961 to put the burden on the town.

The town, through the voices of the Selectmen and town counsel Frank Kilburn, will agree to pay for the actual cutting if the society will pay for the cost of supervising the work BUT - the plot thickens.

"Why should we trim branches and cut limbs if we have no assurance that the Heard House will really be moved?" says one of the leading men, Mr. Kilburn. "The Davey Company has no contract with the Historical Society. There are no serious negotiations evident to us yet," he stated.

"We need a letter from Richard Lincoln (a strong supporting character in the drama) to assure the town that the Davey Company has actually been hired, that a mover has been hired, and a definite statement as to WHEN the house will be moved. We need assurance

Lack of News Good -- It Prevented War

By SOUTHWORTH LANCASTER

(November 5 - 11, 1861)

THE NEWS: Nov. 6 -- On orders from Fremont's HQ to intercept supposed Confederate move from Kentucy across to Missouri, Grant sailed down the Mississippi River from Cairo, Ill., with 3114 men in transports, escorted by two gunboats.

Nov. 7 -- Landing at Belmont, Mo., Grant surprised and routed five regiments under Brig. Gen. Gideon J. Pillow.

When Grant's raw troops, elated by apparent success, got out of hand, Pillow struck back and drove the Federals into their transports. The gunboats covered the withdrawal but Grant narrowly escaped capture . . .

A naval fleet under Flag-officer S. J. DuPont successfully landed three Union brigades commanded by Brig. Gen. Thos. W. Sherman ("the other Sherman") at Port Royal, S.C., between Charleston and Savannah.

Nov. 8 -- Capt. Charles Wilkes in USS San Jacinto stopped the British steamer Trent at sea and seized James M. Mason and John Slidell, Confederate emissaries en route to England.

Nov. 10 -- Col. William R. Lee and Maj. Paul J. Revere, 20th Mass., captives since Ball's Bluff, were among seven hostages sentenced to death by Confederates if the Federal Government should execute as pirates the captured crew of a Southern ocean raider.

BEHIND THE NEWS: Despite his official relief, Fremont's HQ somehow continued to function and already had ordered Grant to send a force into central Missouri.

Grant now had to make new dispositions, including the recall of the Missouri force. The Confederate move from Kentucky turned out to be wholly imaginary, but Grant acted with characteristic vigor and attacked the most likely spot.

Belmont was at best a drawn battle, but it gave Grant valuable experience in dealing with the vagaries of a higher command and in the tactical handling of troops . . . The Confederates had detected the Port Royal expedition but without a navy, the attack could not be stopped. The move was strategically sound, a part of the general plan to secure coastal strong points, but it never was properly exploited and in the end merely tied up troops which could better have been used elsewhere.

Brig. Gen. Thos. F. Drayton commanded the Confederate shore defenses. His brother, Capt. Percival Drayton, USN, commanded a ship in the attacking fleet . . . The Trent incident enraged England, but news traveled slowly and by the time tidings had reached London, the edge had been taken off.

Had the Atlantic cable been in existence, war might easily have resulted.

But even Washington remained in ignorance for another week . . . The Union policy was non-recognition of the Confederate government and consequently captured sea-raiders could be treated as pirates.

Southern commerce-destroyers already were wreaking havoc with Northern-owned shipping, a menace which the Lincoln administration fully understood.

Sen. Charles Sumner and Gov. John A. Andrew of Massachusetts persuaded Washington to drop the charge of piracy, but meantime the officer-hostages lived through harrowing weeks; eventually they were exchanged and returned to duty.

After the war, Lee became a director of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

A Most Wild, Cruel, Fierce Distemper

Not many of my readers, I imagine, have ever seen a pockmarked person. A half century ago, you might occasionally meet a Polish or Eastern European immigrant whose face was deeply pitted with pockmarks.

Yet smallpox was once a terrible scourge in New England, dreaded far more than cancer or polio, for example, are today.

Not only was the pox a noisome, and deadly disease, with no known cure, but it was highly contagious; and as likely to strike an aristocratic, even a royal family, as a pauper's. The only escape lay in flight, and the fleeing ones often carried infection to new areas. With no inherited resistance such as the whites had, pox swept off the Indians by the thousands, but the whites suffered shocking death rates also, in colonial times.

The pox victims were shunted off to isolated makeshift buildings, where they suffered, and often died, with attention only from the bravest. Three such hospitals are recorded in isolated parts of East Sudbury, now Wayland; and Weston paid heavily for treatment of a pox patient as late as 1776. The dead were not permitted to be buried in the cemeteries; in Wayland they found rest in what became known as "The Pox Pasture", and over on Pelham Island.

In 1721, when after a lapse of 19 years, the awful disease reappeared in the port town of Boston, those who could fled into the country. In the town the plague spread and deaths mounted.

Help finally appeared from an altogether unexpected source. The Rev. Cotton Mather, a leading divine, and son of the venerable Rev. Increase Mather, president of Harvard, had learned through his connection with the Royal Philosophical Society of London that in the Levant, (we now call it the Near East) smallpox was being controlled by inoculation. The respected minister addressed a circular letter to all the physicians of Boston vouching for the practice as "a MOST successful and allowable method of preventing death, and many other grievous miseries by the small pox." "Men of honour, learning and incontestable veracity," he wrote, "agree - of it's being used with constant success in the Levant . . . upon many thousands . . . And when regularly used, it yet appears not that even one person miscarried of it or had the small pox after it."

Most of Boston's physicians violently opposed this incursion by the clergy into their field, and the proposed remedy. On one only, Dr. Zabdiel Boylston, did the letter have a favorable effect. A scientifically minded man, and a Fellow of the Royal Society of England, he resolved to try the new treatment, come what might.

Dr. Boylston tells how, like Abraham offering up his son Isaac, on June 26, 1671, he "first inoculated my own son Thomas of about six years old, then my negro man Jack, 36, and his son Jackey 2 1/2." This was with what we would now call live virus, with no directions or observation to guide him, and transmitting the disease to healthy persons! (This was not the mild cowpox vaccine now used. That came much later).

After a few days, pox symptoms appeared on the boy; after a week they began to be severe. On the ninth day the anxious father felt it best to give his son " a vomit." Soon the symptoms began to abate, and in a few days the boy was well again. The negro servant and his son also recovered.

Meantime, as news of the doctor's action spread the "Clamour or rather, Rage of the People against it grew so violent that I was put into a very great Fright," the doctor confesses; but he kept on. On July 17 he inoculated his son John, 13; a week later, his son Zabdiel; on Sept. 6, daughters Jerusha, Mary and Elizabeth. All survived, though some were quite ill.

The violent opposition of the other doctors and of the populace caused the Selectmen of the town to pass a strong resolve against the practice of inoculation. Dr. Boylston continued, however, and as nearly all his patients got well, while among the rest of the town the disease continued to rage, more and more people decided to risk the new method. The six clergy of the town supported him fully. At Cambridge, Dr. Roby (an ancestor of Wayland's Dr. Roby?) and a Roxbury doctor, also did some inoculation.

Only six of all the inoculated patients died, out of a total of 246, whereas, says Dr. Boylston "5759 persons in Boston had Small Pox the natural way, out of which number died 1844." But he laments "How difficult it is to set Truth in a clear light . . . I have been basely used and treated by some who were enemies of this method and have suffered much in my Reputation and in my Business . . . for beginning and carrying on this practice in New England" (and in America, we may add).

When you drive or shop on Boylston Street, you can think of and thank the brave doctor. His own thanks went higher. He wrote: "And it is, and shall be acknowledged, to the Praise and Glory of God! that . . . a most wild, cruel, fierce, and violent Distemper and which has destroy'd millions of lives, is now . . . become tractable, safe, and gentle."

Letters To The Editor

Good Work Not Unnoticed

To the Editor:

Every day this summer and fall while riding to work between the hour of 7:30 to 7:45 a.m. along School st. there was an individual with a large basket over his shoulder and a stick with a nail on the end of it picking up papers on both sides of the street in front of what was the high schol.

I do not know his name but the way he was carrying on his job with a brisk walk unmindful of the cars going by, made a great impression on me.

I could not help but think that were Miss Marian Case alive she would have called him one of her "Happy Warriors" and would have been especially pleased that the grounds of her mother's home and later hers and Miss Louise's were being well taken care of.

This man, whoever he is, has a pride in his job and the joy which is imparted to the individual who sees him, is there to see.

As a graduate of the Weston High School in the Class of 1917, I should like to publicly commend this gentlemen and let him know that his efforts to keep the grounds around the school looking neat, did not go unnoticed.

I am sure that there must be others who have observed this same high calibre of performance as I did.

Very truly yours,
Philip F. Coburn

Rombas Has Yule Cards

To the Editor:

The Weston Rombas Affiliation wishes to thank the staff of the Town Crier for their assistance in making the ski movie a success on Oct. 21. We are very grateful for your support of our International Students Exchange Program.

As you know, our budget depends on the revenue from such events as well as the proceeds from the sale of Christmas cards -- plus contributions from interested citizens.

Our Christmas cards are now available at 10 cents each at the Weston banks. They were designed this year by Barbara Clifton of Weston and are printed in a bright red on white stock, with the Christmas Greeting expressed in French, Norwegian and Portuguese (the language of this year's foreign students). Anyone interested in quantity orders of these cards should call Mrs. Bonner at TW 3-4346.

Tentative future plans this year include a foreign film to be shown sometime after Jan. 1, as well as a series of afternoon children's film cartoons to enliven the Spring school recess.

Sincerely yours,
Ralph H. Griffin

Maybe Not a Genius, But. .

We know this is going to bring a chorus of I-told-you-sos and Well-I-nevers. But we'll mention it just the same. It concerns so many of us.

"There seems to be no relation between the degree of intelligence and a person's creativity."

Some of the most creative persons in America haven't been grade-getters.

And get this -- some top research scientists have averaged B to C, hardly enough to get them into any self-respecting graduate school today. And architects: about a B average.

The information comes from the Institute of Personality Assessment and Research, a group at the University of California operating under a grant from the Carnegie Corp.

And although the researchers haven't revealed any names of some of their top-drawer guinea pigs, the "creators" have let it slip out their identities: Mac Kinlay Kantor, William Carlos Williams, Truman Capote and Max Shulman. Scientists and bankers and lawyers were not so outspoken.

Said the Institute in a tentative finding (its study is continuing):

" Many (of those studied) don't have the academic record that would get them admitted to most graduate schools today.

"By our methods of academic selection in graduate schools, we are missing some of the individuals with high creative potential."

And at another point:

"There seems to be no relation between the degree of intelligence and a person's creativity. A certain amount of intelligence is apparently necessary for creativity, but above that it doesn't make much difference.

"The threshhold seems to be an I.Q. of about 120."

One of our many thoughts of this subject: This should interest parents who've been worrying about how Johnny takes to marks.

We're not saying that shunning marks is good for Johnny but the chances that he has some initiative or creativity along some lines should be apparent to the discerning parent and lead him to think twice before writing off Johnny's future.

One generality emerging from the study:

The creative person is intelligent, independent, curious, skeptical, emotionally committed to his work, energetic, asthetically sensitive, introverted, non-conformist (note that), occasionally egotistical, and virtually always actuated by a "sense of destiny."

Regardless of their profession, creative persons have few interests in common with farmers, carpenters, accountants, bankers, policemen or morticians.

But it's not unusual for their interests to parallel those of artists, psychologists, writers, physicists and musicians.

So far the study indicates:

The educational system fails to detect many persons with "high creative potential."

The creatives drop out of school early and their unique and valuable gifts are overlooked -- because they are not interested in getting high grades.

Creativity and madness? Nonsense. The study points out:

"Some creative individuals have been emotionally disturbed in the past and some are disturbed and turbulent today (i.e., in the midst of their work).

"But most appear well able to handle their complex disturbances. They are aware of life's difficulties, and sensitive to distressing elements -- but they are not suggestive of pathology."

Your child may not be a genius but he may be capable of much more than you, in your worries, have given him credit for.

It's Your Dollar

In Weston, where good government is almost a reflex, residents will be "working overtime" on town affairs next Tuesday.

Concern over orderly voting and over broader participation by citizens in running the government is what brought this meeting about.

But, even town government these days in not a one-shot affair. "Overtime" meetings like this one are coming to be the rule rather than the exception.

And when concern over the international situation has become so immediate, the expansion of the meeting became a necessity.

We would hope that just because town government is run so well on a day-to-day basis that Westonites would not forget to show up to decide on an underground shelter for the Civil Defense headquarters, nor the purchase of land for a southside park, nor any one of the 11 articles on the warrant.

Women Voters Air Civil Service Study

WAYLAND -- The League of Women Voters of Massachusetts has just issued a comprehensive new publication on the state's personnel system entitled, "The Merit System in Massachusetts: A Study of Public Personnel Administration in the Commonwealth."

The aim of this 115-page report is to tell the average citizen what he has a right to expect of a merit system and how administration in Massachusetts measures up to those expectations.

More than 200 League members from all over the state participated in the preparation of the "layman's eye view" of public personnel policy and practice in Massachusetts. Local members who assisted in this undertaking are Mrs. L. Bertelsen, state publications chairman; Mrs. Randolph Bruce, state public relations chairman, and Mrs. Albert Hughes, member of the original study committee.

All important aspects of civil service are covered under six-chapter headings: Organization and Administration of the Public Personnel Agency; Civil Service Coverage; Recruitment for the Public Service; Selection; Classification and Compensation; and Career Development in the Merit System.

In the final chapter, Recommendations for Improving the Commonwealth's Personnel Program, the report brings together the suggestions and proposals of many interested groups and individuals. The League itself states no conclusions. With this publication to serve as background material, 12,000 local league members, will have an opportunity during the coming year to arrive at their own recommendations for change. When such a consensus has been reached, the State League will make public its program for action.

The convention that nominated Lincoln met in Chicago in 1860.

Garden Club Asks Town: Halt Skating In Wildlife Area

WAYLAND -- The Wayland Garden Club has expressed concern to the Town Selectmen that efforts to defeat the purpose of their Sanctuary Project might result if suggestions on use of the are included such things as skating and fishing were followed.

The club also cited, in a letter to the Selectmen, temporary dangers in using the sanctuary area in the center of town.

"Aside from the problems of litter and damage to plant material, there is temporarily an element of danger in allowing youngsters to clamber around the slippery banks which border running water of four to eight feet in depth. This danger has always been present in this area, and has by no means been created by the project," the letter states.

"Present conditions tend to emphasize the hazard . . . because the soil is loose and the banks unplanted they do not offer secure footing now, and even less so in the winter."

The purpose of the Garden Club project - and accepted by the Town Officials - was twofold: To transform an eyesore into a beauty spot for all to enjoy and to provide a living laboratory where the young people, especially those of junior high school age, might observe and learn to practice the principles of soil and water conservation.

Weston Families Lend Art For DeCordova Exhibit

WESTON -- Bare walls in a number of Weston homes testify to the fact that the DeCordova Museum has borrowed extensively from local art collectors to assemble its new exhibition of paintings by Jack Wolfe and Robert Hamilton.

Wolfe and Hamilton have been singled out for special recognition in this exhibit because, according to Museum Director Frederick Walkey, "they are New England artists whose stature merits national attention."

The exhibition, including a high proportion of portraits and paintings lent by Weston families, opens at the DeCordova on Oct. 29 and will be shown through Dec. 3.

Many viewers will find the portraits by Jack Wolfe particularly appealing because they reveal both the artist's affection for his sitters and his insight into their personalities. Among the Weston portraits on view are those of Paul N. Carmichael, Dr. Gustave Dammin, Mrs. John E. Miller, Miss Abigail Dammin, and Mr. and Mrs. James B. Greason's daughter and grandson, Sarah and Tommy.

Other paintings by Hamilton and Wolfe have been lent by Mr. and Mrs. Will Davenport, Mr. and Mrs. James Greason, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Carmichael, and Mrs. Hollis K. Thayer.

Jack Wolfe, born in Omaha, Neb., studied at the Rhode Island School of Design and graduated from the Boston Museum of Fine Arts School in 1949. He has had three one-man shows at the DeCordova and recent exhibitions at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Joan Peterson Gallery in Boston. He has been awarded a graduate scholarship from the Museum School and the First Annual Margaret Brown Memorial Award from the Institute of Contemporary Art. He lives now in Stoughton, Mass.

Robert Hamilton was born in Seneca Falls, N.Y., and graduated from the Rhode Island School of Design. He received first prize for painting at the 1956 Boston Arts Festival and second prize at the '58 Festival. He lives in Providence and teaches at the Rhode Island School of Design.

Brewing the Blue Laws -- or How We Got Into This Mess Anyhow

It could be worse--the Blue Laws, that is.

Now wait a minute, before you shut us off, listen:

The Blue Laws didn't begin this year or last. They began when it was a sin punishable by whipping, imprisonment or fines to:

Wear you hair too long, if you were a male.

Dance, even at a wedding celebration. (Idea, probably was that there was nothing to celebrate any way.)

Do any unnecessary work on the Sabbath.

(This was listed as something you shouldn't do, and modern experts on the B.L. insist this is probably why the Blue Laws will be so hard to repeal: what husband can't duck behind that neat dodge "unnecessary work"?)

Proud Bay Staters who sort of claim Blue Laws as an invention of their ancestors (if they came over here on that leaking tub the May flower) are dead wrong.

It was Connecticut , which was every bit as mean to its residents as the Bay Colony, that scooped up all the "old nasties" on its books in the 1650's and codified them in a blue notebook to scare little children and reckless parents with.

That's where the name arose but the spoil-sports of Merrie Old England were the ones who sniffed with their blue noses and gave everybody the heebie-jeebies.

The just as the Colonists were taking these bits of inheritance so seriously, the British in the 1660's cut loose from these strictures themselves and had a very un-British laugh at the bumpkins trying to live up to what the upper classes once espoused by playing down high living.

That was 300 years ago--and they haven't stopped laughing yet at "modern Massachusetts".

Still a look at the past shows some things have changed, we think:

Puritan ground rules dealt mainly with the Sabbath (and suburban dwellers looking for fresh groceries or what not are familiar with those) but the original laws also dealt harshly with weekday doings as well.

Suppose you were a stranger in town and dropped into the tavern for a little brew.

LAW: A constable shall watch all such strangers and warn the barkeep when he (the constable) believes such stranger has had enough.

When there wern't more than one tavern in the town, that didn't set too well with strangers but who cares about them in cool New England?

Or suppose you wanted a little smoke?

LAW: You can export tobacco for profit abroad and let those strangers suffer (if that's the term for it) but no smoking here, or else.

But if you could escape mowing the lawn on Sunday or its equivalent, it was against the law on weekdays to remain idle for one moment during working hours. It read:

"No person...shall spend his time idly or unprofitably, under pain of such punishment as the Court shall think meet to inflict."

As for punishment when things got tougher about the Bay Colony, one of the duties of the president of Harvard College was to whip wayward students in public.

As for children who disobeyed or cursed their parents - death.

Same punishment for blasphemy, although this could be commuted to whipping.

Fashions were decreed with a whip hand, too:

In the 1630's, the proletariat was warned against decking themselves out in lace, embroidery, ruff, gold or silver buckles, slashed sleeves, beaver hats or hat bands.

Not prohibited to everyone, you understand. Just if your income left you in the one suit-shoes-on Sunday income bracket.

Politicians and visiting dignitaries could still dress it up..., even as today.

But by 1640 it had become a crime to seek the equivalent of the seersucker.

It was noted that some people were wearing short sleeves--in public. The legislature henceforth forbade any kind of sleeve "whereby the nakedness of the arm may be discovered in the wearing thereof."

By 1641, the word went out: too much high living: no more dancing at inns "whether at marriages or not."

Books were banned--and burned--about this time, thereby establishing a good old Massachusetts custom favored by blue noses and publishers to this day.

Come to think of it--take away the Thunderbirds, cocktail lounges, revolving checking accounts..... and we're pretty much back where we started : gray, turning blue over our overseers.

Vokes Opens Season Tomorrow With 'Pleasure of Your Company'

WAYLAND--Production chairman Earle Bourne and eight Vokes member assistants are responsible for the creation of the elegant San Francisco mansion to be seen when the curtain goes up tomorrow evening (Friday, Nov. 10), on the Vokes Players' latest production, "The Pleasure of His Company," at the Boston Post Road Theatre.

Working with Mr. Bourne are John Williams, Monty Stedfast, Ken Jones, Charlie Tewksbury, Dick Robinson, and Bill Floyd, all of Wayland, and Walter Dermon and Bill Grey of Sudbury.

Set painting is under the direction of Beth Best, chairman, with assistance from Dick Best and Marge Furrer. Homer MacDonald and Frank Stites are handling the lighting and sound effects.

Betsy Sweidler is in charge of stage props with help from Jeanne Clampitt, Jean Dunham, Jean Tewksbury, Doris Crowell, and Bobbie Robinson. Jane Hodgkinson heads those working on hand props, Pat Eriksen and Annmarie Strow.

Costumes are being assembled and fitted by Kay Bourne, chairman, Carolyn Jones, Mary Floyd, Jane Koch, and Fran Whiting.

Co-chairmen of make-up, Joan Havener and Mary Williams, and their assistant Caroline Plate face an interesting challenge in transforming cast member Al Strow into a blandly inscrutable Japanese houseboy.

Besides Mr. Strow, the cast includes Warren Eriksen and Jack Hyland of Wayland, Mary Griffin, Phil Bassett and Joe Manion of Weston, and Judy Wiley of Sudbury.

Alice Colliton is the director and Jane Lewis the prompter for the play which will be performed on the evenings of Nov. 10, 11, 16, 17, and 18.

Letters To The Editor

Harris Report Not Binding No Town Plan Necessary

To the Editor:

Some references have been made in The Crier recently to the Harris Report and I feel that an explanation of what this report consists of and its meaning to the Town is in order.

The Federal Housing Act of 1954, section 701, as amended, provides the opportunity for municipalities to engage professional planning consultants or services for a long range municipal planning. The expense for such services are borne in Massachusetts by the municipalities, the state and the Federal government.

In 1958 in Wayland, money was provided in the budget of the Planning Board for such purpose. The Town's share was paid to the State Department of Commerce, and the Planning Board recommended to the state that Mr. James L. Harris should be engaged by the state to recommend a long-range plan for Wayland.

The Harris Report, as it is now called, is a result of his efforts and generally is made up of three parts -- a) a text describing the proposals making up the General Plan; b) proposed revisions in the texts of the zoning by-law and the subdivision control regulations of the Planning Board; 3) a set of 13 large-scale maps, eight of which are mounted for display in the Planning Board office.

Under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts a Planning Board may, by majority vote, establish a General or Master Plan for a community. This can be done by adopting certain documents covering all phases that might be subject to Planning Board recommendation, or it can be done by adopting a small number of phases in areas in which a Planning Board works.

There is no compulsion on a Town or a Planning Board to adopt such a plan.

The Harris Report and the documents submitted with it are to be used as the Planning Board sees fit and have no legal significance or are they binding upon the Town any more than preliminary sketches from an architect concerning a public building would be.

The Wayland Planning Board does not agree fully with all of the recommendations of Mr. Harris.

There is a question as to whether the school enrollment projections are indicative of the situation in Wayland.

There are some recommendations in regard to recreation that we feel are more than the Town needs and there are other matters that do not necessarily apply to Wayland.

The Planning Board hopes that it will adopt a General Plan or Master Plan by the end of 1961 using much of the Harris Report.

We have asked Mr. Harris to discuss his school projections with the Wayland School Committee but to date, he has not been in a position to do so.

We expect that he will do this in the very near future. When questions concerning the proper method of estimating future school growth are resolved, we feel that we will then be in a position to complete work on a General Plan for the Town.

Since Mr. Harris was technically engaged by the State Department of Commerce and was paid by that department, he was required to submit a copy of his work to date to them for payment.

Until the board resolves its questions concerning the report, it will not authorize the state to make full payment.

Very truly yours,
Robert H. Charnock
Chairman

Only 'Must' Is to Avoid Nuclear War

To the Editor:

Perhaps, many people came away from the Weston Civil Defense meeting feeling blast shelters were a "must". How many, I wonder, came away feeling the only imperative "must" was to keep this world from moving into a nuclear war and annihilating itself?

President Kennedy said: "Mankind must put an end to war--or war will put an end to mankind." The United States CAN stand for peace and CAN save the people of the world from destruction. It will take all of our patience, wisdom and sacrifice. But this is our "must".

Dow Chemical No Tax Relief

To the Editor:

Further to your coverage of the proposed Dow Chemical Laboratory, there are some Wayland residents, and not just those confined to the immediate neighborhoods, who are not convinced that rezoning this Class A residential land for limited commercial purposes is in the best interests of the town.

Certainly it is no tax relief bonanza, as it would take many similar installations to even approach the yield of Raytheon's Wayland plant which accounts for something under $4 on our present tax rate.

It is evident that considerably more industry then just Dow Chemical is needed to make a significant reduction in our taxes. In other words, Dow Chemical can only be the beginning if this is a prudent step for the town.

Yours very truly,
Richard E. Bicknell

A Mother's View: Not Time for Test

To the Editor:

I hope the post offices are deluged today with letters to anyone who has a voice in the policy-making of this country urging that the United States change its decision to resume nuclear testing. It is my belief that the good will gained from such a reversal would far exceed any knowledge we would learn.

If at some future day we think that nuclear power is necessary for peaceful purposes, and testing is necessary, then first educate the public of the world about the benefits that would be gained.

This is not the time for any testing, no matter how safely it is conducted, because it seems we are following another country's lead.

Let us be the leaders.

Most sincerely,
Jane Castillo

Post Rd. 'Brushoff' Delivers Goods to Weston Doorsteps

WESTON -- A Beverly truck-driver got the brushoff on Post rd., Weston, Wednesday, Nov. 1 at 2:22 p.m. and the result: groceries "delivered" to the doorstep of neighbors in the Love lane area.

What happened, John B. Burke of 9 Phillips st., Beverly, told Weston police, was this:

Going west on Post rd., he was brushed off the road by a speeding motorist and his truck sideswiped two trees in rapid succession.

Result: The side of the truck was completely demolished, groceries littered the roadside and -- the front of the truck was undamaged.

Mr. Burke suffered injuries to his left arm.

DOORSTEP "DELIVERY" -- These groceries were "liberated" when the driver of the above truck got the "brushoff" from a passing motorist on Post rd., Weston, Nov. 1. Trees along the roadside demolished the truckside.

Weston JHS Gridders Extend Undefeated String

WESTON -- Weston Junior High School's football team romped to its fourth successive win this year last Friday with a 28-6 victory over Weeks Junior High of Newton.

This is the first undefeated season (to date) for the Weston squad, according to Coach Robert Starmer.

The Westonites were sparked by Frederick Page and Skip Johnson, both of whom scored two touchdowns and one point-after.

The week previous Weston trampled Maynard, 22-6 and Warren Junior High and Bigelow (Newton) have also fallen to Starmer's squad.

Next -- Meadowbrook School of Newton.

Congress, overwhelmed by early naval victories, voted 10 new ships in December 1812. None saw action.

Revere Bell Fund Gets $5 -- Even From Missouri

By HARRY PATTERSON

WESTON -- All the way from Joplin, Mo., comes a letter addressed to Weston's Paul Revere Bell Fund:

Although we only lived in Weston one year and have recently moved to Joplin, we want to have a part in the Paul Revere Bell Fund project . . . Enclosed please find a check in the amount of $5 as our contribution. Best wishes."

From closer to home -- Wellesley, Stow, Needham -- contributions come in. And from Weston residents -- checks along with comments . . . "These are things we believe in!" "Good luck!" "Will gladly add more . . . "

"It's a pleasure to send the enclosed . . . It will be a joy to hear the bell again." "My good wishes to the Revere Bell." "I am looking forward to its 'debut'." "Let us know if you need a further contribution."

It all goes to show that here in New England people still set great store by tradition and history.

Weston's Paul Revere Bell hangs in the belfry of the First Parish Church. It was cast by Paul Revere in 1801, and weighs 993 pounds, but for many years it has been rung only to summon worshippers to church, and at weddings and funerals.

When a group of Weston people decided to start a town-wide campaign to raise funds for a new clock and a new striking mechanism so that the great bell would once again mark the hours, they had no idea of what the response would be. The drive has only been underway for three weeks, and already more than half the needed money has been subscribed.

If enough additional Weston families send in their contributions promptly, there's a good chance that the Paul Revere Bell will be sounding the hours by Christmastime.

Sudbury Players Open Tonight With 'Happy Time'

SUDBURY -- The scene is set, the actors are ready, and "The Happy Time" is here! The curtain rises Nov. 9 (tonight, Thursday), Nov. 10, and Nov. 11, as the Sudbury Players present Samuel Taylor's riotous comedy at 8:30 p.m. at the Town Hall.

The time is the early 1920s, the place is a French Canadian town, and the family is a happy-go-lucky clan, known as the Bonnards. The play, a romantic comedy in three acts, is light, gay and amusing.

The play depicts family living, and is strictly for fun. Student tickets for Thursday night are available at a discount. Tickets are on sale at Bentley's, at the Sudbury shopping center, and at the door.

Weston Rips Milbury, 34-6

WESTON -- Weston High's Wildcats ran their victories to six, against one defeat, with a resounding 34-6 win over Milbury High School.

Coach George Harris just about emptied his bench as the squad scored in every period.

The first TD came on a sustained 60-yard drive, the biggest gain being a 12-yard run by Bob Trowbridge on a pitchout. Bob D'Antonio scored on a pass.

Starting from the Milbury 40, Foster carried for 19, Bill Rizzo gained 20 on pass interference and then carried over from the one. Foster carried for the extra.

Foster bootlegged for 30 yards to the Milbury 40 in the second period, Bob Trowbridge carried for 20. Foster hurled a bullseye to D'Antonio for 18 and then carried over from the two.

In the second half, Foster's pass to Bob Trowbridge ate up 47 yards and another to D'Antonio for 17 scored. Starting from the midfield in the final period, J. Trowbridge scooted 20 and Rizzo carried to the 15 on a screen pass from Bob Trowbridge. Jim Trowbridge then scored from the 15 and his brother's end run racked up the last two points.

NEXT - Bedford at home, Saturday at 2.

The lineup: Le, D'Antonio, McMullen; lt, Aker, McKenzie; lg, Evans, Dexter; c, Herrick, Gibson; rg, French; rt, Revotski; re, Hills; qb, Foster; lhb R. Trowbridge, J. Trowbridge; rhb, Drowne, Kelley; fb, Rizzo.

Substitutes (line): Graves, DeNapoli, Gibson, Dalmgrin, Gray, Russell, Dexton, DeSimone, McKenzie, Storm, Viles, Tennyson, Stritter, McMullin, Maloney, Christopher, Butcher, Connolly and Parlee; (backs): Barry, J. Trowbridge, Fabrizzio, Kelley, Richards, White and Heidt.

Weston Father of Retarded Child Pleads for Drive: If You Only Knew ...

WESTON -- A Weston father of a retarded child has issued an appeal to all parents to "extend your hand to the little fellow who needs you the most," during the current fund drive now under way here.

In a letter to The Committee for Weston, which is conducting the current fund drive for retarded children's services, and which is headed for the second year by Dr. and Mrs. Theodore S. Bayles, the father of a retarded child opens his heart to bare the anguished problems of seeking what is best for the child.

The Committee for Weston is affiliated with the Greater Waltham Assn. for Retarded Children, which also serves Weston children.

The following is the letter from the father:

Dear Friend:

In this wonderful, free, benevolent country, who would believe that there exists a group of "forgotten children" -- To whom God has given less than a normally active mind or healthy body --

Children who dwell in the shadows of our society and who subsist on the crumbs of our educational system --

Children who need the most help to attain the barest level of normal endeavor -- and who get pitifully little help--

Children who need the most modern educational facilities in their heartbreaking battle to be like you or me, but who are relegated to antique buidings, material hand-me-downs, and educational leftovers?

I hope you never feel the heartache of looking into the trusting eyes of your own retarded child--

I hope you never know the endless agonizing hours and days and months of wondering what will become of your child if you can't find or supply the desperately needed special education and modern scientific training--

I hope you never need to frantically search for the advice, guidance and special training that a retarded child needs --

And I hope too, that not having this problem of your own, you will extend your hand to the little fellow who needs you the most.

Will you please help?

By becoming interested in the retarded child and his problems?

By insisting on equal educational opportunities for this child in your own city or town?

By being their friend in need and contributing what you can to the association that is trying to help them?

Sincerely,
A Father

Any Steinbeck readers in the audience?

Some months ago, while enjoying John Steinbeck's latest novel, we came upon this delightful metaphor:

"The Appian Way of bankruptcy is paved with the graves of unprotected ventures."

We studiously copied this down, but have since been unable to find it again. Any advice would be welcomed.

You can see why this quote is so appropriate to our business. Tragic, isn't it, when you realize how many property owners and businessmen are financially ruined because of inadequate or improper insurance protection. Fire, theft, fidelity loss, product or personal liability are common troubles that can all too easily take away a man's home or business.

And bear in mind, if your coverages are planned intelligently, you will never wind up "insurance poor" We'd like a chance to prove it to you.

Meanwhile -- can you give us any help with that Steinbeck quote?

Troop 1, Cochituate Elects Officers

WAYLAND -- Plans for Troop One, Cochituate, were drawn up at a recent meeting of the troop committee at Scout House, under the direction of Chairman Al Statton and Scoutmaster George Brown.

The troup committee will meet 7-9 p.m. the first Sunday of each month, except for January when the meeting will be on Jan. 14.

The nominated slate was elected: Larry Francesci, chairman; Herbert Tufts, secretary; A. A. Statton, treasurer. Continuing as committee members are Elmer Bigwood and G. R. Lever.

Mr. Bigwood, who, incidently, does not have any boys in his family, has served the committee unceasingly for several years as advancement chairman, arranging for merit badge councilors, boards of review and courts of honor. Mr. Lever edits the monthly bulletin sent to the parents and to the officers and friends of the troop and its committeemen.

Mr. Francesci assumed the chairmanship upon elections and the business of the evening was considered.

It was decided that the Troop Committee would conduct the sale of safety flares for motorists as a means of raising funds while promoting a Community Seriice activity.

READING FOR KINDERGARTENERS -- Here Mrs. Sara Gleason works with new readers . . . at the kindergarten level in Weston schools.

Now Some Kindergarteners In Weston Learn to -- Read

WESTON -- Three Weston kindergarten teachers are beginning the teaching of reading for certain selected pupils of six classes.

Until this year, pupils of all abilities and maturity were given the same program for the full year.

The three teachers operating as a team are preparing a differentiated schedule for pupils.

Some pupils become ready for reading months and sometimes years before others. Through present Accordion Plan articulation it is hoped to capitilize on the early maturity of certain students by making it possible for continuation of advanced instruction through the rest of the grades.

The greatest problem faced by the teacher team is the identification of ability and establishment of criteria for stratification of pupil program. Another problem is the development of a schedule of teacher activity which will allow for work with small and large group simultaneously.

It is estimated by Accordion Plan Director Walter Gleason that design of the new kindergarten activities will take about two years.

Five Paths Crash Injures 3, Sends One to Hospital

WAYLAND -- Three persons were injured, one of them hospitalized, in a three-car crash at Five-Paths intersection Monday shortly after noon.

Police Chief Ernest Damon said cars operated by Daniel J. Garvey of 81 Beacon st., Natick and Robert E. Sherry of 72 Terrace rd., Medford, were unable to stop on the slippery surface about 12:15.

Then a car driven by Walter E. Johnson, 229 Main st., Walpole, hit the rear of Sherry's car, the chief said.

Held at Leonard Morse Hospital, Natick, was Mr. Garvey who sustained a lacerated chin and possible head injuries.

Taken to the hospital and released were a passenger in Sherry's car, Wilbert Hill of Circle rd., Medford, who suffered a broken nose and head injuries and Mr. Johnson who reported a back injury.

Police are assigned to this crossing daily during the rush hours. This patrol has cut accidents, according to the chief, but the lack of any lights or adequate visibility hampers safety efforts.

FIVE-PATHS SMASHUP -- Three persons were injured, one of them hospitalized, in this three-car crash at Three Paths Monday, shortly after noon. Third car involved is on the far side of the wrecker. (Town Crier Photo)

Something About Birds

WESTON -- By the end of October, fall migration of landbirds is just about over and winter visitors from the north begin to appear. This has been the case, in Weston at least, for the week ending Oct. 31.

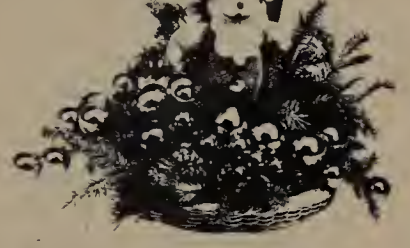
The bird which heads the list as an unusual northern visitor is the brown-capped (or boreal) chickadee which was seen Oct. 29 by Mrs. W. Noyes, Webster rd. It came with black-caps and appeared again on the 30th.

There is only one previous record on the official Weston list: Two seen in the hemlock grove off Church st. near the Weston R.R. Station on Jan. 14, 1917, by Warren F. Eaton. His field notes say that they remained there through February and March.

Brown-caps are being reported to the Massachusetts Audubon Society from other nearby towns, and this may mean that more will appear. Look at each of your chickadees carefully and you may have Mrs. Noyes' good fortune and see one yourself. Mrs. Noyes also has had two tufted titmice at her feeder since Oct. 28; and another was seen on that same day by Mrs. R. F. Carine, South av., possibly the same one reported just a month ago by Mrs. L. M. Cugini.

Four green-winged teal were observed with black ducks at the Norumbega Reservoir, Oak st., on Oct. 28 by the C. L. Smiths. An immature sapsucker is still being seen by Mrs. H. B. Atkins, King's Grand rd., who also reports a red-breasted nuthatch, a hermit thrush on Oct. 23-24, and a bluebird on the 24th. A half dozen bluebirds were seen on Oct. 30 - 31 by Mrs. F. G. Goodale, Concord rd. The only warbler reports were a black-and-white (Noyes, Oct. 30), black-throated green (found dead after hitting window, Whittenberger, Oct. 28), and a palm (Foote, Oct. 24).

A female cardinal was seen again on Oct. 27 by C. E. Mead, Conant rd. (probably the same one previously reported by Noyes and Hanson); and what would seem to be a second one made a brief visit at the Smiths, Westland rd., on Oct. 31. A flock of 14 evening grosbeaks was seen by Mrs. L.M. Cugini on Oct. 24; and 4 were reported by Mrs. D. R. Davidson, Golden Ball rd., who also saw 8 or 10 near the corner of North av. and Church st. on Oct. 29.



Towhees were still present (DeLeeuw & Noyes), and Mrs. R. L. DeLeeuw, King's Grant rd., also saw 2 tree sparrows on Oct. 16 and a vesper sparrow on the 20th. A. L. Gates, Saddle Hill rd., seems to have a "corner" on fox sparrows, as his flock increased to 9 on Oct. 31. The only other reports came from Mrs. Noyes (1) and Mrs. Davidson (3-4), all on Oct. 31.

Inconsistency is shown by words without deeds, which are like clouds without rain.

Wayland Downs Bedford, 20-8

WAYLAND -- It looked bad for three periods but Wayland High's Wildcats just wouldn't give up. Result: 20-8 victory over Bedford High.

It was a 57-yard pass play (Dwight Perodeau to Bob Kent) that netted Wayland its first score but Coach Ralph Salvati's forces went hungry until the final period. Mike Daly plunged over from the 2 to climax an 80-yard drive. After that, another Perodeau-to-Kent pass ate up seven yards for the final TD and Kent scored the extras on a pass.

This brings Wayland's sagging fortunes up to a respectable 4-2 record, with only Silver Lake to be overcome (this Saturday at 2) before the traditional Thanksgiving encounter with Weston.

The lineup: Le, Morris; lt, Ferrante; lg, Duane; c, Arnold; rg, Hazard; rt, Myers, Dessault; re, Kent; qb, Perodeau; lhb, Lafemina rhb, Daley, fb, Bova.

cooperation with the Weston committee."

The question of appointing another fire study committee to pick up where the last one left off will be before the voters on the 11-article warrant.

The new committee would have the power to recommend fire safety steps including the number, location, sites and nature of fire stations, if necessary.

The issue at stake in Weston: Whether the first committee's recommendation of a new central station or a southside station as urged by Fire Chief Maurice Upham should prevail.

Girl Scouts Help Woodridge Planting

WAYLAND -- Members of the Woodridge Garden Club and six Girl Scout Troops planted 12 dozen daffodil bulbs for the 50th anniversary of Girl Scouting on Mar. 12, 1962.

The club members are most grateful to Troops 23,76, 44,4, 110, and the new second grade Brownies for their contribution and as a token of thanks kept them supplied with hot cocoa.

sure that the new fire study committee's powers were not so great that it could commit the town to any site or plan.

"We feel that there is much to be said for a new central safety building," He said. "We feel that this should be explored before any money is committed to extra stations.

"We think the wording of the authorization for such a study should be exact, so there is no chance that the committee has more than investigatory powers.

of a performance bond from the contractor that everything will go ahead as scheduled, Atty. Kilburn emphasized.

Present on the stage this week are five cast members - Selectmen Tarr, Linnehan, and Lewis, Town Counsel Kilburn and Executive Secretary Taylor. We hear discussion of off-stage character, Tree Warden Nelson.

It seems that Mr. Nelson can't assume the bill for the cutting because his September work amounted to $1000 of his $2000 budget. (The first $1000 was spent over the first eight months.)

His department is broke, although they would have been able to take care of the bill a month ago, as the conservative estimate for the work was about $250.

Besides, he can't actually get up on the ladder and cut the limb in question himself because the insurance held by the town doesn't cover such an item.

First Parish Church Repairs Lightning Damage

WESTON -- When lightning struck the belfry of Weston's First Parish Church last summer, it played some of the tricks lightning is famous for.

First, it gained entrance to the belfry by ripping a hole about five feet across in the east slope of the roof. Once inside, it bounced around long enough to shatter several of the heavy roof timbers, char a few roof boards, and start a small fire. It carefully avoided touching the tower clock and the big Paul Revere Bell.

Then the bolt went out through the same hole it came in by--hopped over to the nearby small tower--ripped off a few shingles - and finally went to earth, apparently--by way of the trunk of a large ash tree, which it left unharmed.

Now, many new rafters, and roof boards have been installed, and new cedar shingles have replaced the old ones on both the belfry tower and the smaller one.

Biggest item in the cost of the repairs was the scaffolding, which had to be erected around three sides of the belfry tower.

'Navy's Joe Bellino' on sale at Jordan's

FRAMINGHAM -- The Navy's All-American backfield star, Joe Bellino of Winchester made a personal appearance in the Book Department at Jordan Marsh, Shoppers World recently.

During his visit to Jordan Marsh, Bellino autographed copies of "Navy's Joe Bellino," a story about the life of Joe Bellino written by Cynthia Barone of Winchester, and assisted by her husband, Dr. William Barone.

The 112-page book contains more than 100 photographs of the All-American football great and is published by the Barones' newly-formed firm, the Winchester Publishers. Copies are available in the Jordan Marsh Book Department, lower level.

Bellino became the "most outstanding college football player in the United States" in 1960 when he won the coveted Heisman Trophy, Maxwell Football Award, highest sports awards of the Naval Academy and was elected to just about every All-American team in existence.

Congratulations to the Wayland Kiwanis. Time and effort spent on those Halloween parties paid off. Anyone who saw those youngsters having the times of their lives, forsaking Old Nick for an Old Fashioned Wingding, knows that these men contributed something useful to the town.

The U.N. Dinner in Weston was no token affair. Fifty-two foreign students from colleges in Greater Boston enlivened the private discussions. Not to mention Weston High's six.

* * *

Countries represented at the dinner tables for this capacity gathering were: Brazil, Great Britain, Denmark, El Salvador, France, Germany, Ghana, India, Indonesia, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Korea, Libya, Mexico, The Netherlands, Nigeria, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, The Philippines, Sweden, Sierra Leone, Switzerland, Tanganyike and Turkey.

And even Russia.

One of the guests was Aditya Kumar Nehru, a nephew of President Kennedy's current visitor, Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru ...a student at M.I.T.

Congratulations are in order for Theodore Jones, energetic chairman of the dinner who planned right down to the smallest detail necessary to success.

Until the victory of State Sen. Gonzalez of Texas in the recent special congressional election, Democrats of the New Frontier variety were just waiting for Gen. Walker to settle there before they gave Texas back to the Mexicans.

From the Webster Gwemley Diary: Little Men, Gen. Walker, are generally Big Talkers with Small Outlooks gained from rear view mirrors.

Mr. Kennedy is reported to be advising his advisers to go easy on the budget--no extra jobs, cut back on new positions, etc., etc.--Has anyone thought what this is going to mean to Harvard when they all start coming back home?

* * *

Wisely, we believe, Weston officials have decided to have one more go at it on the matter of fire safety. And this study will have the advice of one of the professionals, Fire Chief Maurice Upham. To do the job, as Westonites want it done, we think it wise to include one of the men who will have to make the system work--whether the findings are one whit different or not.

Now Weston Observatory Can Hear Pin Drop in China

WESTON -- The Weston College Observatory, already in the top bracket among all Seismological Observatories in this country, is acquiring new equipment which will make it even better.

The new instruments, provided and installed by the United States government, will make it possible to pinpoint and analyze earthquakes in any part of the world more accurately than ever before.

The equipment is supported on concrete piers, which are insulated from the building in which they are installed, and from highway and other surface vibrations.

They rest on bedrock, where earthquakes really occur. (What we feel as earthquakes are really the shock waves radiating from the point of origin).

The incredibly sensitive detectors will etch the record on photo-sensitive film attached to revolving drums. An electronic clock will record the exact moment of the distrubance in Greenwich meridian time. And at regular intervals the film will be removed from the drum, developed, and sent to the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey in Washington.

Identical equipment is being installed by the government in 153 other seismological observatories in all parts of the world. Records and reports from all of them will be coordinated and compared in Washington to provide a highly accurate and uniform picture of any seismic disturbance.

The observatory will, of course, continue its present work of research, and of providing prompt and accurate data on earthquakes. It can usually give the whole story when, where and how severe on any earthquake anywhere within 15 or 20 minutes from the time the disturbance occurred. The new equipment simply means that it is giving more and more of a helping hand to the government in its work of keeping track of what's going on in the silent world so far beneath us.

Loker Book Fair Bargains

WAYLAND -- The 4th annual Book Fair now in progress at the Loker School in Wayland will continue until 3 p.m. Friday, Nov. 10.

Mrs. George Freedman, Book Fair Chairman, has announced that those parents who were unable to attend last night's PTA meeting are invited to come to the Fair today (Thursday) and Friday, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The outstanding display of books from pre-school to young adult is still on view and orders may be placed for delivery in about two weeks.

Mrs. Amos Leffler, co-chairman, has urged all Loker School parents to take advantage of this opportunity to acquire fine gifts while helping the PTA enlarge the school libraries with the Fair's profits. The Book Fair's slogan, "One for Three" dramatizes the fact that last year the school gained one new book for every three sold.

THIS IS GROUND ZERO -- Wayland's Dave Duane has just downed a Silver Laker on the latter's 25 as the remaining Wayland and S.L. players in this picture cast atomic glances around. This was climax of the climax of a rough-and-tumble game at Wayland last Saturday. Bill Morris (84), kneeling, is maintaining he downed that ball back 15-20 yards. . . and finally officials agreed he had. But the fallout from this set-to dominated the rest of the game. Weston Voters Grant $15,000 for C.D. Shelter After Fight; 275 Attend

WESTON -- Residents gave Civil Defense a vote of confidence here Monday night -- and $15,000 for the construction of an underground headquarters.

The final vote in favor, after an hour and a half of learned debate, was 126-101 as C.D. dominated the three-hour special town meeting.

Every article passed and the approximately 275 voters present provided for a new fire study, a sidewalk for the Conant rd. bridge among other things.

The next move in the C.D. sector is location of a site.

Now considered most likely: a site near the flagpole outside the Town House.

Town Executive Secretary J. Ward Carter said his first move this week will be to notify the Boston & Maine Railroad that $3000 is now available for the proposed sidewalk on the Conant rd. bridge, so that materials and plans can be merged while this improvement project is in progress.

Much of the opposition to the underground shelter centered around the philosophical argument that shelters were the wrong approach and that money so spent could better be used to pursue the cause of peace.

Most of the many opposition speakers concentrated on this, also emphasizing the futility of C.D. shelters in the face of super-bombs.

Leading this discussion which occupied most of the meeting time were Mrs. Helen Gray, Mrs. Barbara Cummings, James Kapteyn and John Howells.

Some opponents felt that the move for a shelter was premature, others that the Federal government hadn't sufficiently committed itself to financing local projects, and many asked this question:

"Why start with a headquarters' shelter when we haven't worked out a sensible solution of what to do with our children in the schools if a bomb is dropped?"

The answer afforded by Miss Florence Freeman, town C.D. director: This is only a start and one must be made. All aspects

Vandalism in 2 Wayland Schools

WAYLAND -- Vandalism and theft have been plaguing two Wayland schools for several weeks, but school authorities have not reported them to police and fire officials.

Only by chance did the willful damage come to light.

Four breaks on successive Monday nights in the Cochituate School and an investigation last Thursday of a new high school break were "unknown" to Supt. of Schools Edward J. Anderson.

"I am not aware of them," he told The Crier. "Well, yes, there was a break several weeks ago in the Cochituate school but only a dollar or so was taken."

"If such incidents had occurred," he explained, "they would have been reported to me."

But Police Chief Ernest Damon said it was only because Fire Chief Francis J. Hartin had reported to him that he knew of the breaks and damage.

"I hate getting news like that from the fire chief," said Chief Damon. "Some departments around aren't too cooperative."

Just by chance, said Chief Hartin, had he learned of the Cochituate break because some burned paper had been found there. He is investigating suspected arson in the area.

Uncovering of this break on Nov. 7 led to discovery of other incidents.

Some of the recent incidents involved:

--Theft of valuable fire equipment from the high school.

--Breaking and entering the high school last Wednesday (Nov. 8) and the use of a paper torch.

--Discovery that the "spark plug game" had been played on a bulldozer in the town pit (behind the high school), thus disabling a contractor's equipment.

--Breaking of a large window in the field house last weekend.

--Last Wednesday (Nov. 8) night a storeroom next to the administrative offices had been broken into and some candy stolen. Considerable burned paper was found at the scene, apparently used for lighting.

Police Chief Damon said that if his men had learned earlier of the

Wayland Hearing Monday To Air Workable Program

(Details Explained Here; Inside Look at Town)

WAYLAND -- Two things stand out in the Workable Program which the Wayland Redevelopment Authority hopes to submit to the Federal government:

1--A discussion of its renewal plans, citing the Dudley Pond area for renewal but indicating further study of conditions before moving in this section.

2--An analysis of how town government is set up in Wayland and where responsibility lies . . . which analysis is highly informative to most residents.

All of this will be under discussion next Monday when the Board of Selectmen hold a hearing on the program at the Wayland Junior High School auditorium at 8 p.m.

This hearing results from a promise made at the June 1961 special town meeting where members of the Wayland Civic Assn. insisted that checks be set up all along the line for Wayland Redevelopment Authority actions.

On a copy of the program submitted to The Crier, the following appears on page 6:

"The General Plan prepared under the 701 program (planning) and now being reviewed by the Planning Board recommends urban renewal measures for the Dudley Pond area.

"For this one area, the (General) Plan discussed housing conditions, the adequacy of community facilities and services, the causes of blight and the steps needed to eliminate such blight and prevent future blight. . ."

Tree Flips, Rakes Car, Driver Hurt

WESTON -- A huge tree remnant flipped over on a truck and the result last Saturday was facial cuts and injuries to the eyes of Allen Race, 74, of North av., Weston, according to police.

Police said that Patrick Gildea of Somerville, truck operator, was rounding a curve when apparently the tree flipped and broke the windshield and two windows on the left of a car driven by Mr. Race at 10:33 a.m.

The truck is owned by the Hartley Tree Co. and the tree had just been removed in town.

Mrs. Hartung Candidate for School Board

WESTON -- Mrs. Dudley B. Hartung has announced that she will be a candidate for the School Commitee in the town elections next March.

Mrs. Hartung is the editor of OUR SCHOOLS (a publication about the Weston schools) and vice president of the PTA. She has been a member of the School Liaison Committee, recording secretary of the PTA and member of its Education Committee, and a director of the League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Hartung is the mother of five children, with the oldest four attending the Weston schools.

Shun Charity With Salesman

WAYLAND -- The charity season is on but Wayland police showed no charity for 10 magazine salesmen who were using a "charities pitch" last week to gain a foothold locally.

Police Chief Ernest Damon warned residents not to let such salesmen beyond the door--if they opened it--and to call police with any complaints on this score.

You Can Feed Birds Through the Winter

(Many persons interested in birds wish they knew how to keep their winged friends around them during the winter. To help them, Mrs. Charlotte E. Smith, The Crier's expert on birds, is writing a four-part series on winter feeding, complete with many of her intriguing asides.)

By CHARLOTTE E. SMITH

It hardly seems necessary to offer suggestions to Weston residents for feeding winter birds, when an estimate made in the spring of 1959 showed that they bought over 40 tons of bird seed during the previous winter!

This astounding figure was no wild guess. It was based on information from local dealers, and was even on the conservative side.

However, as more people each year are becoming interested in "backyard bird-watching," perhaps they will find here some answers to their questions.

Actually, our winter birds are well adapted to cope with cold and snowy weather.

They develop reserve body fat which can provide energy for a

Cluster Zoning Panel Tonight at Wayside Inn

SUDBURY -- A solution to the alarming waste of land will be explored at a special meeting on "Cluster Zoning" tonight at the Wayside Inn, Sudbury, it was announced by Alfred W. Halper, Sudbury home builder.

The meeting is sponsored by the Framingham Area Association of Planning Boards, an organization formed in 1959 to bring together planning board members and others concerned with the development of communities in this area.

Halper, who serves on the Program Committee of the Planning Board Association, explained that the cluster concept controls density of population by requiring "open spaces" or "green belts", and at the same time, allows a residence to occupy a lot size smaller than the minimum now permitted by local bylaw. The system groups clusters of dwellings backed up to common areas of woods or fields with the open space belonging to the lot-owners or the community.

Homer K. Dodge, president of the sponsoring association, will moderate the dinner-meeting which will hear a panel of people who have first-hand knowledge.

Nine communities presently comprise the Framingham Area Association of Planning Boards: Ashland, Framingham, Holliston, Hopkinton, Marlboro, Natick, Sherborn, Sudbury and Wayland. Wayland.

Weston Meeting Votes for C.D.

of the school question have not been worked out but both Weston and the Federal government are working on this.

. Miss Freeman, in her presentation, argued that while there were so many things that were uncertain some initial step had to be taken and that she was confident it was taken on the basis of pretty well grounded recommendations from C.D. authorities and on the basis of long-established policies.

She said Federal 50-50 subsidy was assured for the shelter which will be done according to Federal standards.

As for why a central HQ: It was to store information, records, equipment and supplies; to shelter a trained group of C.D. workers; to provide a reasonably good place where communications with the outside world could be maintained, and to assure a nucleus for civil government after an attack.

The voters voted $1000 for consultants to advise the Water Dept. as to protective measures for the water supply in the event of attack and another $1000 for C.D. expenses, including a 2000-gallon storage tank for a generator.

In other moves, they voted to:

--Provide two voting districts, divided along Rte. 20.

--Allow $3500 for town counsel legal fees for four cases, including two involving the Massachusetts Crushed Stone Co. on Rte. 20.

Richard Robinson, president of the firm, argued against this appropriation, stating that in taxes alone (over $20,000 this year), the firm provided considerable wherewithal for the town and that its expanded operations were vital to its survival.

--Spend $300 for a gas fitting and appliance inspector, yet to be appointed.

--Ask Town Moderator Glen Lempereur to appoint another fire study committee with Fire Chief Maurice Upham as a member. This was opposed on the grounds that on some occasions a study committee might want to meet without the fire chief in discussing the department. Passed.

--Allow park commissioners to purchase land at the corner of Boston Post rd. bypass and School st.

Strong opposition at first when it was learned that Kevin Nolan of Ridgeway rd. had nearly completed negotiations. But passed unanimously when Mr. Nolan said he wanted it for a real estate office site. Mr. Nolan went along with the vote rather than force a nose-counting on a move otherwise unanimous.

--Provide $3500 to the Water Board for its blanket extension account (reimbursement later from developers).

--Another $2500 to the Water Department for purchase of water from Wellesley until legal entanglements in the Hubbard water purchase can be worked out.

$8300 Radio Pact For G.E. in Weston

WESTON -- The General Electric Co. has been awarded a $8300 contract to provide radio and communications equipment for the town.

The Board of Selectmen on Tuesday, Nov. 7, awarded the contract to replace most of the equipment used by Weston police, firemen and the highway department, as well as provide for conversion of some existing units to narrow band requirements of the Federal Communications Commission.

The selectmen also drew two presidents for Middlesex County jury duty: C. Chardler Robbins Jr. for the Dec. 4 civil session in Lowell and Robert P. DuBois, for the Dec. 4 session in East Cambridge.

Harold Willis Jr. Colonel in Reserves

WESTON -- Harold B. Willis Jr. of 83 Concord rd. has been promoted to colonel in the Air Force Reserve. He is with the 9230th Air Reserve Squadron.

Before entering the service in 1942 as a private, Col. Willis attended Harvard University. He is a member of the Harvard Clubs of Boston and New York and is a partner in the Garvin-Willis Co. of Cambridge. He served four years of active duty during World War II.

As one of the original members of the 9230th Air Reserve Squadron, he served as squadron commander for many years. He is the son of an Air Force Colonel. His father was a member of the famed Lafayette Escadrille during World War I.

Voice of Women Petition Gets 100 Signatures

WAYLAND -- More than 100 persons shopping at The Co-Op last Friday petitioned President Kennedy: "We Urge That The United States Refrain From Atmospheric Testing".

Signatures for this petition were solicited by Wayland members of "Voice of Women". This new movement, patterned after the Canadian group, is composed of women who are raising their voices together in a plea for human survival and seeking an end to the threat of nuclear war.

"Voice of Women" first put its ideas into action with a "Strike for Peace" on Nov. 1 when women across the country interrupted daily tasks to appeal to the United Nations, United States government, their churches, press, friends and neighbors to join in a "Race for Peace". A delegation from 600 women at the White House called on Mrs. Kennedy and delivered a message to Mrs. Khrushchev at the Soviet Embassy.

The petition was again circulated in several Wayland churches on Sunday when additional signatures were obtained.

Among those who helped with the project were Mrs. John Gregory, Mrs. Wayne Erickson, Mrs. Hal Pearson, Mrs. Benjamin Gary, and Mrs. Frederick Walther. A Wayland group of "Voice of Women" is being organized. Those interested should contact Mrs. Hal Pearson or Mrs. Benjamin Gary.

Shelters Wrong Approach

To the Editor:

I attended the Civil Defense hearing reported in the Crier Oct. 26) under the above headline and was surprised by the apparent omission of several of the following points, which were brought out at the meeting:

Prof. Barton Leach said he felt it would be better to be at least 50 miles from a target area when the bomb fell. This was confirmed by Prof. Frank Lewis who, quoting from an article in a recent issue of "Science" magazine concluded that chances for survival in any type of shelter as near to Boston as Weston were poor.

Prof. Manson Benedict, when questioned, appeared to agree that his statement about "resuming normal living" after the prescribed period in a shelter was not to be taken as meaning a return to life as we know it now. It seemed to me to be the sense of the meeting that fall-out shelters were inadequate and that blast shelters might give more hope of survival, but I was unaware of the clear-cut directive reported in the Crier.

This is a problem, so vast in its implications that it needs deep thought and much discussion. And we, as individuals, feel the need of more information before deciding on our own courses of action. Have the citizens of Weston thought of what life would be like after a nuclear war?

Do the recommendations of Civil Defense Authorities tend to make nuclear war seem a plausible solution to the world's problems?

Could the time, money and energy which will be spent on shelter construction be put to better use in a serious search for a positive program to prevent such a catastrophe?

Elizabeth B. Janeway,
Weston

Ed. note - see editorial.

EDITORIAL

. . . But Are Shelters Bad ?

To the above letter writer, this would be our tentative answer:

Did Professor Leach tell you how to be 50 miles from ground zero?

If not -- and until there is some sure sign that no one is going to hurl one of those things at us -- we think it's a pretty good idea to prepare.

And experts, while undoubtedly not telling us all of the worst about The Bomb . . . yet, advise us that Westonites -- and probably Waylanders, too -- should look for blast shelters as the best possible defense. (Not fallout shelters.)

We'll admit that doesn't guarantee us anything. Certainly ground zero might well come right over our humble house, if Ivan is a little off his mark. Nothing is certain. But to act as if, therefore there is nothing we can do to protect ourselves, doesn't add to our certainties.

Granted, striving to keep bombs from going off is a positive approach. We think that is what the White House and its allies are trying to do now.

Each individual has a right to decide whether he thinks that is true or not but we'd like to offer this thought:

Often the only way to prevent a fight is to be fully prepared to fight.

This is not true only in governmental affairs. Each of us has been through situations where, in order to head off someone who could be mighty troublesome, we let them know -- directly or through others -- that we were fully prepared to make things hot for them if they got tough.

Hence, it would seem to us that getting prepared for the worst in this case is good insurance against the worst.

This does not prevent earnest persons from telling President Kennedy and Premier Khrushchev and others, through petitions or otherwise, that they do not believe The Bomb is the answer to anything. Pressure sometimes helps.

But it seems that preparation and petition go together. They are not mutually exclusive.

Wrong Date

To the Editor:

An incorrect date slipped into the latter part of my Nov. 9 article on smallpox in New England. It was June 26, 1721 when Dr. Boylston inoculated his son, the year mentioned earlier in the article.

It has been suggested that the Dr. Roby of Cambridge who did some inoculations was Sudbury's Dr. Ebenezer Roby. Ebenezer graduated from Harvard College in 1719 at the age of 18, and might perhaps have been learning the trade in Cambridge. Paige's History of Cambridge makes no mention of the name Roby either in index or genealogy, and Dr. Boylston fails to give the first name.

Yours respectfully
Howard S. Russell

Why Can't Heard House Be Moved?

To the Editor:

As a member of the "Hysterical Society", I would like to point out a few mis-statements in the article in last week's Crier relating to the non-moving Heard House.

First, let me say that if ever a society had cause to become "hysterical", this one is justified by the continual delaying action of the Selectmen and the town counsel.

Item one to be corrected: It is not a "two-year drama". It is three years since the society began trying to get a permit to move the house.

Item two: The society agreed, months ago, to pay for a Davey (Co., tree firm) supervisor for the limb-cutting.

Item three: What grounds have there been for "serious negotiations" when to this day there has been no "written permit" from the Selectmen for the moving of the house.

Item four: "A performance bond" -- Months ago, the Selectmen, for their own information, looked for the best house-moving contractor they could find and asked him for figures on this job. He replied that he had already figured the job and was engaged to do the work for the Historical Society.

Item five: "A definite statement as to when the house will be moved." -- When a permit to trim the trees is obtained, the trees will be trimmed, subject of course to further delaying action. When a permit to move the house is received, the house will be moved at the earliest time possible, subject to the contractor's schedule and weather conditions.

As an example of "double talk" and "stalling" on the part of the so-called "cast" of this "drama", nothing to equal it has ever come to my attention.

Perhaps the "cast" is too busy with personal business to learn the "lines" for their parts in town business, or perhaps the show has been badly miscast.

The Historical Society is an organization of serious, mature citizens, working for something we feel is of value to the town of Wayland (present and future), and it seems a pity that we can not have the co-operation of the Selectmen and the town counsel, any one of whom could have settled this matter long ago.

Mrs. H. C. Morgan

Ed. note -- Frankly, we can't see why it should take three years to move the Heard House either. More especially since way back last summer the society pointed out that it was willing and eager to move before the cold weather set in.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

How Green Our Villages

If there is one thing that distinguishes an ancient New England village from the ordinary, sometimes ugly crossroads settlement that you find in most parts of this country, it is the village green, surrounded by its orderly array of white painted dwellings, churches and public buildings, and noble trees.

Even here in New England you may almost unerringly pick out a town incorporated before the Revolution by whether or not it has a green or common; or, lacking that, a broad, straight central highway with ample margins, green with shade trees and grass; or, sometimes with a green strip in its center, dividing the travelled way.

This spaciousness is no accident. The original village plots in the Bay Colony were laid out by Englishmen with careful regard for perpetuating the amenities of life to which they had been accustomed. Each town was individually planned, with due regard to the terrain, by a committee specifically charged with that duty by the General Court.

In the proposed new village, the committee assigned a houselot to each head of a family who agreed to settle there, and for his sustenance provided also meadow, planting fields and woodlands of varying sizes according to his "estate." These were often at a distance from his home lot, as had been the custom in England.

The houselots were not haphazard, but laid out side by side to form a compact settlement. Almost always the lots of the leading citizens faced a green or common, as you may see at Ipswich, West Brookfield, and Lexington. The meetinghouse and the manse were assigned the most prominent positions. If, occasionally, there was no green, the lots of the citizens adjoined each other along "The Street", as it is still called in Deerfield and other old towns.

"The Street" was planned as a broad thoroughfare, with wide margins, now neatly grassed and mowed, which you find narrowing to an ordinary travelled way, often too narrow today, once you get beyond the original limits of the village. You will notice this type of layout not only in Massachusetts towns such as Hadley and Deerfield, but in New Hampshire cities such as Keene and Manchester. In many colonial towns a considerable period ensued before the inhabitants ceased to be villagers, and began to build on outlying farms.

What about Weston and Wayland? Originally, my readers will recall, Weston furnished just such outlying farms and woodland for the people of Watertown, one of the earliest Massachusetts communities to be settled. Not until 1698 had the "Farms" become sufficiently settled to be set off as a precinct with its own church. As with many similar parishes set up after extensive land divisions, from overlarge mother towns, there was not the same opportunity for a planned village green as in the original town.

Hence the present large, appropriate, and pleasingly landscaped green in Weston is the result of much consideration in modern times. It was designed to set off the new town hall, and previously existing buildings were moved off to make it possible. The Post Road, however, with its handsome old houses, dates from the beginning.

As to Wayland, the original Sudbury, second inland town in the Bay Colony the committee left it with no broad green. Instead, for the new village, they picked a sightly location fringing the bluff upland, on what is now Old Sudbury rd., Wayland.

At the highest point they set the church, and around it the burying ground. The houselots adjoining in both directions they planned to face west toward the river and the hills, or south toward the sun.

May it not have been their thought that the broad green expanse of the plain to the west (on which they laid out no houselots) and the meadow and river beyond would afford that sense of openness and distance which in many towns is the contribution of a common or park? At any rate, for over three centuries that outlook toward the sunset remained unobscured except for an occasional farm building. Not until within the last decade have dwellings been built on the west side of the road.

What is now Wayland Center was not developed until well over a century later. Whence, then, came the ample greens that today ornament all four corners? Gratitude is due in several directions for the openness of this crossroads.

For the appearance of the two southerly corners actions of the town itself are basically responsible. The town, after much debate, chose the site for its handsome new meetinghouse and dedicated it in 1815. The park land on the opposite side was purchased a century later, and a store located there torn down, to remove the traffic hazard of a blind corner. To this purchase a group of generous citizens added the thirty acres of upland and marsh where the town later built the (present) Junior High School and the playing field adjoining.

The large tract where the town office now stands was also the gift of public spirited citizens. From the Wayland Woman's Club, a quarter century ago, came a donation of several thousand dollars to purchase the triangular "heater piece," on the westerly corner, which the town turned into another green expanse.

Thus both towns, as a reward for foresight and public spirit, now possess true village centers of which any community might be proud.

Man Who Nearly Drove Grant From the Army

By SOUTHWORTH LANCASTER

(November 12 - 18, 1861)

THE NEWS: Nov. 12th -- "I propose to 'feel' the Rebels today," said McClellan to John Hay . . . 20th Mass. Inf., overlooked by paymasters in October, received back pay in gold dollars.

Nov. 13th - Coming home late from a reception, McClellan marched up to bed, ignoring President Lincoln and Secretary Seward, who were awaiting him in a downstairs parlor.

Nov. 15th -- USS San Jacinto, Capt. Wilkes, arrived at Fortress Monroe with the captured Confederate commissioners, Mason and Slidell. Great excitement prevailed . . . Brig. Gen. Don Carlos Bull took over at Louisville, relieving Brig. Gen. William T. Sherman, who in turn was assigned to St. Louis.

Nov. 17th --Massachusetts Gov. Andrew, escorted by cabinet members, reviewed 21st Mass. at Annapolis and promised an early issue of new English Enfield rifles.

Nov. 18th -- Maj. Gen. David Hunter, Fremont's successor, was transferred to Kansas from St. Louis, being replaced by Maj. Gen. Henry Wager Halleck.

BEHIND THE NEWS: Hay, private secretary to Lincoln and future secretary of state, noted that McClellan's remark was one of many promises. There was no action that day . . .

Of McClellan's snub, Lincoln merely said that it was better at this time not to be making points of etiquette and personal dignity . . . William H. Seward, Secretary of State, was never openly disloyal to Lincoln, but let it be known that he himself could do a better job as President. Lincoln had come to distrust his war secretary, Simon Cameron, and often employed Seward's undoubted talents in problems properly belonging to the War Department . . .

The exploit of Wilkes was largely a matter of luck. He was hailed as a hero, although he had merely presented the Union government with a tough problem at an awkward moment. While the State Department tried to solve it, Mason and Slidell were assigned comfortable quarters at Fort Warren in Boston. . .

Sherman was glad to be rid of Louisville, but the press continued to assail him and for many weeks his troubles continued . . . Buell, a sort of stolid McClellan, accomplished nothing notable, apart from avoiding reverses. We meet him again at Shiloh, where he arrives in the nick of time -- and then sinks to obscurity . . .

Halleck, nicknamed "Old Brains" for his learning, quickly cleaned up the mess left by Fremont and put the Department in fairly good order, for he was an able administrator. His other qualities are still in dispute. He has been called a cautious, witless pedant whose promotions were matters of chance, yet analysis of his later career discloses many instances of sound sense, and, on occasion, bold and prompt decision. Undoubtedly, he treated Grant badly and came near to driving him from the service.

One might speculate that if Halleck had been assigned elsewhere and Hunter left in the St. Louis command, Grant would have had a more sympathetic superior and his rise could have been more rapid. This becomes plainer as the War progresses. Meantime, judgment on Halleck must be deferred.

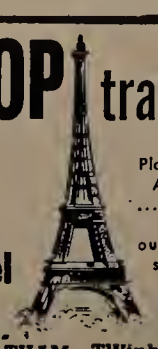
Something About Birds

By CHARLOTTE E. SMITH

WESTON -- Migrating juncos, fox sparrows and a few tree sparrows are being reported, but most white-throats seem to have gone through. Several red-breasted nuthatches are coming to feeders (Bissett, Smith, Jones). Mrs. E. J. Jones, Merriam st., says that hers will now come to her hand for sunflower seed! A late olive-backed thrush was seen Nov. 6 by Mrs. D. R. Davidson, and also a lingering brown thrasher on the same day.

On Nov. 2, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Squibb, Newton st., discovered an immature goshawk which had been killed by flying through their open garage door (undoubtedly in pursuit of another bird) and crashing into the rear window with such force that glass was found ten feet away -- the hawk dead on the ground nearby. There are very few reports of this magnificent-looking bird in Weston, and they occur here during migration only. Mr. and Mrs. Squibb have given the hawk to the Massachusetts Audubon Society for its collection.

The brown-capped chickadee first seen by Mrs. W. Noyes, Webster rd., on Oct. 29, was joined by a second one on Nov. 7, and both are visiting her feeder daily. As mentioned last week, there is only one previous record for this bird on the Weston list; but if anyone has more recent records which have not been reported, they will be most gratefully received. The two tufted titmice first seen by Mrs. Noyes on Oct. 28 are now coming to other feeders on Webster rd. (McMullin, Gates, Warren).



Apparently there is going to be an invasion of Pine Grosbeaks this year -- the first since 1957-58, as the Mass. Audubon Society has received many reports since Nov. 1. Several were seen in Weston on Nov. 5 and 8 (Smith, Foote), and a large flock of 30 was reported Nov. 10 by C. Terkelsen, Conant rd. Some of these beautiful robin-sized northern finches are around every winter, but when their food supply in Canada and northern New England is short (as it must be this year) they move south in large numbers looking for food.

The Mass. Audubon Society is anxious to hear about any you may see, how many in the flock, how many each of males and females, how long they stay, and what they are eating. The adult males (usually in the minority) are rosy-red, immature males are gray with orange-yellow on head and rump, females gray with dull olive-yellow. All show two white wing bars. Their most common call is a loud, melodious three-note whistle, often given while flying. They are so unsuspicious that you can get very close to them if you move slowly. They feed mainly on fruit and berries while here, and are particularly fond of flowering crab fruit. They seldom come to feeders, but do like sunflower and hemp seed. If you should happen to find a dead one, please call C. E. Smith, TW 9-1114.

That brouhaha that exploded over the Wayland High School football field last Saturday was just Wayland High's way of getting ready for the don't-shove-me-or-I'll-brain-ya encounter with Weston on Thanksgiving.

And speaking of Thanksgiving games, can anyone tell us why it is that so many folks in the southern part of Wayland traipse off to Natick for the annual game? Is South Wayland part of Natick?

Maybe you thought the University of Massachusetts was a little college "way out there in Western Mass." for people from that region. Not so. It has more than 5700 students -- about two-thirds of whom come from this half of the state. More than 2000 from Greater Boston. Better than one-third.

That may surprise some. It did us. When we got over thinking of it as a cow college, it took us a while to realize that it was a university . . . and finally to let it sink in that UMass. has students from all over the state.

Ah to be riding school buses again. Especially that Wayland bus that "leaned" way over at the high school entrance. That new blacktop at the high school entrance simply couldn't take it and the bus sank up to its hubcaps. No harm done. No pupils either.

Mr. Lovejoy was named last Tuesday by the selectmen and four members of the planning board, effective immediately.

Weston Church Council Plans 'University of Life'

WESTON -- "The Church In Our Lives" is to be the theme of the Weston Council of Churches 1962 University of Life, with an especially notable group of speakers, according to an announcement from the five-church committee which on Nov. 8 completed the arrangements. The 1962 sessins are to be held in St. Peter's Church on five spring Sunday evenings, Mar. 11 through Apr. 8.

Opening the series will be Prof. Gerald Gregg of Andover Newton Theological School on "The Church and You," followed a week later by Prof. Roland Fairbanks of the Episcopal Theological Seminary at Cambridge on "The Church and the Home."

From New York City's noted East Harlem Protestant Parish on Mar. 25 will come the Rev. Norman C. Eddy to develop the subject "The Church and the Inner City."

"The Church and Public Affairs" is the theme for the Apr. 1 session, with the well-remembered President Herbert Gezork of Andover Newton as the speaker.

T. S. Eliot's play "Murder In The Cathedral," presented by a group of actors from St. Peter's will close the series on April 8, symbolizing the topic "The Church and the State."

The entire program is planned, according to the committee, to deepen understanding of the Christian church, its relevance to modern life and its demands on its members.

Members of the committee planning the 1962 meetings, and their churches are: Peter Albrecht, St. Peter's Episcopal; William Cail, Methodist; Thomas McFarlin, Congregational; Miss Rebecca McKenna, First Parish; Rev. Donald Morris, First Baptist, and chairman of the committee.

Christian Science Services

WESTON -- The availability here and now of the healing power of the Christ, Truth, will be stressed at Christian Science church services this Sunday at First Church Scientist, Weston.

Luke's account of the healing by Christ Jesus of the "woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise life up herself" is included in the Scriptural readings. "Soul and Body" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon.

From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy this passage will be read: "God will heal the sick through man, whenever man is governed by God. Truth casts out error now as surely as it did nineteen centuries ago. All of Truth is not understood; hence its healing power is not fully demonstrated" (p.495).

The Golden Text is from Psalm 90: "Lord, thous hast been our dwelling place in all generations.... Let thy work appear unto thy servants, and thy glory unto their children."

break pattern in the Cochituate school, they might have been able to break up the Monday night forays.

Milk money was stolen and, Chief Hartin reasons, the burned paper was used to light the way.

Several weeks ago Chief Hartin discovered a CO-2 extingusher on the aqueduct near the high school and notified authorities.

He said no subsequent check was made until last week when it was discovered, coincidental with the break, that high school youngsters had been "liberating" water extingushers to stage water fights and had discarded several on the high school roof and in nearby woods.

Informed of this pattern, one town official remarked about Wayland's school youngsters:

"Some--not all--but many seem to lack a sense of value about life or property and have no sense of discipline."

and Supt. Anderson said he had had Chief Damon in to lecture about 15 high schoolers recently for their use of abusive language to teachers.

For the most part, Mr. Anderson said he was unaware of any vandalism.

Thieves Get $200, Liquor in Break At Red Coach Grill

WAYLAND -- More than $200 in cash and more than $300 worth of liquor was taken in a break at the Red Coach Grill last Thursday, Wayland police report.

This is one of a number of breaks at the Post rd. restaurant in which thieves have rifled the cigarette machines on the eve of collections.

The cash was taken from the machines after entrance had been gained through a window in the roof.

Police Chief Ernest Damon is conducting the probe with Officer Thomas W. Murray and a State Police fingerprint expert.

The thieves removed a screen, forced the window and when leaving closed the window and replaced the screen, Chief Damon said.

Cigarette collection money has been the goal in several recent breaks in Greater Boston but thieves in this case added the liquor for good measure.

Don't make the mistake of being afraid you'll make one.

This grandiose spectacular is designed to show parents what their boys do, to reveal the boundless program to the many friends who support Scouting and to expose everyone to the sparkling excitement that binds the boy to the largest youth movement in the world.

This program, officials say, is for the boys, and is not a "staged" production. The public is invited to enjoy the Scout-O-Rama, but they won't have as much fun as the boys will.

Silver Lake Outpenalized, Wayland Wins, 6-0

WAYLAND -- Wayland High returned to its home field Saturday with a bang -- in fact, the bang was bigger than the game itself.

Wayland topped Silver Lake Regional (Kingston) in a game that seesawed up and down the field, from penalty to penalty.

In fact, most spectators were of the opinion that more yards were gained by penalties than by either passing and rushing. Silver Lake had a minus gain, due to the large number of penalties against it.

As one Wayland fan said: "I learned what the referee's signal for unsportsmanlike conduct is. He was doing it every few minutes. It was hard to miss."

The biggest brawl came in the closing period when the officials were refereeing a dispute over fist-swinging and the ball lay out on the field alone...until suddenly about half the Silver Lake grabbed the ball and ran....followed madly by the half of the Wayland squad that wasn't on the debating line.

No progress anyway. Officials ruled the ball had been downed. And this turned on another blast. Result: one of the slambangingest, no-holds-barred games in recent years.

It was one of Wayland's favorite trick plays, the punt-runback reverse that paid off, with Mike Daly handing off to Ken Houghton on his own 30 and Houghton going the rest of the way for the day's only score. No extra point.

Houghton, just returned to the lineup after three weeks out with an injury, played a heads-up game. Final score, Wayland 6, Silver Lake 0; final penalties, Wayland 65, S.L., 142.

The lineup: Le, Kent; lt, Myers; lg, Hazard; c, Arnold; rg, Duane, Morris; qb, Perodeau; lhb, Bova, Houghton; rhb, Daly; fb, Lafemina, Reeves.

In College Play

KALAMAZOO, Mich. -- Betsy Wigginton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wigginton, 152 Newton st., Weston, has been cast in "The Inspector General," by Nicolai Vasilievich Gogol, first dramatic production of the Kalamazoo College Players this season. The play wil be presented at Kalamazoo College.

Weston Buries Bedford, 48-8

WESTON -- Weston High's Wildcats steamrollered Bedford High here Saturday, 48-8, taking time en route to make sure blocking back Steve Drowne scored, too.

It took two attempts. Steve's first TD was nullified by a penalty but then Bud Foster tossed a 15-yarder and Drowne had his first score of the season.

The Trowbridges, John and Bob, scored two TDs but it was Bill Rizzo, with only an extra point, who was the big star.

Bill's total yardage: 201 yards, compared with 100 for the entire Bedford backfield. Rizzo's biggest run came on an interception at the 50 which he ran back to the two yard line in the third period.

Coach George Harris also managed to get four freshmen (Downs, Stone, Hamilton and Sunborg) into the lineup.

Weston has a 7-1 record going into the Thanksgiving game with Wayland.

John Trowbridge scored on the most spectacular play in the fourth period, a quick turn around right end and some beautiful downfield running for 50 yards. Bob Aker played an outstanding game in the line and bulled his way through the line for one PAT.

The lineup: Le, D'Antonio, McMullen, Butcher; lt, Aker, McKenzie, Storm; lg, Evans, Russell, Graves, Gibson; c Connolly, Parlee; rg, Revotski, Gray, DiNapoli; rt, Herrick, DeSimone, Viles; re, Hills, Stritter, Christopher, Maloney; qb, Foster, Fabrizio; lhb, R. Trowbridge, J. Trowbridge, Berry; rhb, Drowne, Kelley, Heidth; fb, Rizzo, Rickards.

Wayland Students Prepared for PTA Scholarship Drive

WAYLAND -- Students are being briefed for the Wayland High School PTA's annual drive for scholarship funds Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 2 and 3.

Henry Muller, PTA president, said the students will solicit "dollars for scholars" door to door on that weekend.

Businesses in this area will be solicited by mail and contributions can be mailed to Mr. and Mrs. Donald A. Donahue of 60 Dean rd., chairmen for the drive. Checks are payable to the Wayland High School PTA Scholarship Fund.

Last year the house-to-house campaign raised $1950 for any senior whose achievement, promise of further study and financial need met committee standards. Each scholarship is awarded on the basis of that individual's need.

Awards are made in cooperation with the guidance department and administered by a committee of educators. All committee members are from Wayland.

Cochituate PTA

WAYLAND -- Cochituate School PTA will meet tonight (Thursday) at 8 at the school.

Muscular Dystrophy Drive; Callers Coming on Sunday

WAYLAND -- Dr. Miriam Van Waters, president of the Middlesex County Chapter of the Muscular Dystrophy Assn. of America, says that more than 1000 citizens have signed up to ring doorbells in the 1961 Thanksgiving March for Muscular Dystrophy. Latest Teaching Methods Described for Loker PTA

WAYLAND -- "New Methods in Education" was the theme of the Nov. 8 meeting of the Loker School PTA. An enthusiastic group of parents and teachers heard Charles Drake, special teacher with the Wayland Schools, describe the processes through which children learn.

Mr. Drake complimented the Wayland schools on the appointment of men teachers on the elementary level.

He indicated the need in suburbia for children to have more contact with men -- fathers and teachers -- and the importance of "trial and error" in learning. He urged adults to let children make mistakes since some of the best learning will come out of them.

Principal Royal Grave, Mrs. Nancy Haynes and Mrs. Dorothy Klubock of the Loker staff also spoke on the latest methods being employed in the schools.

Mr. Dale Near, PTA president, requested interested parents to contact Mrs. Eleanor Gilman for children's speech and drama classes.

A questionaire concerning future social and fund-raising activities was distributed and Mr. Near announced the next meeting as a special program of music by the children and slides of school activities, to be presented on Wednesday, Dec. 13.

How to Find Out

We urgently recommend to all Wayland residents a reading of the Workable Program submitted by the Wayland Redevelopment Authority as part of its renewal program or of our summary of the same in this week's Town Crier.

The reason: for its quick summary of town government and the tentative plans for the future.

Up until now the Wayland Civic Assn. has shown the keenest interest in this program ...as part of its campaign to combat urban renewal here. Its members have become highly informed about town government as a result.

We urge all residents to appear at the special Board of Selectmen's hearing Monday at 8 at the Wayland Junior High School auditorium where this program will be discussed. It is important to all.

JOHN J. GRIFFIN, of 24 Cochituate rd., Wayland, for may years a maintenance expert in both general and corporate aviation, has been named Superintendent of Maintenance for East Coast Aviation Corp., Hanscom Field, Lexington. He formerly held the same position at American Automotive, L. B. Smith and Timmins of Montreal.

Hearing –

And then there is this penciled notation:

"The Renewal Authority is mindful of the fact that the neighborhood analysis heretofore made was only a preliminary survey and based on conditions existing several years ago. The Authority itself intends to make an intensive study of conditions in the area in its project planning (ed. note - a later stage of renewal planning)."

As for a land use plan, much under discussion in recent months, it tells the Housing and Home Finance Agency (parent agency for rerenewal) that such a plan was "completed in 1960 under 701 program; now being revlewed by Planning Board prior to adoption anticipated late 1961."

In reply to the government's request for plans for an "intensive planned program of code enforcement" in certain areas of town, the WRA states:

"In June 1959, the Board of Selectmen appointed a Condemnation committee composed of the following: member of Finance Committee, member Board of Selectmen, member Board of Health, member Welfare Commitee, Fire Chief, Building Inspector and Agent of Board of Health.

"This Committee meets each month and reviews reports by the Fire Chief, Building Inspector and Agent on their code enforcement activities and their operations of problems in the town.

"While the committee has no enforcement powers, each department represented used powers of enforcement condemnation granted to it under appropriate state legislation -- i.e., Ch. 143 Gen. Laws for the Building Inspector and minimum Housing Standards for Board of Health . . ."

As for coordination of the community's overall program, WRA states:

"As is customary in town government in Massachusetts, coordination of community improvement activities achieved through the informal cooperation of all town officials."

And as for any "major points --insufficient staff, ineffective procedures -- that will have to be strengthened in order to meet program objectives", WRA answers, "none."

Much of what the Workable Program is designed for is an assurance to the Federal government that the town is ready, willing and able through various codes AND enforcement and coordination to carry out what it says it will do. A reasonable General Plan is part of this.

To Washington's request for "tentative plans" to provide the community's share of renewal, WRA states:

"Tentative plans with respect to Wayland's share of any urban renewal project will be made after a survey and Planning Application has made an estimate of project costs; this estimate will of course take into consideration a 75 percent Federal grant (for communities under 50,000 population) and state assistance of half the local share."

On Page 12, "what agency or officials have been given the responsibility for developing plans to meet the relocation needs of families displaced by all types of governmental action?"

WRA replies: "The Wayland Redevelopment Authority has the responsibility for relocation caused by urban renewal" and . . .

"The Wayland Redevelopment Authority has the responsibility of determining whether its urban renewal program will in fact displace any families, and if so, how this need will be met.

"Such studies will be undertaken as part of Project Planning (a later stage)."

As to the all-important (to Washington) matter of citizen participation, WRA cites the Board of Selectmen which has appointed three members of a liaison committee on renewal and the fact that WRA members "have addressed organizations in the town, explaining urban renewal."

Also cited in this connection: the Wayland Civic Assn. meetings with guest speakers on renewal, the League of Women Voters' interest and the local newspaper's discussion of the subject.

As evidence of "plans to provide or to increase the present level of technical help, including the time schedule for putting such plans into effect," WRA says, "it is anticipated that the position of Town Engineer will be recommended to the next annual Town meeting."

Birds –

limited time when food is scarce; and normally they move from place to place until they find food. Most of them can get through the winter without our help, as insect food is under bark or in dead wood, and seeds and berries are available on many kinds of trees, shrubs, and weeds.

Why, then, do we feed the birds in winter?

Mainly because we like to see them at close range where we can identify them more easily and study their interesting behavior and manner of living. Their color gives pleasure on a winter day, and their activities provide many hours of enjoyment, especially for those who are more or less confined in winter.

A lifelong interest often starts when a child is impressed by a bird seen just outside the living-room window.

There is no better place to learn about birds than at your feeder, and no better time than in winter when the number of species is comparatively small. You can also get to know the early spring migrants a few at a time as they start to appear in March and April, before the rush of migration in May. Then there is always the chance that you will attract some unusual visitor. But rare birds or not, something fascinating and new can be seen every day by watching the common birds in your own backyard.

It is most important to remember that once feeding is started, it must be continued throughout the winter and early spring.

Birds cover regular routes in their search for food, and they will become accustomed to stopping at your feeder.

In February and March, when we usually get our heaviest snows and natural food is running low, then they depend on our feeders to provide a badly-needed lift.

A freezing rain is hardest on birds because it covers everything with ice.

Under these conditions, after a long night without eating, small birds like chickadees will die by noon if they cannot get food where they have become used to finding it.

Birds can withstand extreme cold only if they can get enough food to maintain their body heat.

Speed and death are two words that always travel hand in hand on the highways.

If all the good resolutions that are kept were placed end to end they wouldn't reach very far into the new year.

A hen-pecked husband is just an average man who gets too much of a good thing in the way of a better half.

Vokes Comedy Rings True, Try 'His Company' and See

By ANNE HOCKING

The Pleasure of His Company which opened last Friday, Nov. 10, at Vokes is a fine, fine example of real comedy as differentiated from ordinary comedy. The latter is an elaborately woven series of outlandish miscalculations artfully woven into a semblance of a plot. It can be funny but more frequently palls.

But here, however, we were treated to a play built as solidly on credible characterization and personality conflict as any tragedy or life itself. Whether it is a difference in emphasis or a lack of plot pretension that tricks us into laughter it is hard to say, but we are tricked.

Speaking of plot pretension, there was none, but authored by Samuel Taylor and Cornelius Skinner, it lacked little else. It was peppered throughout with an honestly, witty dialogue of the "true, too true" type and a sympathetic analysis of the motivations and despairs of the seven characters involved.

Though no one's life or even salvation are at stake, virtue is again at war with sin or what passes for sin in cultured society - sloppy living. At the very start our sympathies are enlisted on the sloppy living side through the charms of Pogo, an errant father time with the veracity of his observation. But now I give it second thought, for on Friday night Vokes took flight. Cheers to their pilot, Alice Colliton.

come to reclaim (or kidnap, rather) the affections of his daughter, Jessica, after 20 years of libertine life abroad.

It matters not to Pogo that the occasion of his return is to give his daughter's hand in marriage. He must have her, for not only is he between women but between youth and age and the demands for "the pleasure of his company" are beginning to appear on the wane.

Mother, fiancee, stepfather and grandfather of the bride take their corners and what evolves within this intimate cast is a sparkling but trenchant battle of the sexes, artfully waged and never won.

What is won, however, is theatrical acclaim for all participants involved. For any performance, amateur or professional, the distribution of talent was remarkably well distributed. All were given excellent lines and all delivered them excellently.

The curtain was raised on Al Strow as the Jap houseboy - what better harbinger of the good things to follow which were: Warren Erickson as Pogo, Judy Wiley as the bride and daughter, Mary Griffin as her mother, Mrs. Dougherty; Joe Manion as the befuddled fiancee; Jack Hyland, Mr. Dougherty; and Phil Bassett, the grandfather with a lovely penchant for misapplying a Thoreau-an philosophy to the situation at hand.

"What has wings and cannot fly?" a younger generation friend of mine queried the other day. Ah, of course, "the theatre" he volunteered. I distinctly remember being quite astounded at the

Fr. Barry Dies At 61 in Weston

WESTON -- The Office of the Dead was read Monday at 9:30 for the Rev. Paul F. Barry, S.J., 61, followed by a requiem Mass. Fr. Barry died Wednesday, Nov. 8 at Weston College.

Widely known as a teacher and missioner, Fr. Barry was assigned to St. Jude's Church in Waltham in 1957 following a stroke.

Previously he had taught at Holy Cross College, Boston College High School and had served in several administrative and mission posts. A brother, the Very Rev. James H. Barry, S.J., is superior of the Jesuit mission to Jamaica, B.W.I.

After his graduation from Boston College High in 1927, he studied for four years at the Shadowbrook novitiate and went to Weston College in 1931 to study philosophy. After a stay in Jamaica, he returned to Weston for further study in 1935 and was ordained there in June 1938.

After several teaching and other posts, he was transferred to the staff at Weston College.

Fr. Barry leaves another brother, J. Leo and two sisters, Mrs. Edwin L. Trask and Mrs. J. Jerome Reardon, all of West Roxbury.

Part of Trinitarian Talent Program

Alice in Wonderland to Music For 'Younger' Set Dec. 1, 2

A grinning cat in a tree,
A crying turtle by the sea,
A big white rabbit - oh, dear me!
Do you remember these vividly?

You will have the opportunity to meet some of the characters from "Alice in Wonderland" again -- or for the first time if you are among the younger Wayland residents.

On Dec. 1 and 2 at 7:30 p.m. scenes from Alice In Wonderland with music will be presented at Vokes Theatre for all the young in heart. Some of Irving Fine's choruses from "Alice" will be included. Tickets are 50 cents for children and 75 cents for adults. The play will last about 45 minutes so that bedtime schedules will not be too much delayed.

Nine members of the Trinitarian Congregational Church are offering this production as a contribution toward the current Talent Program. The proceeds will go to the Trinitarian Congregational Church.

The cast will include Irene Ewing, Shirley Smith, Betty Ann Peters, Herbert Fisher, Robert Knox, and Oliver Chamberlain. Production will be handled by Haldon Smith and Charles Peters. Music will be under the direction of Oliver Chamberlain and accompanied by Walter Gray.

Ticket reservations -- OL 5-0451.

Loker Fourth Grade At Children's Museum

WAYLAND -- Sixty-six members of the fourth grade at Loker School, on a field trip to the children's Museum in Boston, saw a film on Egypt, heard a talk on Egyptian life and were allowed to handle artifacts over 2000 years old. Accompanying them were two room mothers, Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer and Mrs. Eleanor Gilman as well as three teachers, Mrs. Florence Hughes, Charles Lombard and Mrs. Sally Crowell.

How Library Ticks: Weston LWV STudy

WESTON -- What makes a public library tick? Several members of Weston's League of Women Voters are making a detailed study of the Weston Public Library to find out.

They seek answers to such questions as: How are new books selected? What happens to a new book from the time it is received until it is available on the shelves?

What are the duties of the various staff members? What library services are now being offered to the public of Weston, and what services could be offered in the future with the space provided by an addition to the present building?

The League of Women Voters expect, through an objective study, to be able to better understand their public library, and to evaluate the library's needs for present and future expansion.

Christian Science Lecture Presented in Wayland

WAYLAND -- Today's challenges point up the need for active thinkers, individuals with deep spiritual convictions, Lela May Aultman told an audience in Wayland Sunday afternoon.

"The victory today belongs to those who actively express peace, not to the ones who fear war, Miss Aultman declared.

A member of The Christian Science Board of Lectureship, she spoke in First Parish Church, Wayland, under the auspices of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston. The subject of her lecture was "Christian Science: The Way of Active Peace."

"Atomic force itself could not start war," the lecturer said. "It is envy, hatred, lust for power, fear, etc., which engender conflict. So these are the things we must conquer with love, spirituality, and righteousness. Each individual whose life bears witness to God's supreme rule, is contributing to the peace of all mankind."

She noted that although Jesus Christ was surrounded by the sick and by sinners, deserted by his disciples and pursued by enemies "his own life was the greatest expression of peace and spiritual serenity the world has ever known."

Theories are worthless until they are harnessed to industry.

THE GAME

Tomorrow- 10:15 -Wayland

Not even death and taxes is more certain than the uncertainty over the outcome of the Thanksgiving game between Wayland and Weston High Schools . . . tomorrow at 10:15 a.m. at the snow-sodden Wayland High field.

Weston's George Harris has come up with an alert, aggressive squad with a 7-1 record. And Ralph Salvati's gridmen, after a slow start, have piled up an impressive 5-2 record.

But neither coach is willing to admit, even over the breakfast table at home, that his team has a chance. That's what'll make it a good game. See you there. May the better team win -- and no ties, please.

2 Boys Gravely Injured In 'Rocket' Experiment

WAYLAND -- A tragic experiment with a do-it-yourself rocket resulted in the partial loss of the left hand to two Wayland Junior High students last Wednesday.

The accident occurred after one failure to set the rocket off at the rear of the junior high school and only prompt action by police and fire officials prevented further tragedy.

Injured were Jeffrey Bernard, 13, of 4 Winthrop rd. and Robert Kleinkauf, 13, of 38 Moore rd.

Present but uninjured were Jeffrey's sister Joan, 8, and Drexel Langstroth, 14, of 19 Sedgemeadow rd.

Prompt action by Mrs. Donald Noseworthy, wife of the rector of the Church of the Holy Spirit, brought Fire Chief Francis J. Hartin to the scene at 4 Winthrop rd.

Chief Hartin applied first aid measures immediately and with Fireman Wilbur Pettigrew who applied a tourniquet to stop the flow of blood, rushed the boys to the Leonard Morse Hospital in Natick where they were given emergency treatment.

Chief Hartin used the fire radio to alert his headquarters of the emergency and firemen in turn phoned the hospital to be ready for the youngsters.

Ironically, the chemicals which the boys used in the conduit pipe are made available through the mail by a Wisconsin firm which advertises in most comic books abailable to youngsters.

Chief Hartin warned parents that such accidents are always a threat. He pointed out:

"If youngsters and their parents would see what happens in some cases--how people are injured, sometimes for life--they would be more careful to avoid making such experiments.

"In past cases, similar experiments with even simple charges have resulted in the loss of thumbs and fingers to Wayland young people."

The Bernard boy lost one finger and part of his hand. The Keinkauf youngster lost his thumb and three fingers.

Chief Hartin said the youngsters had just received the chemicals in the mail that day and had tried to make the rocket work near the junior high.

To check out their failure, the boys apparently went to the home of the Bernard boy's grandmother, Mrs. M. Allen Powning on Winthrop rd. where in the garage, they apparently tried to tamp down the chemicals.

The pipe was two feet long.

The surgeons had the youngsters on the operating table nearly five hours in an effort to save their hands.

Wayland police helped clear the way through rush-hour traffic along Rt. 27 and Natick police and firemen helped clear the way in that town. This was accomplished with the fire and police radio operators.

Police Chief Ernest Damon of Wayland and Inspector Joseph Stainato of the state fire marshal's office assisted in the investigation.

Chief Hartin pointed out that his department has in the past issued a number of warnings in the press against the fabrication or possession of any rocket or explosive devices.

He pointed out that the department "has refused requests for rocket experiments in conjunction with science fairs, being mindful of the potential danger of such tests."

Over 100 at Workable Program Hearing

WAYLAND -- The Board of Selectmen's hearing on the Workable Program prepared by the Urban Renewal Authority was held Monday night in spite of bad weather and the absence of two of the three members of the Board.

Selectmen Thomas Linnehan and Frank Tarr were out of town on business, and George Lewis of Concord conducted the meeting alone.

More than 100 interested citizens turned out and got as far as Page 7 -- or about half-way through -- the report in a page-by-page perusal of its questions and answers before adjournment at a late hour to a date, time, and place to be announced by the Selectmen.

Mr. Lewis, who had hoped to get through the whole of the Workable Program in one evening, was in favor of sticking it out and could have insisted on doing so, since hearings by town boards cannot be adjourned by a vote to those in attendance.

In agreeing to requests for adjournment, he showed again the good taste, good sense, and good humor employed throughout the hearing in keeping discussion on a thorny subject from going too far off the track or becoming too prickly.

More details in next week's Crier.

How You Can Feed Birds Through Worst Winter

(To show The Crier readers how to feed birds in the winter, Mrs. Charlotte E. Smith has drawn on published material from many sources and from her personal experience of 21 years in Weston.)

By CHARLOTTE E. SMITH

Birds are not fussy about the type of feeder they patronize, but they do have some preference as to location. A sheltered side of the house which gets the morning sun is much more attractive than the cold, windy north side.

Ground-feeding birds like a protected place nearby to "loaf" in--a dense tangle of unpruned bushes or a thick stand of young pines. Shelter is needed almost as much as food. Even a brush pile containing evergreen branches, will give some protection.

Your first feeder should be an open platform on a 5-or 6-foot post, set away from the house.

This is usually the most successful type to start with as the seed is in plain sight. Place it near shrubs or trees, if possible, because birds hesitate to fly a long distance directly to a feeder.

A small branch with several forks, nailed upright to the side of the platform, gives something to perch on before going to the flat surface.

The edges of the platform should be built up about an inch to help keep seed from blowing away.

Once a few birds find the food (chickadees are often the first), others will soon follow. When they get used to coming to the platform on the post, move it to a nearby window and fasten it to the sill.

If there are shrubs near the window, so much the better; if not, continue to use the branch but change its position so that it projects outward instead of being upright.

The disadvantages of an open platform or shelf are that seeds blow away and get wet. Next, try making a simple, straight-sided feeder 8 or 10 inches high, open front and back, length suitable to your window. It should have a glass top to protect the seed but keep it visible to the birds. Fasten a small dowel (for a perch) across the front--an inch or so higher than the bottom of the feeder. A branch nailed upright to the side also makes a convenient perch.

Even a youngster -- with a little adult help -- can make a simple feeder like this; or you can let your inventiveness be your guide and make one as elaborate as you wish.

If you would rather not "do it yourself," there are many excellent feeders on the market.

As far as the birds are concerned, the simple ones are usually just as acceptable as the fancy ones, provided that the location suits them.

There are other types of feeders, such as those which can be suspended from a branch or from a wire between two trees.

Sometimes it is a good idea to experiment and find out which ones are best for your particular area.

WESTON -- Fifteen percent of the proceeds from all sales made at the Weston Arts and Crafts Assn. Second Annual Sale and Exhibit will be used to purchase art books for the Weston Public Library's collection it has been announced.

The sale, one of the Association's current projects, will be held Thursday, Nov. 30, through Saturday, Dec. 2, at Leiby's Garden Shop in Weston Center from 10 to 4 daily. Members will be exhibiting and offering for purchase at that time their work in painting, ceramics, leather goods, etc.

The association is also currently engaged in finalizing plans for arts and crafts courses to be held in the basement of old elementary school Building A. Additional students are needed for a daytime painting class so that state funds can be obtained for paying a qualified teacher.

In addition, association members are eagerly awaiting the arrival in Weston of the third batch of students paintings from Thailand, part of their exchange program that has sent Weston work to Bangkok.

Mrs. Priscilla Ritter, chairman of this committee, has been notified that the paintings should arrive in New York around Nov. 13 on the S. S. Steel Flyer. They will then be shipped to Weston and exhibited sometime in January.

Pickens Victory Showed What Regulars Could Do

By SOUTHWORTH LANCASTER

(November 19 - 25, 1861)

THE NEWS: Six companies 17th Mass. Inf. and 2nd Mass. Light Battery were part of 6000-man task force on mission to clear the Eastern Shore of Virginia.

Nov. 21st -- 26th Mass. left Boston by sea for garrison duty at Ship Island, La. . . Nov.22-23-- In an attempt to relieve pressure on Ft. Pickens, Pensacola Harbor, Fla., Union naval force backed by fort's heavy guns bombarded besieging Confederate shore batteries, with main effort directed at Ft. McRee.

While mission to "take and destroy" McRee failed, the fort was so badly damaged that the Southern commander, Maj. Gen. Braxton Bragg, considered abandoning it. Union land forces were 6 batteries of regular artillery, part of 2d U.S.Inf. and 2 companies 6th N.Y. Inf. . . .

Nov. 23 -- Sen. John C. Breckenridge former U.S. vice president under Buchanan, was named brigadier general in the Confederate army. . .

Nov. 25th -- 13th Mass. Inf. was sent up the Potomac to Hancock, Md., with orders to disperse a Confederate force gathering on the opposite shore. The Southern troops, 600 strong, were merely making a short halt and had withdrawn before the 13th appeared.

BEHIND THE NEWS: Virginia's Eastern Shore is the long peninsula east of Chesapeake Bay running southward to Cape Charles. It had potential strategic value, but was not strongly held and the task force cleared it in bloodless fashion, returning on Dec. 2. Despite the lack of shooting, the political effect was great . . .

Ft. Pickens had been resolutely held by the Union, although its surrender was demanded at the outbreak of the War. Like Sumter, it was located on an island and could easily be cut off, but its continued possession in the heart of the South had both military and moral value to the Federals, something that was also apparent to the Confederates.

At the time, the South had not the strength to assault it and could only set up a siege. The November bombardment was intended to forestall later attacks and to that extent it succeeded, partly because Bragg, the Southern commander, was of the McClellan type and shrank from aggressive action. Pickens remained a Union strong point until the development of the Ship Island position rendered its superfluous. It was evacuated and destroyed in May 1862. . .

Braxton Bragg was a prominent Southern figure, whose memory is preserved in the name of Ft. Bragg, known to soldiers of later wars. As a West Pointer and U.S. artillery captain in the Mexican War ("A little more grapeshot, Capt. Bragg!"), he became a favorite of Jefferson Davis and at one time served as Chief of Staff. In the end he was a lieutenant-general, but somehow never achieved greatness and certainly was not one of Davis' happiest choices. . .

While the Pickens affair had only indirect bearing on the War as a whole, it was notable because it was handled chiefly by the regular army. One of the prime mistakes of the Lincoln administration was the failure to make proper use of the regulars, who by and large were given only minor tasks.

Politically, state support was of paramount importance and hence it was decided to form the Northern army from state troops, but even so, the regulars could have been better employed. . .

To Breckinridge may be added the name of John B. Floyd of Virginia, Buchanan's secretary of war, who became a Confederate brigadier. Fearing reprisals, he fled from Ft. Donelson in February 1862 when Grant attacked, leaving Simon B. Buckner to conduct the hopeless defence.

Bits & Pieces

Just a little bit about Thanksgiving we picked up: It was two Indians with a British accent that put the idea of Thanksgiving up to the surprised colonists at Plymouth Plantation.

According to the World Book, where we picked up our information, Somoset, a chief of the Pemaquid Indians, walked into the colony one day in March 1621 and proceeded to tell them how to make out in this New World. In case you're wondering about the British influence: he'd picked up some British English from some fishermen venturing along the Maine coast. Oh yes--his friend Squanto lent a helping hand. Thought you'd like to know how it all started. (Also see Mr. Howard Russell's detailed account of the genesis of our meal.)

Weston and Wayland residents might be interested in this: Among those who accompanied Pablo Casals at the White House last week were Alexander Schneider, violinist of the Budapest String Quartet and pianist Mieczyslaw Horszowsku, his long-time accompanist, both of whom are familiar locally as performers in Weston's Country Evening Concert series. Also mentioned among the distinguished musicians in the White House audience: Jesus Maria Sanroma, another soloist here in the series.

Our drama critic, Anne Hocking, wrote a perfectly understandable sentence in her review of Vokes last week but somehow the type got scrambled into something resembling beatnik talk.

What she said at the close was: "What has wings and cannot fly?" a younger generation friend of mine queried the other day. Ah, of course, "the theatre" he volunteered. I distinctly remember being quite astounded at the time with the veracity of his observation. But now I give it second thought, for on Friday night Vokes took flight. Cheers to their pilot, Alice Colliton."

There, that's the key -- now help yourself to a second reading.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S Russell

All-American Thanksgiving

Has it occurred to you that when you sit down to your Thanksgiving feast tomorrow, almost everything on the table will be of strictly American origin, never known to our forefathers until after Columbus discovered America?

Like the Pilgrims 340 years ago, your main course will probably be turkey, that definitely American bird with which they entertained their Indian guests.

This fowl had been domesticated by the Indians of Mexico and South America, but the red men here had not needed to tame them, for they were still plentiful in the woods. Since Indian times, though, New England farmers have developed two of the most valuable breeds of turkeys, called the Bronze turkey and the Narragansett.

Nowadays it is bird with "white meat", from which the host at dinner can carve wide thick slices of white meat, that everybody looks for. The United States Department of Agriculture has been trying to give you just this kind of bird.

When Mrs. Russell and I were at a conference at the University of Maryland five years ago, government scientists took us through the breeding pens at Beltsville where they are constantly at work mating birds of just these characteristics. It may be that the very turkey you enjoy tomorrow will be a descendant of one of the truly handsome pairs of turkeys that gobbled at us.

Perhaps some of the older folks will exclaim at how much more meaty and tender this bird is than the tough old gobblers their fathers used to carve on Thanksgiving Day.

"Do you grow any turkeys here in New England?" a newly-transplanted Pennsylvanian asked me recently. Yes indeed we do, and the very tenderest and sweetest, fed, like a baby, on special formulas; and for them you will pay a few extra cents a pound.

My latest figures (for 1953) tell us that Massachusetts growers raised 10,000,000 pounds of turkey meat, enough to give each of my readers and every other person in the state a pound apiece for Thanksgiving and another for Christmas. For these birds, we paid the growers $4 million; not a cent too much, either, for turkeys are the trickiest fowl of all to raise; and what enormous quantities of costly grain they eat!

For a vegetable, tomorrow, of course you will have squash, and for your relish, cranberries. As with the turkey, it will be native New England dishes you are eating. The Indians here had developed many varieties of squashes, and grew them here centuries before our forefathers had even heard this word squash, which is as truly Indian as the vegetable itself. If you have cooked a big thick-meated Hubbard, though, that variety probably came to us from the Andes of South America.

The cranberry in your sauce is native all over New England. Cranberries are rich with the iron and iodine we so much need. For jelly, if you have been on Cape Cod this fall, perhaps you brought home some of the Cape's bitter-sweet beach plum jelly, or maybe you will be happy with bronze-red crabapple. In either case you will be enjoying a flavor native to New England before our forefathers reached here.

That potato which you smother in gravy, whether sweet or white, also originated on this side of the ocean, in South America.

For an all-American salad, you may have your choice of tomato, pepper, avocado or pineapple. If, with all these other good things you really must have bread, try a square of cornbread.

Now we're ready for dessert. Unless you have filled up too lavishly with turkey and potato, how about a piece of pumpkin pie, surely native New England.

But if you would prefer ice cream, you may have your choice of vanilla, chocolate, strawberry, black raspberry, or maple walnut; or raspberry sherbet; and you can be certain that the flavor or fruit, at least, originated on this side of the Atlantic.

Do you want something to drink after this big meal? Have coffee if you wish. Most likely it grew in Brazil, though not native there.

But if you care to keep your meal strictly American, try cocoa instead. This beverage the white man never enjoyed until after the New World was discovered. And when the nuts are passed, you may have your choice of peanuts or pecans.

This has certainly been a bountiful and delicious meal! Yet not a single thing on the menu could you or I have enjoyed if we had lived in Europe, Asia or Africa before Columbus' voyage in 1492, though counterparts of a few of the berries were to be found in Europe.

Oh yes, something for the children. After you get down, children, you may each have a piece of bubble gum. It is made, you know, from the juice or sap of a tropical American tree.

What Better Place . . . ?

(FROM THE NEW ENGLANDER)

In the past few weeks we've roamed the region in what might be called restless fashion, observing with some misgivings the passing of summer, the coming of fall, aware that winter will soon walk the land.

At Point Judith, R.I., in a pouring rain, we watched the great green combers roar in from the Atlantic, piling shoreward, white-capped and troubled in the wake of Esther, fifth hurricane of the season. Down the coast at Norwalk, in Connecticut, we skipped flat stones out over the grey waters of the Sound, saw birds high overhead, wheeling and turning, indecisive in the shallow light. The wind at Rindge, N. H., had come from Canada, cold, touching at the mountainside of leaves and at the faces of men who worked along the road, tinting each in turn a scarlet hue.

In Maine we woke to a fog-shrouded morning, waited and finally saw the sun break through, sharp and bright, piercing in the cool air, but sinking, too soon, into an evening sky where frost silvered the rooftops and lay thick and crystalline on windshields of cars parked under the fragile fingernail moon.

In Vermont, along the tree-fringed Connecticut River, white birches stood starkly contrasted beside yellow - leaved maples, while at Sturbridge and Plymouth, in Massachusetts, the grasses along the roadway grew sere and dry, humming and clicking with the sounds of living things making ready for the coming of the cold.

We reflected that in some parts of the world the passing of the seasons into winter is a time for anxious concern and even privation. But here, where great orange heaps of pumpkins line the roadways, where tart apples and purple grapes and multi-colored Indian corn bedeck the roadside stands, the fall is splendid indeed, and the energetic gathering-in of foods to eat and wood to burn speaks of plenty in the land.

If winter is to come, and it will, what better place in all the world to meet it than here in New England?

Christian Science Services

WESTON -- A challenging call to overcome evil, no matter how subtle, with the power of God will be heard Sunday at Christian Science church services at First Church Scientist, Weston.

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon. Readings from the Bible will include this verse from Revelation (21): "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son."

A correlative citation from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy states (p.571): "At all times and under all circumstances, overcome evil with good."

The Golden Text is from I John: "Whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

In a Suitable Base

Our friend Harry hurried in here the other afternoon, all out of breath with the following imperfect, important, impervious snatches which he classified thus:

"Overheard Any lunchtime in a Wayland Restaurant Near the R--TH--N Lab."

". . . in a suitable base." ". . . Our West Coast plant is using a sublimated phalarope in liquid which frenzies the cogitator. Works fine." ". . . well, of course, any impairment of the grossline feed would render the mean of the lally column indicator nugatory." ". . . We were in Mexico, and when the boat went that way we all went this way." ". . . in a suitable base." ". . . but what they really need is a whole new paravanial complex to reduce the scrimshaw content to its minimal." ". . . Hell, everybody knows that Rodeheaver's Law only applies at temperatures above the rocine line." ". . . Our doryphorous antebrachia is 100 per cent discriminatory - but try and tell them that." ". . . and they've got a bake that really deluviates. I wish we could get hold of it." ". . . No, it's actually a perfectly simple double-reactor-wobbler-agitated - cross - over - compound - semi - autonomous thunder pumper." ". . . but doesn't it distort the precession of your biflex scale?" ". . . in a suitable base."

Phone Company Extends Boston Service to Wayland

WAYLAND -- Boston is moving into Wayland in probably the only way Waylanders would like it -- by phone -- on or about Dec. 16.

Unlimited Metropolitan Residence Service, it's called.

It's limited to one-party-line subscribers here who request the changeover. In two weeks 300-350 have asked for the change.

And the cost: $11.50 basic rate, as compared with $5.65 now.

It will mean that, for the present, one-party subscribers will be able to dial -- without extra cost -- to any one of 43 exchanges and to more than a million fellow subscribers.

Business phones will not be included in this service.

Also excluded -- multi-party lines.

The whole matter depends upon approval by the State Department of Public Utilities.

The meaning behind it: so many of the recent (past 10-15 years) emigres from Boston and other communities have not left their ties behind them. Greater Boston is being knit together with phone service . . . if by nothing else.

Kenneth H. Wood, manager of the Natick regional office of the N. E. Telephone and Telegraph Co., stressed that this is on an experimental basis.

Said Mr. Wood:

"The company realizes there is a demand for unlimited service to a much larger area than is now available.

"The proposed service will allow customers to call without a toll charge to the present unlimited service area (Wayland, Natick, Sudbury, and Waltham) and to all exchanges in the Boston telephone directories except Burlington . . . Included will be calls to downtown Boston, known as the Central Exchange."

ONE WARNING TO ALL SUBSCRIBERS: Beginning next Monday: you must dial all five numbers when you're calling another ELmwood number. The Crier number is now 8-7700. Just too many phones in the exchange now to allow for "country dialing".

Telephone company executives stress that the new service will be extended on a first-come, first-served basis.

The response is running about the same (in proportion) in Wayland, Natick and Framingham, where there are 25,000 subscribers in the three towns.

Maybe 'Slow Learner' Has Something To Offer, Weston Teachers Find

WESTON -- It's an afternoon off for the Weston youngsters now but their teachers are engaged in a stimulating workshop which delves into the workings of cognitive psychology.

Utilizing the first Wednesday afternoon of the month for "released time", teachers in the Weston schools have an opportunity to from workshops which explore some of the new techniques and methods of education.

Dr. Helen Kenney, a member of the Center for Cognitive Psychology at Harvard was the afternoon's speaker. She outlined results of research in the Newton schools which indicate some of the problems the teacher encounters with children who either "over-achieve" or "under-achieve."

The over-achiever is one who tends to far surpass his prognostic indication for scholastic performance. The under-achiever does not live up to his capabilities.

Mr. Walter Gleason, Accordion Plan director, organized this first "released-time" meeting of the year.

One of the facts which came out of the discussion is that society represented by the classroom, may be rewarding the over-achiever who relies upon sheer memorization of facts. At the same time, the under-achiever, who resolves situations analytically, frequently does not perform as well and therefor receives lower grades.

The implications of this situation, both for the schools and for the future of society, was widely discussed.

There are substitues in some lines, but none for practice.

MERIT SYSTEM study compiled by the State League of Women Voters is presented to Chairman Thomas F. The state study involves the operation of the merit system in the state civil service system.

Manning Offers Bill to Exempt Shelters, Only If...

WESTON -- State Rep. Donald J. Manning (R_Weston,Waltham) has filed with the clerk of the House of Representatives a bill to exempt "air raid, bomb or fallout shelters" from the real estate tax.

This is one of the more controversial questions to arise out of the recent interest in shelter-building.

Since the Civil Defense question has intensified during the legislative recess and since there is no statewide law on the books, it is expected that tax aspects of shelters will be one of the bigger issues facing the Legislature this session.

Weston assessors, for the present, regard all shelters as buildings and therefore subject to taxes. Wayland assessors are exempting shelters, for the present.

Behind the affair is the question of how much tax for how much shelter use?

Rep. Manning answers this in his bill by stating that exemption should be granted only if:

The shelter is "built according to Civil Defense specifications and ....used solely as an air raid, bomb or fallout shelter."

Rep. Manning said he had conferred with Edward C. Wilson, the state's local tax expert and that Mr. Wilson said state law was necessary to legally and properly exempt the shelters from assessment.

Mr. Manning said his bill would not limit the cost of the tax-empt shelter to $2000 as some legislators have urged.

He maintained: "Since some persons and some communities may want to build neighborhood shelter obviously the cost would be more than $2000 and it would be unfair to penalize them because of a different approach."

Wayland Officials Receive League's Civil Service Study

WAYLAND -- Chairmen of town boards, Thomas F. Linnehan, Robert M. Morgan, Edwin W. Marston and Ronald H. Wood have received complementary copies of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters "The Merit System in Massachusetts" from the Wayland League as a part of the League's effort to make this publication abailable to interested citizens.

Norman E. Taylor, Town Executive Secretary, the Republican and Democratic Town Committees, The Veterans of Foreign Wars, and The American Legion have also received the report. Two copies have gone to each the Public Library and the Wayland High School.

Copies of the publication can be purchased for $1 from the publication chairmen of the Wayland and Weston Leagues: Mrs. Wilmot Whitney, Jr. 49 Webster rd., Weston, TW9-0538; and Mrs. John Pratt Jr., 4 Cole rd., Wayland, EL8-2001.

Deadline Now For Adult Classes

WESTON -- If at least 20 people register at the appointed time and place, a State-University Extension Adult Education course in painting will be given in the basement of Weston Public School Building "A"; the time, Tuesday, Nov. 28, at 10 A.M. Any Massachusetts resident may register for this course, and the fee will be $10 for 10 lessons.

If enough people show interest in day or evening classes in other subjects, by signing the bulletin in the Weston Public Library, such classes will be organized. But no class can start unless at least 20 people sign up at the appointed time.

These classes are made possible through the kindness of the Weston School Department which makes its facilities availabe.

Aussie Visitor Impressed by Weston Schools

WESTON -- Australia was represented last week in the Weston schools when Charles Ebert, Director of education for the North Coast area of New South Wales visited under a United States Leader Grant.

Mr. Ebert, a guest of the State Department, is in the United States to observe and collaborate with educators, particularly to view the advantages of the decentralized form of education. Washington thought Weston a good place to see these benefits in action, which was the reason for Mr. Ebert's visit.

The visitor was particularly impressed "with the ease of communication" of Weston's students. He had the opportunity to witness a 7th grade social studies class and to talk with the boys and girls about Australia.

Nichols Stages Triple Premiere

By BEVERLY BODEN

Almost before the last piece of tile was laid and the last wire was connected, the new stage of the high school was brilliantly decorated for the opening night of Shaw's "Arms and the Man" expertly cast and directed by Mr. Nichols, the new director of dramatics. It was a triple premiere for the stage, the cast, and the director at Weston. Shaw was around last year in "Pygmalion."

Arra Avakian was a dashing and lovable "chocolate cream soldier." The audience also fell in love with the beautiful Raina played charmingly by Chelo Castillo. One of the memorable parts of the play was their scene, soon after the curtains opened in the first act, where Bluntschli hides out in Raina's bedroom. Dave Leithead's brief appearance as the bobbing inspector added sparkle to the scene too.

Richard Thomas was well cast to play the part of the blustering army officer, Petkoff. Someone did an excellent job making him up. His beard looked so real. The wifely-motherly Mrs. Petkoff was convincingly played by Georgie Roland. John Harnish portrayed an anxious and arm-waving Sergius, who was confused about love among other things. With hair falling to her waist, Renee Strong was a saucy Louka. Don Saunders just looked the part of the butler in that "cute" costume.

In putting such a polished performance on the boards, Mr. Nichols had both the high aspirations of a Petkoff and the practical know-how of a Bluntschli. To paraphrase Shaw's final lines in the play, "What a director! Is he a director!" As "midwife" of the production, Barbara Arnold took care of the infinite number of details left to the assistant director.

Actors as well as crew members worked on sets when they were not rehearsing the play. The smooth pace of the play can be attributed to the many hours of practice which even continued into the evening on several occasions. No wonder Arra looked so natural when he fell asleep on Raina's bed.

It is regrettable that there was not a capacity crowd both nights to enjoy the play and the music of the orchestra during the intermissions. A full house would have been the best reward for the devotion of the cast and crew. Although the audience was small, it was favorably impressed by the practiced performances. The next play scheduled for January 26 and 27 should be well attended now that the students and Mr. Nichols have established a reputation.

"OR, OUT YOU GO" threatens Don Sanders to Renee Strong in a scene from Shaw's "Arms and the Man."

Harrier Season Ends With 4–3 Victory

By JOHN KINGERY

Coach Marotta led Weston's Cross Country team to a winning 4-3 season, a second place in a triangular meet with Newton North and South, and an impressive record at the Massachusetts State Championship.

Seven out of the ten members of the squad who participated in the State Tournament with thirty other schools ran the 2.6-mile course in less than fifteen minutes. "If the runners continue cutting their time, as they have been doing, Weston will place among the top ten in the State meet next year," predicts Mr. Marotta.

Russ Reilly, who joined the team this year to get in shape for basketball, amazed everyone by being Weston's number one man on the squad. Mike Lombard has moved up to the front this season and has tied Russ's record of 14.28 minutes. A new junior, Richard Price, has been placing third. Other strong runners are Don Moodie and the co-captains, John Bump and William Vaughan. Outstanding determination was shown by Bob Oldfield, who came in third in the first meet despite several leg operations.

Hopes for an undefeated season were dampened in a Friday the 13th match with Bedford. Not only did the team seem to get off on the wrong foot, but Mike Lombard lost a shoe in the starting pileup. He finished eighth in spite of the handicap.

There is a rumor going around that there is a parking meter on the roof.

Hockey Scores High

By CATHY ASHBROOK

The '61 girls' hockey team has finished another winning season despite a difficult beginning. Darlene DeNapoli was the only veteran on the varsity. After losing to the two toughest rivals, Concord and Lincoln-Sudbury, the team started a winning streak which is not yet broken.

Coached by Miss Butera, the team scored victories over Wayland (twice), Westwood, Newton South, Wellesley, and Newton. Dana Hall managed to hold the team to a 4-4 tie. The Junior Varsity has a 4-3-2 record to date. In both games they lost, they were defeated by only one goal. The final game of the season was played against Cambridge School of Weston on November 1 . The scores were too late for this issue.

E. Gretry for the occasion. Students projects will be exhibited in the biology and industrial arts area.

FBLA Members Tour Quartermaster Center

On Tuesday afternoon, November 7, the Weston High School Chapter of the Future Business Leaders of America journeyed to Natick to tour the Quartermaster Research & Engineering Center there. Mr. George Tjaerlis, chief of the Employment Bureau, personally conducted the group through several departments of this U. S. Government installation.

The girls were given an opportunity to view the kinds of clerical work going on, to examine the business machines being used, and to question the employees about their various duties. The supervisor in each of the departments visited explained briefly the nature of the work being done and the requirements for employment in that department. The tour culminated in the office of an executive secretary, who chatted informally with the girls about her particular duties.

The group was accompanied on the trip by Mrs. Thelma C. Hoyle, F.B.L.A. adviser, and two parents. Club members making the tour were: Marilyn Barclay, Chris Cetrone, Jane Drew, Nancy Ferranti, Judy McIntyre, Donna Knowles, Reny Leiser, Jane Morgan, Pat Murphy, Guille Navarro, Sue Randall, and Sue Wright.

Smoke Signal Goes To B.U.

By TINA COLCORD

Have you readers noticed the new layout of the Smoke Signal? The changes are a direct result of the Boston University Scholastic Press Association lectures attended by five members of the staff on October 27 and 28. Changes in the make-up of the page include the new position of the name plate and the "circus" arrangement of the stories.

Students who went to Boston for the lectures included Beverly Boden, Susan Morgan, Claire Shneider, Tina Colcord, and Leslie Townsend. After the welcoming lecture they separated to go to such lectures and panels as "Sports Writing", "Feature Writing," "Newspaper Problems and Solutions," and "Newswriting and Reporting."

Ideas for the new layout were discussed with Dr. Shen, an assistant professor in journalism at Boston University. Most of the lecturers and panelists were professors or professional newspaper men.

Harris and Salvati Silent About Weston–Wayland Game

Coach Harris of Weston and Coach Salvati of Wayland are as silent and straight-faced as two poker players. The stakes are high. If Weston defeats Wayland at the traditional Thanksgiving football game to be played at Wayland high school on November 23 at 10 a.m., it will be our first victory in seven years.

Pep rallies on the eve of the big game are scheduled for both schools. All of Weston is invited to join the students, band, and cheerleaders for the Wallop Wayland Rally at the new high school tonight. Drums will begin beating in the parking lot at 7 p.m. Mr. Marrota has consented to be the moderator of the rally. Wayland has planned a bonfire at the Cochituate field.

Judged on their season's scores, Weston is the favored team. We finished with a 7-1 record, and Wayland with a 5-2. In matches with schools played by both teams, Weston's first: Lynnfield 14-0, 39-0; Bedford 48-8, 20-8; Ashland 20-0, 20-6; North Reading 24-0, 14-12.

"In a game like this, you can't depend on scores," warned Mr. Proctor, Weston's Athletic Director. "When the rivalry is so intense, anything can happen." Both teams are as tight-lipped and determined to win as their coaches.

A crowd of several thousand is expected to attend the game. Tickets are on sale at Wayland. They cost $1 for adults and 75¢ for students.

Editorial

By SUE MORGAN and MISS DEISHER

With Thanksgiving just a day away, I wonder how many of us will remember to be thankful for just being alive and above the ground.

Russia Explodes 50-megaton Bomb, Kennedy Plans to Resume Tests in the Atmosphere if Necessary, East-West Tension Mounts in Berlin, Peace Talks Fail in United Nations, Scientists Disagree on Danger of Fallout, Bigger Stronger Shelters Necessary for Survival. These headlines and others like them make us wonder whether this may not be the last Thanksgiving. Perhaps there will be others, but will we have so much to be thankful for then as we do now?

A few Thanksgivings ago we looked suspiciously at the cranberries on the dinner table and wondered if they had been sprayed by that chemical that had something to do with cancer. Now must we hesitate again to take a heping spoonful of the delectable berries because of possible contamination from fallout? Will the milk contain Strontium 90?

In order to keep Thanksgiving a happy occasion and for more important reason, let us be more than thankful for what we have this year. Let us DO SOMETHING toward keeping peace in the world without exploding bombs. We can begin by reading, listening, and discussing the problems of maintaining peace which now confront our heads of state. Now is not the time to bury our heads in the sand or decide that whatever we do the world will be doomed. Nor should we build an inpenetrable fallout shelter with a machine gun mounted on top. Instead, let us cultivate a genuine concern for the welfare of all mankind. Wouldn't this be acting in the true spirit of Thanksgiving?

Practical Study Guide

By SUSAN MURPHY

Now that the first marking period is beyond recovery -- all on the cards -- it is time to take a critical look at our study habits and see where they can be improved. Below is a list of suggestions we have prepared for the guidance department

1. Never study on an empty stomach. English is much more digestible when accompanied by a peanut butter sandwich. Treat yourself to a cookie every time you finish a page of World Geography. Experiment with a variety of snacks with each subject until you find a satisfying combination.

2. The best position for concentration is with head on the same level with feet or lower. Any relaxed position stimulates deep thought.

3. A nearby phone is essential for discussions on assignments and getting advice (also answers) from other industrious, earnest students. Many freshmen have found that a gently humming radio stimulates clear thinking and drowns out small disturbances such as parents calling.

4. Try to do most of your homework at home. Studying in class, study hall and conference period is extremely inconvenient -- you may be watched. To make the best of a bad situation, pile all your belongings, including gym suit, pocketbook, and umbrella in front of you on the desk. Check the weather outside. This needs careful study. Clean out your notebook and tear all waste paper in eighths before throwing it away.

5. When doing homework in class it is occasionally necessary to smile admiringly at the teacher and mumble "Hmm, yes, hmm" at what he is saying.

6. Never be caught wi h a pencil and a clean sheet of paper. That is just asking for trouble.

Wayland Accountant Becomes Full Harvard Professor

WAYLAND -- Neil E. Harlan of 82 Sears rd., has been named professor of business administration at Harvard University, effective Jan. 1, 1962.

Professor Harlan has taught in the accounting and management control areas at Harvard's Graduate School of Business Administration since 1953.

While at Harvard he published, in 1956, a study of "Airframe Subcontracting." He was co-author, for the case method of business education, of "Cases in Controllership" in 1958 and of "Cases in Accounting Policy" in 1961.

A native of Arkansas, professor Harlan, now 40, lived in Cherry Valley, Ark., and Memphis, until 1948. He became assistant educational director of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants in 1950.

Dr. Harlan completed his undergraduate work at the University of Arkansas, receiving a bachelor of science degree in 1947.

During World War II he served with the 8th Armored Division of the U. S. Army in Ardennes, Rhineland and Central European campaigns.

He was qualified as a C. P. A. in Arkansas in 1948 and received the M. B. A. degree in 1950 and the D. B. A. in 1956, both from Harvard University.

The American Heritage Book of Indians

BY THE EDITORS OF AMERICAN HERITAGE THE MAGAZINE OF HISTORY

American Heritage has put together another superb volume that boasts, like its predecessors, a background of thorougb research and a generous array of contemporary maps and drawings, many of tbem now recovered after being lost for centuries. This is the first account ever to follow the thread of history, century by century, of all the Indians, as they affected each other and the white man, and as the white man affected them. The narrative toucbes on times as early as 20,000 B.C.; it tells about the first peoples who came to America from Asia and carries the story of these different peoples, and the places where they lived and roamed, right up to the present day. The volume is a tremendous and unique book of history, with 500 illustrations (125 of them in full color) and an introduction by President John F. Kennedy.

A Treasury of the World's Great Prints

The Artists—Their Work, Their Lives and Times

SELECTED AND PRESENTED BY STEPHEN LONGSTREET

A REAL "FIRST" among art books—the only one on the market which covers the entire field of prints. It is a big (9" x 12"), elegantly produced volume presenting the work of 23 great print makers from Dürer to Picasso, with 232 plates plus a chapter of text about each artist. In every case, the artist's pictures are presented together with the chapter about him. Longstreet introduces such men as Brueghel, Hogarth, Goya, Blake, Daumier, Gauguin, Matisse and the Japanese masters with colorful biographies written in the lively style that has made him a best-selling novelist. There is none of the jargon or technical detail so often found in art books. Most of the prints are full-page, and all color prints are reproduced in color. This is an outstandingly good-looking book, organized for the reader's convenience and written for his entertainment. October. Pre-Christmas, $12.50; thereafter, $15.00. #7615

Martyn Green's Treasury of Gilbert & Sullivan

EDITED BY MARTYN GREEN

ILLUSTRATED BY LUCILLE CORCOS

THIS IS the gift book of this or any other year: the Gilbert & Sullivan book to end all Gilbert & Sullivan books. The Gilbert librettos and Bab sketches of all the eleven major Savoyard operettas are presented in their entirety. Each operetta has a full-color illustration of its set and characters. The sheet music and words of all the favorite songs from each opera, arranged for piano and singing, with each song also carrying a charming black-and-white illustration, follow. And Martyn Green, for many years the darling of millions in his roles with the D'Oyly Carte Company, supplies a foreword for each operetta, giving its history and background, and marginal notes to the Gilbert text, telling anecdotes and giving suggestions as to the playing of scenes, the design of costumes, and anything else that pops into his imaginative head in connection with the particular business that is going on in the operetta at that exact moment. *October. Something About Birds

BY CHARLOTTE E. SMITH

WESTON -- Pine Grosbeak reports increased, as anticipated, during the week of Nov. 8-14, with flocks seen by Mrs. J. A. Williams, Love lane (6-10), Mrs. R. M. Hills, South av. (2), Mr. and Mrs. H. Draper, Wellesley st. (abt. 50, including a dozen adult males), Mrs. A. R. Crampton, Conant rd (several, probably part of the flock seen earlier by C. Terkelsen), and Mrs. C. A. Whitney, Boston Post rd. (1 ad. Male, 2 females). All were eating fruit, mostly flowering crab.

On Nov. 11, Mrs. E. C. Briggs, Boston Post rd., saw 6 white-winged crossbills (3 males, 3 females) eating sunflower seed at her feeder. These nothern finches move south for the same reason as the pine grosbeaks--shortage of food--and although they are mainly attracted by the cones of Norway spruce and hemlock, they do occasionally visit a feeder. The crossed tips of their beaks (which Mrs. Briggs could plainly see) are especially adapted for getting the seeds out of cones.

Mrs. E. F. Foote heard migrating geese at 6 on Nov. 10; and Mrs. D. R. Davidson saw a blue-winged teal with black ducks on a small pond near Goden Ball rd. on Nov. 8. The two brown-capped chickadees and two tufted titmice continue to be seen daily (Noyes), two titmice visited Mrs. A. R. Crampton's feeder on Conant rd. Nov. 13 (probably the same ones as at Mrs. Noyes'); but two more were reported on Nov. 15 by Mrs. D. R. Brooke, Derby lane--so Weston is well-supplied this year with these attractive little birds!

The thrush seen on Nov. 8 by Mrs. Davidson was found dead on the 10th, and proved to be a hermit thrush. Mrs. J.A. Chisholm, Bemis rd., saw a flock of 8 cedar waxwings on Nov. 11; and single robins have been reported by Lawson and Smith. Fox sparrows have been migrating continuously (the largest flock 15 on Nov. 10 (Mrs. H. P. Morton, Chestnut st.); and 1-2 Tree Sparrows were reported between Nov. 8-12 by Davidson, Hills, Foote, Lawson, Smith. A flock of 30 juncos was seen on Nov. 9(Smith).

Area GOP Hears Richardson Call For Aid in Cleanup

SUDBURY -- Elliot Richardson told an enthusiastic gathering of 175 Area Republicans at the Wayside Inn, Sudbury that Massachusetts residents lack confidence in our present law enforcement procedures. Mr. Richardson was the U.S. Attorney for Massachusetts until early this year. Prior to this appointment, he served as Assistant Secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in the Eisenhower Administration.

Mr. Richardson claimed that the deep resentment of the citizens of the Commonwealth against having to pay something on the side for benefits that should be available as a matter of right is like a dam ready to burst.

He asserted that the present Attorney General has been "reacting" only to public pressure rather than "acting" to fulfill the mandate of the people and noted that it is the ordinary citizen--the plumber, the carpenter, the pharamacist, the real estate broker, the small businessman--who is most hurt by the failure to vigorously pursue corrupting influences.

Mr. Richarson declard that it is time that the public act to restore "full confidence in the law enforcement procedures of Massachusetts and move to defend our citizens from the abuses which they have suffered at the hands of a relatively few corrupt but powerful public officials."

The meeting was sponsored for Republican workers in the Middlesex-Worcester Senatorial District by Ann C. Gannett of Wayland and Russell G. Simpson of Sherborn, the Republican State Committee representatives for that area. This district, which is represented in the Massachusetts Senate by Senator Charles Olson of Ashland, includes the city of Marlborough and the towns of Framingham, Natick, Wayland, Sudbury, Hudson, Maynard, Acton, Ashland, Boxborough, Holliston, Hopkinton, Sherborn, Stow, Berlin, Bolton, Harvard, Lancaster and Northboro.

Dedication Seminar Dec. 2 At New Weston High

WESTON -- This will be a dedication not soon to be forgotten.. the formal opening of the new Weston High School.

A series of seminars for parents and educators designed to bring out what is "excellence in secondary education" will be held Saturday, Dec. 2. according to Russell Cox, chairman of the Weston School Building Committee which is sponsoring the event.

"We felt," said Mr. Cox, "that the best thing we could do in dedicating this school was to hold a series of panel discussions with leading educators on hand to bring out 'the why' of this new school.

"Naturally, we are proud of its beauty and design, but we thought that more important than that was the reason it was designed in just that way. We think parents in Weston want to know the educational reasons for this type of building."

The Dedication day will be divided into four parts: two successive sets of panels, a luncheon, formal dedication and an open house.

The hours: 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Two sets of three one-hour panel discussions will be held with a college educator, preparatory instructor, a Weston and a non-Weston high school teacher in addition to the moderator.

The subjects to be discussed: mathematics, English, fine and applied arts, science, social studies and foreign languages.

As Mr. Cox explained it:

Inclusion of a college authority on the panels will afford parents an opportunity to know what is expected currently of the high school graduate in college.

Participation by preparatory and non-Weston High teachers will lend perspective to how these subjects are being handled elsewhere.

Panel hours: 10 to 11 a.m. and 11:30 to 12:30 p.m. Luncheon at 12:30 in the cafeteria. Tickets by advance purchase only.

Formal dedication at 2 p.m., with William G. Saltonstall, principal of The Phillips Exeter Academy speaking on "Seeking Excellence in Secondary Education."

An open house from 3 to 5 p.m. will follow. Guides from the Student Council and National Honor Society will be available to answer questions.

Participating in the formal dedication at 2:

Chairman Edward M. Dickson of the Board of Selectmen; Chairman Robert H. Marden of the School Committee; Schools Supt. Anthony G. Brackett; Mr. Cox; The Rev. Health Board Urges Flu Shots -- Now

WAYLAND -- The Board of Health urges Wayland residents to get flu shots immidiately.

Said Health Agent Ronald H. Wood this week: this fall and winter, the Surgeon General's Advisory Committee on Influenza has recommended that persons at high risk be immunized as soon as practicable.

"At the very latest this should be done by the usual beginning of the influenza season, late in December."

Mr. Wood stressed that specific routine protection should be taken by all persons with "chronic debilitating disease such as chronic cardiovascular, pulmonary, renal or metabolic disorders--in particular, patients with rheumatic heart disease, especially those with mitral atenosis and other cardiovascular disorders."

Others who should be careful: patients with Addison's disease, diabetes or diabetes mellitus, pregnant women and all over 65.

Anyone in these classifications, cautions Mr. Wood, should contact their physician before the onset of the flu season.

Mail Box Vandals Warned of Penalty

WAYLAND -- Repeated instances of "de-posting" of mail boxes in Wayland have been reported to Postmaster Thomas E. Hynes, he reported this week.

Coupled with the report of this tearing down of rural mail boxes on Woodridge, Claypit Hill and Moore rds. and Old Connedticut Path was a warning that the law provides:

"...that whoever wilfully or maliciously injures, tears down or destroys any letter box or other receptacle intended for delivery of mail ...shall be fined not more than $1000 or imprisoned not more than three years."

Mr. Hynes asked residents having information about such destruction to report to the police and the post office.

Role in U.N. Event

Turner, daughter of Mrs. Heathcote Turner, 32 Rolling lane, Wayland, attending Connecticut College, was a delegate to a special national conference on the United Nations held in New York City on November 10 and 11. WAYLAND FIREMEN FIGHT DAIRY FIRE at Watertown Dairy barn off Moore rd. last Wednesday. Forty-six hundred feet of line were laid by firemen who were kept at the scene of the $25,000 fire for more than six hours, although the blaze was brought under control in two hours. Low-hanging smoke clouds made fire-fighting difficult. (Town Crier Photo)

$25,000 Fire Sweeps Watertown Dairy Barn

WAYLAND -- Fire of undetermined origin swept the hayloft section of the Watertown Dairy barn off Moore rd. early Wednesday, Nov. 22, causing damage estimated at $20,000 to $25,000.

Prompt action by Fire Chief Francis J. Hartin in calling for extra equipment kept the fire confined to the upper-level hayloft.

Two firemen, Wilbur Pettigrew and John F. Columbus, were injured fighting the stubborn blaze and treated at the office of Dr. James Burke.

Fifty-eight head of cattle were rescued from this barn, one of seven owned by the dairy on this site.

Complicating the fire-fighting was the necessity of removing every bit of the smoldering hay, lest the fire break out again.

Poor visibility caused by smoke hanging low over the barn further hampered firemen who effected the rescue of the cows and remained to man a crane used to remove the 25 tons of hay from the barn.

The first alarm came by phone and box about 12:21 a.m. and firemen had the fire under control by 2:54 but additional hours were spent in "making sure". The entire force of 38 men were on the scene.

Sudbury and Natick departments covered for Wayland.

Wayland Fund Drive Tops Its $10,000

WAYLAND -- Wayland has topped its $10,000 United Fund quota, with contributions that are approaching 110 percent of the quota, Chairman Charles E. Goodhue III announced this week.

This mark, according to Boston officials of the U.F. is the best in the region.

Chairman Goodhue cites stronger participation this year in the Cochituate section as the reason why the U.F. "was more successful in Wayland than it has ever been."

THAT DID IT . . . FOR WAYLAND -- Ken Houghton has just scored the game-winning touchdown . . . as if you couldn't guess from the reaction of pass-flinger Dwight Perodeau (33) and Bill Morris (84) who are greeting him like a long-lost (pardon us, long-WON) friend. Ken's Katch, as they referred to it afterwards was in the tradition of Wayland last-minute victories over Weston High. Morris scored the first touchdown for Wayland. (Photo by Peter Fink)

Maxson Leaves as Claypit Head To Take No.2 Post in Barrington R.I.

WAYLAND -- William E. Maxson, principal of Claypit School, has resigned, as of early 1962, to accept a position as assistant superintendent of schools in Barrington, R.I.

For the past five years Mr. Maxson has been principal at Claypit and he will move into a newly-created position for which Barrington authorities have been seeking an educator for the past two years, according to Rhode Island officials.

Mr. Maxson told The Crier he had expressed a desire "to move into the superintendency field" sometime ago, and had so informed School Supt. Edward J. Anderson.

His resignation was accepted by the School Board in the past week.

For the past five years Mr. Maxson has been developing team-teaching techniques here, a method

Catch Gives Wayland Win Over Weston, 12-8

WAYLAND -- Just like last year, a never-say-die Wayland High eleven came up with a last-minute Thanksgiving Day victory over Weston High before 4000 fans here, 12-8.

Some said it was the hex or the voodoo Coach Ralph Salvati's Warriers applied to the Wildcats out on the sloshy turf but the eighth straight Big Game win was sheer drive.

Ken Houghton's catch of Dwight Perodeau's pass just inside the end zone was the climax of a hard drive from Wayland's 14 yard line. It came with 2:46 remaining . . . just too late for Weston to snap back.

But Houghton's sensational TD was just the climax of a team effort, sparked by Mike Daly and Buddy LaFemina. Those two boys found the holes and dragged the team with them.

For George Harris' Wildcats it was a tough loss. Seeking their seventh straight win this season, they were outgaining the host team and outscoring it . . . until Perodeau's wobbly pass tipped the scales.

Weston jumped off to an 8-0 lead in the first period as the Wildcats' Old Reliable Buddy Fos-

Grant Did the Job, Everyone Claimed Credit

By SOUTHWORTH LANCASTER

(November 26 - December 2, 1861)

THE NEWS: Nov. 26th -- One enlisted man, E Co. 13th Mass., was slightly wounded in an exchange of shots with Confederates ambushed across the Potomac at Sir John's Run, Md.

Nov. 27th -- Answering a McClellan directive to plan an advance into East Tennessee, Brig. Gen. Buell at Louisville reported that this would require 2 flotilla columns on the Tennessee and Cumberland Rivers in conjunction with an overland move on Nashville.

Nov. 28th -- Brig. Gen. W. T. Sherman, sent by Halleck to report on conditions at Sedalia, Mo., wired that a Confederate advance was imminent and that he had ordered forward two divisions under Brig. Gen. John Pope. Halleck countermanded Sherman's order and recalled him to St. Louis.

Nov. 30th -- At month's end, Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston was Confederate commander in Tennessee and Kentucky, Gen. Jos. E. Johnston in Virginia, Gen. Robert E. Lee in So. Carolina, Georgia and Florida. Only the Johnstons were in contact with the enemy.

Dec. 1st -- Sherman was granted 20 days' leave of absence; reason: ill health.

BEHIND THE NEWS: East Tennessee was important for military and political reasons and Lincoln was pressing for action to support strong local Union sentiment. McClellan had misjudged problems of an advance, but finally accepted Buell's correct estimate, which required also assistance from Halleck's forces.

Unluckily, both Buell and Halleck then sat tight, each waiting for the other to be ready. So for a time nothing happened . . .

A successful move on East Tennessee demanded correct use of the roughly parallel Tennessee and Cumberland Rivers, employing land and navy forces. It was one of those obvious plans which seem to call for a great deal of discussion. Grant put it through in February '62 with little fuss, after which everybody from Halleck down claimed credit for the scheme, one being a woman named Anna Ella Carroll who tried to get Congress to pay her for the notion. . .

Halleck reversed Sherman's order on the basis of a more accurate estimate from Pope. Sherman was suffering from a nervous breakdown, caused by frustrations during his unhappy weeks at Louisville and press reports that he had lost his mind. His tense, explosive temperament laid him open to attacks from ill-wishers. Halleck was shrewd enough to perceive how matters stood and the 20 days' leave was his own idea. Sherman came back, completely restored, to resume his career...

During the week, the 20th Mass. received its first replacements to make good the Ball's Bluff losses. The Army would have been better off if all depleted regiments had been similarly refilled. Too often, replacements arrived in the form of new regiments, leaving the veteran outfits to wither away. This was good politics, for it gave Governors the chance to make flocks of new colonels, but the practice was little short of vicious. Only Wisconsin had the fixed policy of rebuilding worn regiments. . .

In December, Congress set up the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War. Composed largely of reactionary characters, it conducted ex-parte hearings, often refused accused officers the right to testify in their own defense and in general was more interested in finding scapegoats than in ascertaining facts impartially. To the end of the War, it was a disturbing and demoralizing influence.

Non-Conformists, Arise

Strike a blow for non-conformism. At last it has invaded the sacred halls of the Organization Man. Yes.

The scorned fellow yesterday who was tabbed the talented-but-insecure type who couldn't "get along" with the management team is now the hero of tomorrow with these concerns.

We have the Wall Street Journal as authority for this statement. It points out that a survey of some concerns shows that initiative and orginality, not always characteristic of the conformist Organization Man (Team Man), is having its day.

Hired as presidents and top personnel are men who couldn't "get along". Men with ideas. And drive. And a desire to create something new--- and successful.

As for the problems these men could be expected to germinate among top management-- you may as well expect problems. Also fights. Bruised feelings. "Inevitable" is their way of looking at these unpleasant manifestations. Part of getting things done...better.

Well, we can't help but think there's something to be said for non-conformism (even though we clouldn't manage a youngster's lemonade stand), especially when these men argue from experience that problems are an inevitable part of doing something better.

We think this applies to the schools--to any place where performance is measured, in fact.

We'd rather see our children run into a few more problems rather than operate in a problem-free vacuum. And we like to think that chipping away at the safety-in-numbers, safety-first-last-and-always Organization Man approach has set in.

Friction is the source of all energy.

Weston Women Make Plea

WESTON -- On Veterans' Day, a group of Weston women, some of whom are wives or sisters of Veterans, presented the following statement to the Rev. Moore, pastor of the Weston Methodist Church, to be read at the Veterans' Day service that morning.

"On this day when we gather to commemorate the end of two world wars, we are deeply concerned about the morale of this country as it prepares itself for the possibility of nuclear war. The responsibility for peace cannot be left only with our government leaders and the Pentagon: it must be the concern of every citizen who cares for his family, his country and humanity.

"We ask the guidance of our clergy to help us turn our thoughts from negative acceptance of war to immediate positive action for peace."

Letters To The Editor

Sudbury to Swat-No-More Good News for Wayland

To the Editor:

Wayland citizens may be interested to know that at a hearing before the State Reclamation Board at the State House on November 14, 1961 the Town of Sudbury was accepted as a member of the East Middlesex Mosquito Control Project, comprising 14 cities and towns in this area. The Commissioners of the Project had voted in May 1961 to accept the Town of Sudbury.

The Town of Sudbury at a Special Town Meeting in August 1961 unanimously voted to make application to the State Reclamation Board for membership in the Project and to assume its share of the cost of operation.

This event is of interest to Wayland for two reasons.

First, it provides substantiation of the fact that area-wide eradication of mosquitoes is preferable to scattered local efforts, and should reassure tax-conscious Wayland citizens that Wayland's annual appropriation to support the Project produces results.

Secondly, it will result in fewer mosquitoes in Wayland because no longer will Wayland be a border town in Project - no longer will mosquitoes breed in uncontrolled areas outside the Project and be borne on the wind into Wayland, except from the southeast corner of Concord.

Sincerely,
George G. Bogren,
Wayland Commissioner, East Middlesex Mosquito Control Project

$627.32 for UNICEF . . .

To the Editor:

I want to thank everyone in Wayland who gave to the United Nations International Children's Fund on Halloween night. All those pennies, nickels and dimes collected by the children amounted to $627.32.

This will in turn feed many hungry fellow children in other lands.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. David A. Trageser

Some Facts On Weston's Big Shelter

To the Editor:

In connection with the discussion which took place at the Weston Town Meeting on Nov. 14, certain questions have been asked upon which further information may be desirable.

1. Contrary to the reports in certain Boston newspapers (not the Town Crier) the Weston emergency operation center is by no means the first emergency center in the Country to be built according to Federal specifications. Eighty-four emergency operation centers have already been constructed and 45 are in the process of construction.

2. The information mentioned at the Weston Town Meeting concerning the state of preparedness of Soviet Civil Defense comes largely from the report on Civil Defense made by a Congressional Subcommittee on Government Operations. The entire report can be obtained from Weston's representative in Congress, Harold D. Donohue.

3. The Weston emergency operation center will be approximately six ft. underground -- not 60 feet!

Very truly yours,
Florence E. Freeman
Director,
Weston Civil Defense

What Mr. K Promises on Inspection

To the Editor:

Mr. Editor, in answer to your question of Nov. 6, "Are Shelters Bad?" At least I think so. If the bombs do not drop near us we obviously do not need shelters; and if they do, we have very little chance of getting out of them alive. The boomerang of that bomb we dropped on Hiroshima can't be avoided - or expiated - by hiding underground.

You suggest that 'earnest persons' are not prevented from telling President Kennedy and Premier Khrushchev, through letters or petitions, that they do not believe The Bomb is the answer to anything. Could we not be still more positive, and say that Disarmament is the only chance left to us that can prevent war, accidental or otherwise, and that Mr. Khrushchev's offers of guaranteed inspection (see N.Y. Times, June 16, 1961) can still be made the basis of honest negotiation?

"Our proposals envisage strict control at each phase of the realization of the disarmament agreement. Access should be open at any time and to any place", were his words, "and we are prepared to provide this to the control agencies."

It is hard to see why an offer such as the above was so completely ignored; it is equally hard to see why this very week we have turned down Mr. Khrushchev's suggestion that weapon testing should be discontinued during the coming Geneva negotiations. In fact it is hard to see what we do want Mr. Khrushchev to propose. But is is not hard to see why the Soviet asserted in their statement on nuclear testing (N.Y. Times, Aug 31, 61) that "control has been used by the Western powers as a pretext to turn down any proposal on disarmament."

Let us who are 'earnest' write to President Kennedy, since that is the one thing we can each of us do, and say unequivocally that we believe he will never achieve peace by belittling a peace offer or by continuing the futility of nuclear competition.

Georgina P. Howland

Ed. note -- Yes, but --

The catch is that those who are wholesaling this quote of Mr. K's to you and other sincere persons fail to mention that Mr. K said inspection anywhere and everywhere but inside Russia.

Also, at that time he was also stating that he did not believe there were any impartial or neutral persons (this first to Walter Lippmann) and that he would accept no anti-Communist person as an inspector inside Russia.

As for banning tests during the upcoming talks: the Russians are willing to do so now since they've completed their tests (which in one month have polluted the atmosphere far more than all the Allied tests since 1945).

Thanks From Weston Police

To the Editor:

The Police of the Town of Weston wish to again thank the residents of Weston for the wonderful support they gave the Force on our recent Relief Fund Drive.

This year proved to be the most fruitful one for our fund which is used solely for sick and death benefit. We also wish to thank the management at Pinebrook Country Club for making the dance there such a success.

Everyone who attended this gala affair had a wonderful time; and we hope even more will join us next year. We would also like to remind the residents that the Fire Department of Weston will be holding their separate drive and we sincerely hope that they will be supported as generously as we were.

Mental Health Assn. Helps Head Off 'Troubles' Here

WAYLAND -- Wayland is now well into its second year of membership in the Greater Framingham Mental Health Assn., and it would seem that perhaps the time has come for an initial evaluation of the program.

The GFMHA, located at 276 Union av., Framingham, was established in the fall of 1953, after a social actions committee in Framingham, inquiring into the needs of the community, concluded that a clinic for mental health guidance and counseling was needed in this area, since none existed between Boston and Worcester.

From this beginning, it has grown to include 14 towns; Framingham, Natick, Millis, Westboro, Sherborn, Sudbury, Stow, Marlboro, Ashland, Southboro, Wayland, Holliston, Hopkinton, and Maynard.

Professional salaries, including the staff of psychiatrists, psychologists, and social workers, are paid chiefly by the Division of Mental Hygeine of the Massachusetts Department of Mental Health.

Rental of offices, secretarial staff, and all of the other expenses are provided by the GFMHA, with the assistance of the United Fund, clinic fees, and per capita fees of participating towns.

For a fee arrived at on the basis of 50 cents per school child -- $1300 for Wayland this year -- each community is entitled to full participation in the program of the Center, including the consultant program which is now in effect in our schools, seminars for teachers and professional leaders, and cooperation in community endeavors.

Citizens of participating towns are eligible for diagnostic and treatment services on an individual basis, either through referral from the school or a local physician, or by contacting the center directly.

The participating towns are represented by a board of directors which consists of members of each town, and is responsible for all major decisions and policies. Wayland representatives at present on this board are Mrs. Emily Blair, Dr. Herbert Lipton, and Mrs. John G. Freymann, any of whom would be interested in knowing the views or being of help to any citizen of Wayland who wants more information about the Center.

Much of the work of the Center is carried on through volunteer activities, and many rewarding opportunities are available to anyone interested in participating.

With the goal in mind of encouraging better understanding and use of the Center, several of the Wayland PTA's have scheduled over the next few months a talk by Dr. Norman Cohen, executive director of the GFMHA.

In these meetings, the first of which will be held at Happy Hollow on December 5, Dr. Cohen will address himself primarily to the school consultant program as it arfects all school children, not just the clinically disturbed few, since this program is aimed not only at healing the ill, but toward prevention of the development of emotional disturbance in the first instance, and toward building a community climate which contributes positively to the emotional maturity of the growing child.

Sgt. Cugini rushed to the home with the police book on fungus plants, made "a positive identification" (as police put it) and after three tests, all according to the book, reassured the parents.

Wayland Residents Quiz Authority on Workable Program

WAYLAND -- A few facts were brought out at the Selectmen's hearing last week on the Urban Renewal Authority's Workable Program, which they are being asked to approve so that it can be sent on to Washington in the first of two steps necessary to get Federal money for further planning.

(1) The Wayland Planning Board expects to have within the next 30 to 60 days, perhaps by the end of 1961, a "Master Plan" of its own.

(2) In order to submit the Workable Program, the W.R.A. has to say that a Master Plan does exist, or that one is scheduled for completion by a certain date. No Master Plan has to be submitted with the Workable Program, but if Federal funds are eventually obtained, the work done with them must conform to the town's Master plan.

Principal objections of the opponents to Urban Renewal center now around the fact that the "Harris Report", a sort of neighborhood analysis made three years ago, is inaccurate and misleading in many of its statements about the Dudley Pond area, residents claim.

They asked why a plan that is not correct should be cited in the Workable Program when the Planning Board's own master plan will be ready in a matter of months. Why not wait?

Lawrence Fordham, of the Renewal Authority, pointed out that the Workable Program does not ask for a plan to be submitted, but just whether or not a neighborhood analysis has ever been made.

The Harris report has been made, and the only truthful answer to the question is "Yes", he said.

Whether the report is correct in every detail is not the point, and to delay submitting the Workable Program now would just hold up progress all along the line.

Chairman Harvey Newton of the Authority argued that step No. 2 in getting planning money, which is submitting a Survey and Planning Application, will automatically correct any errors in the Harris report referred to in step No. 1 (the Workable Program).

The Harris report does not have to be submitted with the Workable Program, but a copy of it is already in Washington, since it was done with Federal money from another, but related, source.

"What we are doing," Mr. Newton said, "in submitting the Planning and Survey Application prepared for us by our consultant, Mr. Braun, is admitting errors, pointing them out to them in Washington. They have the document."

The Renewal Authority cannot get any money from the Federal government without taking both step No. 1 and step No. 2.

Selectman George Lewis (the only selectman present) said he would consider adding a sentence to an explanatory paragraph on Page 6 or the Workable Program which would put the Harris report's shortcomings on the record, and asked Mr. Blanchard to submit one.

Other aspects of the possible effect on the Dudley Pond area, now admittedly the prime target for whatever is to be done, were touched on, such as the minimum width for streets. (This appears to depend on what the Wayland Planning Board sets forth in its own Master Plan.)

Assurances were given that no hard and fast regulation would be imposed from the Federal level.

There was no question among many there that night that some of the terms springkled freely throughout the questionnaire (the Workable Program for is Q. and A. like an Income Tax return) would raise the hackles on a rhinocerous.

"Blighted areas", "slum", "relocation" and "dispossessed" are the kind of Federalese jargon no one wants to use in talking about his own home or neighborhood, they pointed out. A man thinks them not only inaccurate but downright insulting, and becomes hostile instead of objective in consideration of any proffered plans.

Wayland Hires Out-of-Town Help To Clean Up Fire

WAYLAND -- The fire was over long since but Fire Chief Francis J. Hartin's problems lingered on at 7 a.m. last Wednesday.

The problem: volunteers had to break off to go to their daytime jobs, leaving the chief with three regulars at the Watertown Dairy fire scene.

To mark the fire off the books and return the 4600 feet of hose, the chief had to hire three out-of-town firemen all day. Finally, at 5 p.m., the job was done-18 hours after the first alarm.

Give your dog a job. A trained watchdog can alert you in time of trouble in the night. That's when prowlers may enter or a fire may start.

The Town Crier

Special Weston High School Dedication Issue

DECEMBER 2, 1961

Town Crier Salutes --

NEW WESTON HIGH SCHOOL

Schools' Growth Steady, Pointed to Modern Education

By Dr. ANTHONY BRACKETT
(as told to the Town Crier)

In the years since 1956 when I came to Weston as Superintendent, it has been a fascinating and stimulating experience to be a part of the Weston Public Schools.

Although the expansion of the school system has presented many problems, I feel fortunate to have had this challenging opportunity to be the administrative leader of the Weston schools during the period of their most dynamic growth.

What New School Means To Town Like Weston

The students have known it for a number of weeks. The teachers, likewise, have seen it happening. And the parents, nursing depleted checkbooks, have been very aware of the situation.

The Town of Weston has a new High School. And many people are asking many questions.

What does it mean to a town, this town, when a new High School is completed? Will the increased tax rate be likely to actually provide the things parents want for their offspring? Is the new school adequate for time to come, or is it likely that the citizens have now started and become part of a "thing" which can eventually devour them?

Building Committee Planned Answers

More than four years ago, a group of dedicated (to Weston) citizens started the initial study of "Project High School". They searched for a suitable site. They studied population trends. They developed their own "Think of Everything" approach in their efforts to determine the Town's present and 10-year future needs. While no group of humans is infallible, the new Weston High School to be dedicated December 2 "stands inspection" very well and is a tribute to those who, over a four-year period gave of their time and efforts.

On Dec. 2, luncheon will be served to ticket holders in the new school's cafeteria between 12:30 and 1:30 p.m. The formal dedication will take place at 2 p.m. and the balance of the day until 5 p.m. will be Open House during which citizens may examine the school at will. Guides will be available for those people desiring conducted tours.

A series of educational panel discussions in the morning will discuss the basic disciplines in high school. Each panel will include a Weston teacher, another public school teacher, an Exeter Academy teacher and a college teacher. Subjects to be discussed include English, mathematics, fine and applied arts, science, social studies and languages.

Keynote speaker for the formal dedication will be Headmaster William Saltonstall of Exeter Academy whose theme will be that used for all activities in the day's program: "Seeking Excellence in Secondary Education".

Mr. Saltonstall will include in his talk "a correlation between the bricks and mortar which make up the school building, and the daily interest of educators and parents which forever will be the single thing which can give us the excellence we seek in secondary schools."

In charge of the Dec. 2 dedication are Building Committee Chairman Russell Cox, School Committeemen Leo Glynn, Supt. Anthoney Brackett and High School Principal Willard Smith.

Citizen-Teacher Research Used

In drawing up the educational requirements for the building, the special committee had the benefit of teacher and citizen research.

First came Supt. Brackett's study group in the Spring of 1958, open to all interested people. This was followed by a much larger concerted survey during the Fall of 1958. Over 80 volunteer parents and teachers worked on this second phase of the program. In December 1958, the initial High School Study was completed, following which the School Committee appointed a group to further study plan a "school plant" which would accommodate conventional classroom instruction, yet be flexible enough to be used in the Accordion Plan with either large or small groups of pupils. The Building Committee decided that the best way to attain such flexibility would be to employ methods used in industrial construction.

Thus, a series of non-bearing walls was used, and will permit relatively easy, low-cost changing of partitions as future needs of the school change.

575 students are enrolled at the new Weston High School this Fall, yet present classroom facilities are designed to accommodate 800 pupils. Ultimate expansion possibilities with the existing building will enable the High School staff to adequately provide secondary education for up to 1,200 students.

Thus, all looks well planned as some of the matters contained in the original report. The June 1959 Accordion Plan report resulted from the efforts of this group.

The School Committee then instructed the Building Committee to far as Weston's high school needs are concerned for the next few years. However, as one of the members of the original Building Committee said in a moment of jest: "There must be one mistake somewhere. It's just that nobody has found it as yet!"

Fire Protection for New School

WESTON -- Even though the entire building is of incombustible construction, there are hydrants located outside building so that from them any part of the building could be reached by fire hoses.

The areas whose contents are more susceptible to fire loss, such as the shops, janitors' storage, and receiving areas, are equipped with automatic sprinkler systems. In all other areas portable fire extinguishers are provided.

There is a fire alarm system throughout the building, and the opening of any one station will operate fire alarm horns in all areas of the buildings, and automatically transmit the signal to the fire department. In all storage rooms not protected by sprinklers there are heat-actuated devices, which, in case of fire, will also operate the fire alarm horns and signal the town fire department. Similarly, should the automatic sprinklers start to operate an alarm is transmitted to the local fire department.

To avoid lost time in case of fire, there is a zone indicator panel at one of the building entrances so that the town fire department personnel can tell from which area of the building the alarm has originated.

Disposal No Problem

WESTON -- The site with the extensive low wooded areas and the high ground water level created a special problem of sewage disposal. The final design, which has been approved by the local health department and by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, is of size to accommodate up to 1200 pupils.

The system consists of a 36,000 gallon septic tank (50 feet x 16 feet x 8 feet high), a dosing tank and two leaching fields, each 12,000 square feet in area, located on higher ground to be above ground water level, away from the building and its future extensions.

Particular care was exercised in the layout of the sewer system around the building to keep pipes and manholes above the ground water level to avoid leakage into the sewers which would cause flooding of the septic tanks and leaching fields.

The sewage is listed by pumps into the septic tank. The pumps are arranged to operate alternately, are connected for operation from the emergency generator in case of power failure, and are equipped with alarms in event of malfunction.

Flexible School, Made to Change

WESTON -- The new Weston High School is no crystal palace from an ivory tower.

It is a modern educational plant designed first to fit a specific educational program and secondly to be an efficient and economical structure easy to maintain. As a structure and as a building it incorporates flexibility and adaptability to meet the changes in the arrangement of spaces required by educational concepts which are expected to change.

The initial size of the school is designed for 800 students with certain core facilities designed to be adequate for a possible ultimate growth to 1100 or 1200.

The term "core facilities" refers to the areas of the building which complement the teaching areas, such as auditorium, cafeteria, physical education area, health, administration and guidance. When first occupied part of the Accordion Plan will be followed, and, as these educational ideas are tested and proven, more of them will be incorporated in the program with minimum physical changes to the building.

Academic Subdivisions

The academic area of the plant is sub-divided into three separate departmental units. The mathematics-science unit occupies the lower floor of a two-story section of the building with the languages department on the second floor. The third, social studies, including civics, history and business subjects, is contained in a separate one story unit. Each of the three departments has a resource center which is the size of a standard classroom.

The resource centers are subdivided by movable metal partitions which will provide flexible sub-division of the space as the program changes. These centers are primarily for student use or student and faculty use for individuals or small groups for study, instruction or conference, depending on curriculum needs.

In the mathematics-science unit, six completely equipped laboratories are included, as follows: two biology, two chemistry, one physics, one for physical science, and a science workshop. A vivarium, animal room, dark room and storage and preparation rooms are also provided. One lecture hall with sloped floor is included for large group instruction at demonstrations or lectures.

The four standard-size classrooms in this area are designed and built so that each may be subdivided in the future when required, into two smaller classrooms.

The language area contains 14 classrooms, one of which is an English work shop. Several will subdivide to make smaller classrooms or seminar rooms. Two rooms may convert to a large lecture room when the program changes. Storage rooms for books and supplies are also provided.

The social studies area contains six classrooms with flexibility of room spaces similar to that of the other departments. In all rooms which are to be later subdivided, additional uni-vents, lighting circuting and extra doors from corridors are already provided so that the ultimate conversion to fit the Accordion Plan will be simply carried out, with a minimum of expense and inconvenience.

Also in each of the three departmental units, corridors are double-loaded with classrooms and laboratories on both sides, and with metal lockers on both sides of the corridors. Three stair towers provide vertical circulation in the two-story section of the building.

650 Seat Auditorium

The administration-library unit is conveniently located to the departmental areas and to the main entrances.

Included in the administration area are offices for the principal and vice-principal, offices for director of guidance, guidance counseling, testing and guidance library. Adjacent is a remedial center and the rooms of the health suite. The library provides a spacious reading and reference area, two small conference rooms, combined office and work room for the librarian and audio - visual room.

For industrial arts there is a large shop for wood, metals, and hot metals, a mechanical drawing room, an audio-visual room, automechanics area and storage spaces.

One specialized room is designed for art and advanced homemaking. A single music room is provided for needs of band, orchestra and choral use. Adjacent are three practice rooms, storage spaces for musical instruments and uniforms, and a combined office and music library.

The 650-seat auditorium and the gymnasium used by the public as well as students have been located convenient to both classrooms and parking areas and are served by a single entrance and lobby.

The capacity of the auditorium is large enough for two classes in the ultimate school, yet small enough to be economical in size, and to provide desirable characteristics of presentation and acoustics.

The stage is equipped with standare stage curtains, projection screen and electrical control panel.

The gymnasium subdivides by a folding partition into two halves, one for boys and one for girls.

The main court is to be a standard 50'x84' with hardwood floor and with folding bleachers to seat 960.

Complete locker room and shower facilities are provided in well-lighted and well-ventilated rooms convenient to the gymnasium and to the practice fields.

Facilities are provided for a complete intramural physical education program as well as the varsity and junior varsity team sports.

Space for Expansion

The cafeteria has been designed in two sections, one of 300 capacity and the other of 150. The smaller of the two will also serve as an activity center for student groups.

Cubicles are provided for storage. These rooms, the kitchen, industrial arts area, central storage and receiving, and the central boiler room are all located in the same building unit. A combination faculty dining room and lounge is also included and located convenient to classrooms and to the kitchen area.

There are 42 teaching stations in the entire building. Care has been taken in the planning of the building to facilitate expansion in those areas which are likely to require it.

Designed for Service

WESTON -- In determining the proposed plan, the Special High School Plant Committee, the architects and the educational consultant considered many types of plan arrangements and all possible locations on the property.

The final plan selected best accommodates the requirements of convenience of staff and pupils, the public use of the building, the site and its contour, service access, and the problems of the safest traffic approaches to and from the building.

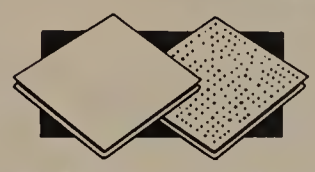
Brick masonry and large areas of glass are featured on the outside of the buulding. Roofs are twenty - year bonded type. The building by its nature is low and horizontal and is accented by the higher and larger masses of the auditorium, the gymnasium, and the two-story class room wing. A roof shelter marks the main entrance to the building and this leads directly from the principal parking areas into the main auditorium lobby and administration areas.

Bus loading and unloading areas are provided near the academic sections of the building.

Interior Design

Most floor surfaces throughout the building are vinyl asbestos tile, and ceilings will be covered with acoustical tile in required areas. Floors in main lobbies and cafeterias are terrazzo.

Floors in the kitchen are quarry tile.



Floors in locker room areas, showers and toilets are unglazed ceramic tile. Walls in public spaces, corridors, toilets, kitchen and lobbies will have dadoes of glazed tile units with accents of the exterior brick.

All surfaces above the dadoes will be painted concrete blocks.

The typical classroom will have chalk board across the front wall, a teacher's closet, and storage units. The rear wall has ample areas of tackboard for display. The window wall carries the heating and ventilating unit and additional storage units under the sills. The kitchen is equipped with modern stainless steel equipment. Exhibit cases and bulletin boards are placed throughout the public spaces.

The finish floor in the gymnasium will be maple and the stage will also have a wood floor. The auditorium will have a sloped floor with fixed auditorium type seating to accommodate 650 and an adequate space for an orchestra.

Weston Schools' Growth

This growth is obvious in plant, enrollment, and budget. It is less apparent in organization and operations. At the start of the century Weston had 11 teachers, 284 pupils, and spent $16,300.82 for operation of its schools. Building "A" had just been erected in 1898.

During the next 52 years, at somewhat regular intervals, Building "B", Building "C", and the Case House were added, until in 1950 the "old High School" (present Junior High School) was built. Rapid expansion then began.

In the short time since 1956 the Country School, the Woodland School, and the "new High School" have been constructed.

Only six years ago, 67 classrooms were available compared with the 118 Weston now has.

Although the erection of new buildings is perhaps the most spectacular change, growth in budget, enrollment, and faculty has been equally rapid in the past ten years as the following table shows.

	1951	1961	Percent Increase
Acreage	35 acres	159 acres	354%
No. of Classrooms	46	104	126%
Pupil Enrollment Oct. 1	988	2158	118%
H. S. Faculty	14	38-5/6	179%
J. H. S. Faculty	10	24-1/2	150%
Elementary Faculty	27	61-2/3	130%
All Faculty	51	125	145%
No. of Custodians	6	13 fulltime 6 parttime	167%
No. of Secretarial	3	11	267%
Size of budget (salaries)	$218,605	$932,527	327%
Size of budget (non-salary)	$84,090	$280,867	234%

It is obvious that there have been tremendous increases in enrollment, the number of teachers employed, the size of the plant, and the size of the budget.

Budgeting System Improved

Weston Schools have been dedicated to providing the best possible education for each individual child, while at the same time keeping expenditures at a reasonable level with the assurance that the town has received an adequate return for all money spent.

Accompanying the increasing size of the budget each year, improvements have been made in the construction of the budget document.

In 1960 we pioneered a radically new idea with Price-Waterhouse & Company, the well known accounting firm, and set up a new system of budget preparation and bookkeeping in connection with the budget for the 1961 year. This new budgetary procedure is designed to bring into prominence large expenditures so that matters of basic policy may be considered. It is also expected that actual cost analysis of teaching operations may result. Such cost analyses are not regularly possible under systems of accounting generally used by public school systems.

Organization Changed

Although the 126% increase in plant, 145% increase in teachers, and 118% increase in pupils of the past 10 years are easily measured, the changes of the past 10 years, which perhaps have the greatest impact on the education of the pupils, are not so easily measured.

The extent of changes in organization, the involvement of the community in the work of the schools, and adoption of new teaching methods are less readily seen.

The growth of the Weston School system made desirable a division of administrative units, so that in the fall of 1958 a Junior High School was instituted.

The school organization changed from six years of elementary school and six years of high school to six years of elementary school, two years of Junior High School and four years of Senior High School.

When the Woodland School was built in 1959, adding a third elementary school building, particular attention was paid to elementary organization in order to keep the work of the three elementary schools of equally high quality.

One administrative head was chosen with the title of Senior Principal. A supervising principal was provided at the largest of the units--The Country School--and in two other buildings--the new Woodland School and the Elementary School--teachers were designated as principals and relieved of some classroom responsibilities.

Citizens Involved

Weston citizens have always taken great interest in their schools, but since 1957 a systematic effort has been made to involve citizens in school planning. The Parent - Teacher Asso. has changed from a general organization of parents of children at all grade levels to an organization with divisions for the elementary schools, the Junior High School and the Senior High School.

Under the joint sponsorship of the PTA and the School Committee, a standing committee known as the Weston Committee on Education was formed in 1958.

This Committee has appointed "task forces" from time to time to work on matters of teacher salary, teacher housing, and the need for particular curriculum change.

Committees of citizens and parents worked out educational specifications in planning the new High School with the help of an educational consultant. As a result of the work of teachers and parents working as part of the Weston Committee on Education, a flexible approach to meeting school problems was suggested which was later developed into what is called 'The Accordion Plan'.

A special committee to advise on public relations known as the Liaison Committee was also formed in 1958. As well as sampling public opinion, this committee publishes a periodical known as "Our Schools", designed to keep Weston citizens informed of school problems and development.

As well as seeking to bring about good relations with an informed public every effort has been made to strengthen an understanding of school problems on the part of other officials of the town government.

Regular meetings with the Finance Committee have been held and informal conferences arranged with the Selectmen. The School Committee arranged to have individual members assigned to provide contact with official Town committees.

Goals Stated

In reaching the long-term goal of maintaining a school system of the highest quality, certain immediate goals have been kept in mind.

1. Curriculum has been revised constantly to meet changing needs and an effort has been made to provide a smooth flowing continuum from the intermediate grades through high school.
2. High standards have been insisted upon and serious scholarship established.
3. Teachers have been carefully selected after every reasonable effort has been made for their proper recruitment.
4. Self-discipline has been encouraged in students. The development of proper study habits has been stressed. Every effort has been made to assist pupils to resolve problems arising from emotional strain.

Curriculum

Designation of Curriculum Directors was started in 1957 and has expanded so that Weston now has a curriculum director in each of the so-called "solid subjects" of the curriculum: English, science, mathematics, foreign language, and social studies. Other directors were also made responsible for the proper development of physical education and guidance.

Written courses of study have been prepared in all of the "solid subjects" areas. These statements are modified annually as the need for change is determined by the curriculum director and the teachers in the particular subject field.

High standards of scholarship are insisted upon at all grade levels, with particular attention being paid to scholastic standards in the high school.

Teachers insist upon work which shows real effort on the part of the pupils and form their demands and expectations of pupils in terms of the individual's ability. Students with superior mental endowments are expected to employ them to the fullest, and teachers attempt to provide tasks which will be challenging.

Upgrading of faculty has been accomplished by maintenance of a high salary schedule, active recruitment, and careful investigation of applicants.

Weston's teachers' salaries have risen steadily to keep abreast of the cost of living. Comparisons are made annually with salaries paid in other communities of Greater Boston, and last year a beginning was made in comparing Weston salaries with communities in other parts of New England and throughout the nation. Only two systems in Greater Boston have higher starting salaries. With our "merit" adjustments none has a higher maximum. Our salary schedule measures well when compared with those of similar communities throughout the country.

Special Recruiting

Since 1958 the Superintendent and Senior Principal have made annual trips to several colleges in order to interview graduates interested in entering the teaching profession.

A close liaison is maintained with placement offices of teacher training institutions, as well as private teachers' agencies. Teacher applications are carefully processed and extensive references are obtained.

Applicants are visited in the classroom by specialists in the applicants' field. Each applicant has three separate interviews.

As a result within the past five years, teachers have been engaged who not only are the best in teaching abilities but who have a reputation for excellence extending beyond the borders of Weston and who hold positions of leadership in their professional organizations.

Weston has been a leader among school systems in relating teacher competence to salary. The present so-called merit regulations for teachers' salaries in Weston were adopted in 1955. A revision of the regulations was made in 1960 with a new study now under way.

Observance of proper study habits, the strengthening of self-discipline and control of emotions is part of the basic policy of the Weston school administration.

In the elementary grades, pupils are systematically guided in making their own rules for working together, with teachers consciously trying to exert as little authoritarian control as possible.

Responsibility for self-government is begun in the elementary grades and increased in the junior high school. In the senior high a well organized student council began in 1960 to share much of the responsibility for the routine operation of the school.

Teachers are expected to stress constantly the importance of proper study habits and teach HOW to study. Explanation of how to attack learning problems is begun in intermediate grades and carried on with increasing sophistication throughout the junior and senior high school. Particular effort is given to taking tests and meeting test situations.

In recent years throughout the United States there has been a great increase in the number of persons emotionally disturbed.

As a result of research the complicated nature of emotional disturbance has been revealed. A specific program has been developed to improve mental health.

In the Weston Schools a Human Relations Advisory Service was established in 1956 in connection with the Human Relations Service of Wellesley. The work of the guidance department has been expanded to include counseling in instances when poor adjustment to school reflects emotional problems.

The Human Relations Service has provided increased staff to assist the guidance department in meeting this need. The Weston team approach of teachers, guidance counselors, and psychiatrists is unique in public school education.

Evaluation

There is no generally accepted standard for evaluating a school system.

It is significant, however, that when various standards which have been suggested from time to time are applied to Weston, the schools measure as outstanding.

Perhaps the statements which have attracted the greatest attention in recent years as to what are proper standards for schools are the so-called Conant Reports. Dr. James Bryant Conant, formerly president of Harvard University, made a study of secondary schools in 1958 and in 1959. With his associates he issued a report on High Schools in 1959 and on Junior High Schools in 1960.

It is particularly significant that in every academic category--of both reports--Weston High School and Weston Junior High School equaled or exceeded the standards which Dr. Conant set forth.

In the check list used by Dr. Conant in making his evaluations, Weston High School is lacking only in a vocational program for boys and the opportunity for supervised work experience.

A summer school, also recommended by Dr. Conant, is not provided directly by the town because excellent facilities are available through the Harvard - Newton program.

Of Dr. Conant's recommendations for improving the public high schools, Weston is already operating as suggested except in two instances where a deliberate policy decision has been made to the contrary.

Of Dr. Conant's 14 points for improving the junior high school, Weston is already complying with all the recommendations.

Foreign Language Early

It is also particularly significant that in the general stepping-up of school systems throughout the nation, as a result of sputnik and the increasing tempo of the cold war, Weston schools were already carrying on activities which were LATER suggested.

The National Defense Education Act of 1959 provided for an expansion in the guidance department and set certain standards for facilities and pupil - teacher ratio. The schools were given a period of years to meet these standards.

WESTON SCHOOLS EXCEEDED THE STANDARDS AT THE TIME THEY WERE SET FORTH.

In all school systems, increased emphasis upon foreign languages has been demanded, with funds provided for expansion by the Federal government. Although Weston has taken full advantage of Federal funds, the use has been for continuance rather than expansion because Weston had a program in elementary, junior high and senior high in 1959. Weston offers French from grade four to grade 12, Russian for three years, and preserves the classical tradition by offering four years of Latin.

Weston was one of the first schools to adopt the new physical science Study Committee work in the teaching of physics developed at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Weston High School is a pilot school for the School Mathematics Study Group operations in mathematics sponsored by Yale University.

At the national level, the newest demand on schools is for an improvement in the health and physical education offerings. Although standards of evaluation have not yet been set up, indications are that Weston Schools will equal or surpass such standards.

Physical education is carried on under professional instructors at all grade levels. The Kraus-Weber physical fitness test has been administered throughout the United States with a national average of 57.9% failure. In grades three through twelve, 88.47% of Weston pupils passed.

As would be expected, more graduates of Weston High have gone to college as enrollment has increased. The percentage of those attending four year degree granting institutions has also grown from 33-1/3% in 1951 to 63% in 1961. A recent study made by the guidance department showed 38% of our college bound students admitted to the college of their first choice and 23% more going to a comparable institution.

As a measure of the reputation of Weston Schools in professional circles, the awarding of a grant of $100,000 from the Fund for the Advancement of Education for the development of the Accordion Plan is significant.

At the time the grant was announced, the Foundation had made grants of this size to only two other school systems in the United States.

In awarding this money, authorities of the Foundation stated that they were impressed by the excellence of the Weston school system and its efforts to meet educational problems. Factors influencing the officials in selecting Weston over other communities were the degree of citizen involvement in the schools, the excellence of the staff, and the educational leadership and stability of the school organization.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

A Railway Excursion Some Local Color

Somebody asked me the other day if the Wayland railroad station, which they talk of tearing down, is historic. Just because a structure is old, and has gathered a certain aura of sentiment, does not cause it necessarily to merit that word; even though, like this station, it may once have had the distinction of gracing, in color, a half page in the Christian Science Monitor.

The color, by the way, is "color added," as they say of oranges. When the station had become disreputably dingy, some years ago, and appeals to the railroad were fruitless, the late Dorothy Stone and the Garden Club bought and applied the color: which caused a local artist to paint it on canvas. That is how our rejuvenated station came to decorate a holiday issue of a world newspaper. The artist was the landscape painter Francis Wenderoth Saunders.

But "Time makes ancient good uncouth," in the excellent English of our Cambridge neighbor Lowell, which modern business has Latinized into "Obsolescent." Whether in English or Latin, that is what has been happening to our Massachusetts Central Railroad, which once proudly connected Weston and Wayland not only to Boston, but to the Connecticut Valley, New York City and beyond.

To build a railway as far as Sudbury, a company was incorporated in 1868. After various vicissitudes, its rails opened to Hudson in 1881. Eventually its path was cleared uphill and through the woods to Northampton. More than once I have left home at something after eight in the morning, to roll breathless into Amherst or Northampton, eighty miles away, a little before noon. But in earlier days passenger trains for New York and Washington roared through our stations here.

In the early 1900s hundreds of cans of milk came down daily from Barre and beyond on the mid-forenoon train. Then the day's schedule was filled until midnight with trains in both directions, and the telegraph instruments at the stations clicked constantly. Now the terminal for our one daily train is back at its 1881 point, Hudson; and a single freight whistles for the crossings four or five times a week. Our stations are closed or demolished, and no telegrapher has sent dots and dashes for two decades, or more.

Our local area entered the railway scene rather late, except for Weston's eastern section; but the first railways in the country were close by.

The very earliest, a tramway, carried brick down a hill in Boston on wooden rails.

The earliest to use iron rails was over in Quincy. The ties were pine, and oak timbers shod with iron served as rails. Gridley Bryant built it in 1826, three miles long, from the granite quarries to the Neponset River. What did this three-mile line, mostly horse powered, carry?

You may still see its freight in the distance, any time you visit the North Station or the Museum of Science. For the railway bore to tidewater the great granite blocks which rise high in Bunker Hill Monument in Charlestown. From the Neponset shore, they were ferried across the harbor. The only steam used was in a stationary engine to pull the cars up a grade too steep for horses.

If rails are becoming obsolescent now, it is a kind of retribution, for the railways once spelt death to commercial turnpikes and canals. When the Boston & Lowell R.R. began operations in 1883, it cut receipts of the Middlesex Canal (Boston to Manchester, N.H.) by a third within three years, and soon killed it altogether.

The Fitchburg R.R., which passes through Kendal Green, opened up new markets for up country farmers, and eventually, through the Hoosac Tunnel, then the longest cut in the world, it headed for Albany and the West.

Engines were given imaginative names. One on the Boston & Lowell was "The Stampede." This line was the first ever to see a train travel a mile a minute, 28 miles to Lowell in 28 minutes, in 1848, at the risk of the lives of its crew and passengers.

The title of another B & L locomotive, "The Ambler," would have been appropriate for the Northampton-bound Central Mass. trains through here.

For many decades all engines were wood burners, and stopped occasionally beside wood yards to take on more cord wood. Mrs. Russell and I rode behind a wood-burner in Florida in 1917.

To return to our Mass. Central, it had plenty of trouble getting started. Contractors failed; the road went bankrupt and was foreclosed by the bond holders. Up to 1878 alone, construction costs had run to $2,783,000. Finally, about 1883, it was leased to the Boston and Maine for 99 years.

In 1870, the Town of Weston barely avoided subscribing to 500 shares by a vote of 85 nays to 72 ayes.

Wayland did vote to buy 150 shares in the Hopkinton R.R. which was to extend through Cochituate to Wayland Center.

Col. Daniel Lamson, the Weston historian of a half century ago, prophesied in his book that as a result of the railway, Weston "can by generous accomodation be made the center of a large population."

The town in recent years, however, has shown no intense desire for this type of distinction. Alfred Hudson, the Wayland historian, in 1891 proudly records that through trains are running on the Mass. Central between Boston and Washington and Boston and Harrisburg. How are the mighty fallen!

All this is history, but the query as to whether our stations are historic still puzzles. Maybe my readers will answer.

Power Cut Off RR Station Ready For Ax in Wayland

WAYLAND -- Power has been cut off in the Wayland Railroad Station in Wayland Center, preparatory to razing this old structure, according to the Wayland Condemnation Committee.

Building Inspector Homer MacDonald shut off the power Monday because of the dangerous condition of the old wiring. The next move will be the razing of this structure.

The property is owned by the Boston & Maine Railroad which is in process of selling this location to the town for parking lot use. The railroad wants assurance only that there will be a shelter for commuters as long as the B & M service is continued here.

Weston Maps Shelter Plans

WESTON -- Miss Florence Freeman, Civil Defense director, is contacting architects for plans and specifications for the authorized town C.D. underground shelter headquarters.

Miss Freeman expects that the shelter will be built on town property adjacent to the flagpole to the east of the Town Hall.

Yet to be determined is how much ledge will be encountered and its direction of slope. A total of $15,000 was appropriated at the special town meeting recently for this shelter.

Film for Fair Housing Group

WESTON -- At the last meeting of the Weston Fair Housing Committee, held at St. Peter's Church, a film was shown called "All the Way Home." It dramatized how one community dealt with the problem of discrimination. This well done film (available from the committee) provoked a lively discussion among those attending.

It was announced there were now 143 members of the organization. And that there would be open meetings held once a month.

SCOUT-O-RAMA at Wayland High School over last weekend drew hundreds of parents, Scouters and friends to see what Scouts of Region One (Weston and Wayland included) are doing. Here, Troop One Scouts of Wayland, sponsored by the Wayland Junior Town House demonstrate lifesaving technique for visitors. Troop One also presented one of its famous Indian dances for the Algonquin Council. Under the leadership of Frederick H. Lehmann, the 67 boys of Troop One put on authentic ceremonial dances. A "Westward-Ho" covered wagon train was demonstrated by Cub Packs of Wayland and Cochituate. In picture above: Randolph Parker and Ranny Franceschi help "revive" Peter R. Magoun, a "victim".

Sunflower Seed Popular With Many 'Winter' Birds

By CHARLOTTE E. SMITH

Sunflower seed is preferred by many birds -- chickadees, nuthatches, gold finches, purple finches, and evening grosbeaks -- and all these will come readily to a first or second floor window feeder.

The wild bird mixtures contain some sunflower seed, but this disappears first -- and quickly -- so buy sunflower seed separately and use it in the window feeders only.

The smaller seeds in the mixtures (usually several kinds of millet, wheat, oats, finely-cracked corn, and canary seed) are preferred by ground-feeding birds such as juncos and the various sparrows (tree, fox, white-throated, and song). They like the small golden millet best, then the larger yellow proso. Red proso millet seems to be less favored. Kaffir corn or milo (the large round pinkish-orange seed found in some mixtures) is usually left untouched by these small birds. Scatter the mixture on the ground near your house in a place than can be regularly cleared of snow.

Blue jays, house sparrows, and starlings are regular visitors to most feeders. As they are fond of corn, buy intermediate chick-food which is less expensive because it consists mainly of rather finely-cracked corn, some millet, oats and wheat. Spread a good supply of this on the ground in a separate place some distance from your house, but still within sight. It will help keep these birds away from the more expensive seed. Some people object to having them around, but when we put out food we have to make up our minds to be unprejudiced. Blue jays are lively and interesting to watch, they provide bright color (even if it is accompanied by a lot of noise!), and are usually first to spot danger and alert the other birds. House sparrows and starlings are not native American birds, but man deliberately brought them here from Europe, they have made a place for themselves, and now must be accepted. Our ring-necked pheasants are also not native to North America, having been introduced from Asia, but who would want to keep them away? Intermediate chick-food is also eaten by mourning doves, pheasants, redwinged and rusty blackbirds, grackles, cowbirds, and even juncos and other small ground-feeding birds.

Squirrels, both gray and red, can become numerous at times, but remember that we are the ones who are setting up a situation which is not selective, and it is bound to attract other hungry animals. Many people have tried to devise various "squirrel-proof" feeders (some very ingenious indeed) and have had success in outwitting them. More often, the squirrels outwit us, providing a great deal of amusement in the process and forcing us to admire their ingenuity. Coarsely-cracked corn is one of their favorite foods, and if put in a special place at a distance, it will help keep them away from the feeders. Perhaps the ultimate solution is to develop a philosophic attitude toward them. It's a lot easier on the blood pressure, at any rate! After all, most of us enjoy watching chipmunks, and certainly would welcome a visit from a flying squirrel.

Burned Paper, 'Break' Probed at Wayland H.S.

WAYLAND -- Wayland police and firemen were called to the high school last Monday morning to investigate a "break" and burned papers in the music room.

Police Chief Ernest Damon, called first by high school authorities, said there were no signs of breaking the door lock. Discovery of burned papers in the room led to Chief Damon's calling in Fire Chief Francis J. Hartin. The investigation is continuing. This is the second time in recent weeks that some sort of break and burned papers have been reported at the school.

LET'S HAVE THAT AGAIN, PLEASE. . . And just to oblige, Buddy Foster (17) of Weston did repeat this touchdown run, seconds later to put Weston ahead, 6-0 in the first period against Wayland High last Thursday. This touchdown jaunt, with Wayland's Bob Kent in his wake, was nullified by a penalty. (Photo by Peter Fink) ter passed and generaled them 82 yards down the field in nine plays.

Football –

It was Buddy's 47-yard pass play that brought them to the 7. Russ Hills was hit from behind on this play by Daly and the pass interference gave them first and seven.

Foster slipped around left end to score two plays later but it was called back because of offside. Just to make sure, Foster did it again on a right end keeper, and Bill Rizzo added the points after.

Wayland never got rolling until the third period when Bill Morris intercepted a Foster pass on his 23 and ran it back to midfield where Bob D'Antonio, the intended receiver, dragged him down with a clear field ahead.

A few plays later Morris sneaked down the right side to take a 33-yard Perodeau pass on the 5 and stumble, unmolested across. Two tries by LaFemina to score the game-tying points failed.

When it came to the fourth period, Wayland played a we'll-keep-this - ball - we - know - what - to - do - with - it game. And keep it they did for 24 plays on their 86-yard drive.

Eating up 50 yards of this advance were LaFemina and Daly, two standouts all morning. Buddy carried 29 yards (6 tries) and Mike 21 (four tries).

Then came the big play of the day . . . with fourth down and 17 yards to go.

VICTORY YELL -- That's what Lee Paton (class of 61) is giving to victors Bill Morris (74) and Dave Duane (62) after Morris' and Ker Houghton's TD's had spelt victory in the Thanksgiving Day classic with Weston, 12-8. Duane is on Ricky Greene's shoulders. At right, Bob Kent (83). Everybody was WAY up in the air at this point. (Photo by Peter Fink)

A pass. Perodeau faded back and waited. Everyone in the Wayland stands and down on the field was screaming, "Throw". But Warriors' quarterback waited. At the last possible moment, he threw and Bob Kent's circus catch made it a first and 10 on the 12.

Seconds later came Houghton's impossible catch and the deed was done.

NOTES--Bill Rizzo outrushed everyone: 72 yards in 14 carries . . . Teammate Bob Aker played outstanding game at tackle . . . Perodeau completed all five passes attempted, two for TD's. . . Foster netted 110 yards in the air to Perodeau's 67 but they still pay off in the final scores . . . Wayland fans were wondering what might have happened without those early season injuries . . . Weston had one consolation: it still leads, 14-13, in the series which began in 1934. . . Few substitutions: winners used 16 players, the losers 15. . . Last year, Wayland won, 20-14, in the last 10 seconds. Doing better.

Overflow Crowd Gets Latest Word On Accordion Plan

WESTON -- An overflow crowd filled the Country School auditorium recently to witness a demonstration of the Accordion Plan in operation on the elementary level.

A team of teachers on each grade level, kindergarten through sixth grade, explained the use of teaching machines, programmed materials, redeployment and other techniques adopted under the auspices of the Accordion Plan. Mr. Thomas McFarlin, Senior Principal, explained four goals of the program during the opening session. These are: More individual progress through joint development of programmed materials. More efficient use of pupil time through more active participation of each pupil. More pupils exposed to individual teacher strengths through team teaching. More individual attention by saving instruction time and developing project materials.

Mr. Henry DeRusha, Principal of the Country School, directed townspeople to demonstration areas where they could try out the various techniques.

The concluding session featured a panel discussion with questions from the audience. The panel was comprised of Mrs. Alice Edgerton, director of machine research; Mrs. Julia Tapley, team leader; Mrs. Katherine Devereaux, team leader; Mrs. Marjorie Burrill, elementary supervisor; Mr. Walter Gleason, Accordion Plan director and Mr. DeRusha and Mr. McFarlin.

Pre-Thanksgiving Shoplifters Sought

WAYLAND -- Police are seeking two men who stole several women's jackets at the Robin Hood Barn in the Village Shopper the day before Thanksgiving.

Weston a Puritan Town A Welcome History

By HARRY PATTERSON

"Weston: A Puritan Town", by Emma F. Ripley, with 17 Illustrations by Margaret Kronenberg. The Riverside Press, Boston. 270 Pages, $5.

This is the first history of Weston to be published in nearly 50 years - and it's well worth the waiting for.

It tells the history of the town from its beginnings, in the 1630's. down to the present day, and does it with a wealth of detail. with interesting anecdotes and with humor.

Miss Ripley has based her narrative on a great deal of meticulous research - and through it all runs the warmth of her love for Weston and its background.

She tells why Weston, in its early days a part of Watertown, wanted its own pastor and meetinghouse, and how it finally got them.

She recounts the history of the Weston Independent Light Infantry, which was so independent that during a review at Watertown it declined, for what it considered good reason an order to line up with the Fourth Regiment, but instead formed 20 paces to the right, and "maintained this position while in line, throughout the day".

She tells how the same regiment, during the Spring Review in Weston, "halted in front of the residence of the Rev. Joseph Field, where, forming in line, they paid him the annual May training compliment of three rousing volleys of musketry."

You will read here how the Rev. Samuel Kendal, D.D., mounted his horse and chased the tramp who had stolen Mrs. Kendal's silver spoons. and how later he returned with them without a single harsh word or blow having been exchanged between him and the thief.

You will learn the history of the famous Josiah Smith Tavern, now the Jones House. You'll learn that it was through the report of a spy who had nearly been tarred and feathered by Weston patriots that General Gage, in April 1775, decided to go after the military supplies at Concord rather than risk the hazards of a march along the Post rd. to take those stored in Worcester.

You'll learn how a newcomer to Weston, in 1834, bought the picturesque old Powder House and, to the great indignation of many residents, "demolished it for the bricks."

And you'll learn about Weston industries that have come and gone.

All this and much more you'll learn - about old families, old customs, old houses - and you'll have a wonderful time doing it. "Weston: A Puritan Town" will be a welcome addition to the library of anyone who lives in Weston or who is interested in the Town's origin and background.

Mrs. Kronenberg's illustrations are a delightful complement to the narrative.

Mrs. Peakes Heads Opera Drive Here

WESTON -- Mrs. Gilbert Peakes, 315 Post rd. has been appointed a membership chairman for a gigantic subscription membership campaign for the Opera Group of Boston, whose goal it is to enroll more than 13,000 opera lovers in the Greater Boston area for the winter opera season.

Known as "Operation Opera," the intensive subscription campaign will officially be launched on Dec. 1, preceeded by a huge pre-campaign supper rally on Nov. 30.

The Opera Group, led by its founder and present artistic director, Miss Sarah Caldwell, has undertaken an ambitious program. Massenet's "Manon," Jan. 10 and 12; Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," Mar. 14 and 16; and Verdi's "Rigoletto," Mar. 28 and 30.

Couples Club Carols Dec.16

WESTON -- St. Peter's Carol Sing, sponsored by the Couple's Club, will be held Friday, Dec. 15.

Invitations will soon be received to neighborhood get-togethers held from 6:45 to 7:30 p.m., the second Friday in December, followed by a covered dish buffet at St. Peter's parish hall.

After dinner the entire group will assemble at the Rectory, 25 Rolling lane, for after-dinner coffee, and a joyous singing of familiar carols.

Any questions regarding the evening may be answered by contacting Mrs. William J. Bickford, social chairman for the Couple's Club, at CE 5-2247. Parishioners are urged to reply to their neighborhood hostesses at their earliest opportunity.

He's a miracle man if he can take the limp out of a lame excuse.

Wayland High PTA Opens Scholarship Fund Drive

WAYLAND -- Tomorrow (Friday) and Saturday is the time to "do something" to help some youngster through college.

Wayland High youngsters will be making a house-to-house canvass for the Wayland High PTA for scholarship funds.

Last year Wayland resients and business people contributed $2300, and this money became part of the more than $5000 contributed by Wayland civic organizations to deserving scholarship winners at Wayland High commencement last June.

In 1942, when the high school had 27 graduates, the PTA scholarship fund amounted to $75.

Now, according to Mr. and Mrs. Donald A. Donahue, co-chairmen of the drive, the combined scholarship goal in town should approach $1,000 to meet the needs of its (last year's) graduates.

Mr. and Mrs. Donahue point out that Wayland now has more 11,000 residents, with 4800 under 18 and 2800 of these in Wayland schools.

In less than 10 years, they point out, it has been estimated that the graduating class should top 300.

"If every person were to contribute $1, we'd meet the need of our students," they said.

Student in Piano Recital

WAYLAND -- Anita Castiglione recently gave a solo piano recital at the home of her teacher Allen Barker.

The program included works by Bach, Haydn, Schumann, Debussy, Bartok, Prokofieff and Copland.

Anita is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Castiglione of Carpenter rd., Wayland. She is in the seventh grade at Wayland Junior High School.

Wayland Meeting Dec. 20 to Vote On $100,000 Fund Designed To Speed State Aid for Loker

WAYLAND -- A special Town Meeting will be held in Wayland, Wednesday, Dec. 20, in the Field House at the Senior High School at 7:45 p.m.

Six articles have been drawn up for consideration, the majority dealing with the handling of town finances and inserted into the warrant by the Finance Committee.

The primary reason for the calling of a special meeting at this time is the necessity for action before the close of 1961 on Article 1.

This article states, "To see if the Town will vote to authorize the transfer from available funds in "Excess & Deficiency Account" to a 'Stabilization Fund', the sum of $100,000; or take any action relative thereto."

Other articles deal with funds concerning Police, Health, Highway, Park and Recreation. One article concerns an inspector of gas piping and gas appliances, and another article deals with equal handling of applications for exceptions to the By-Laws.

Article 1, the transferring of $100,000 from one account to another was inserted by the Finance Committee so that the original suggested financing of the construction of the Loker School addition (to be asked for by the School Building committee at the March meeting) may be handled to the greatest advantage to the town, the committee stated.

Two additions to Wayland's school plant are involved. The first to the Claypit Hill Grade School is now under construction with funds voted at the Special Town Meeting last June. The second addition appropriation will come up for approval at the annual meeting in March 1962 for a similar addition to the Loker Grade School. This work would start in the fall of 1962.

In order that his second addition may also be financed without resorting to long-term borrowing and in order to take full advantage of the reimbursement available from the state, it will be necessary for the town, prior to Dec. 31, 1961, to set up a Stabilization Fund and to put it into use by the State in 1962, the committee said.

The addition being requested by the School Building Committee in line with their previous reports to the town, will cost somewhere between $250 - $285,000. The Town's normal reimbursement would be about 50 percent.

The law provides for payment of three quarters, but not in excess of the State's share in the year in which the work is begun, providing the Town has made its appro-

All articles for the Wayland annual town meeting next March must be in the Town Hall Friday, Dec. 15, at 4:30 p.m.

Hearing Opposes Workable Program; Now Issue Falls in Selectmen's Laps

WAYLAND -- The buck has been passed to the Selectmen: the Renewal Authority's Workable Program is in their hands for their approval, and on a shelf in their office is a little figurine with branching antlers, sent by an anonymous donor to George Lewis, the Selectmen who conducted the recently-concluded hearings on the Program.

Perhaps the sender was afraid that sending a dollar bill would be regarded as attempted bribery-at any rate, his sporting variation on a theme by Harry Truman, who used to point to a framed "buck" on his desk in the White House and say, "The buck stops here", is hardly needed.

Too many people are waiting to see what they will do.

At the conclusion of the second of two lengthy sessions of a hearing on the Workable Program last week Selectman George Lewis asked for a show of hands on two points: those in favor of the document as it stands, and those who preferred version amended to specify that some of the statistics in the neighborhood analysis (or Harris report) either had never been or were no longer true.

Fifty-three opposed and none were in favor of the present version; 53 opposed and 2 favored an amended version.

The hearing, which was held to help the Selectmen find out how people felt about the Workable Program, also helped to bring into focus the two factions in the pro-and-con-urban renewal controversy, and their respective positions.

Opponents of urban renewal in Wayland, many of them residents of the Dudley Pond area which probably will be the first to be affected, are against urban renewal per se and in toto.

They have tried and failed to have the Renewal Authority dissolved and put out of business.

They object strongly to the use

Claypit Addition Begins; May Run To Only $250,000

WAYLAND -- Ground has been broken at Claypit Hill School for the 10-room addition authorized by special town meeting vote last June.

Chick's Construction Co., Inc., of Clinton, low bidder, was awarded the contract.

School authorities now estimate the total cost, with equipment, will run about $250,000.

It is hoped the building will be completed before June.

The town meeting authorized the spending of up to $285,000 for all costs.

Chick's set a price of $184,871 for the base contract, with $6259 on extras.

The next lowest bid came from the W. W. Granger Construction

DEDICATION IS THE WORD as Weston opened its new high school with "proper dedication to education" and to the school. Here, one of the well-attended panel discussions, looks into the latest thinking on social studies. Panelists (from left): Glenn N. Lempereur, moderator; William D. Metz, professor of history at the University of Rhode Island; Donald B. Cole, chairman of the department of history at The Phillips Exeter Academy; Henry Hicks, head of the social studies department of Needham High School, and Miss Cora M. 1000 Go Back to School for Dedication

WESTON -- This town's sparkling $2.4 million "accordion plan" high school was dedicated last Saturday to the good teacher, the good student and the sum total of their togetherness -- good education.

Between 900 and 1000 parents, students, educators and laymen from all over New England attended the all-day ceremony which highlighted achievement of excellence in education.

In his keynote address a the formal ceremony, Principal William G. Saltonstall of The Phillips Exeter Academy said:

Regis Girls Help Air Force 'Shape Up' New Code System

HANSCOM FIELD -- Seeing is almost always more than meets the eye.

You could recognize a familiar shape -- a relative, or a car, or a star-shape -- while only "half-trying" by mentally providing a great percentage of the missing clues.

But an Air Force Electronic Systems Division experiment, using Regis College girls as subjects, is trying to see what they can see . . . without benefit of past association. As a result of this study of shape recognition, the Air Force may someday be able to develop a coding system for shape distinctiveness under limited viewing condition.

For example, through shape-coding evaluation of unfamiliar obstacles or targets on the moon, shot to earthlings by television, you or your Air Force neighbor-next-door may guide a moon-machine electronically from earth.

"Form Constancy Perception" is the name given to this study by research psychologist Dr. John Coules, of ESD's Operational Applications Laboratory. Right now the study is trying to find out how much change in shape a person will tolerate before calling it a different shape.

The experiment is basically simple.

Flashed on a screen is a so-called standard form -- of irregular shape, having 3 to 15 sides. Onto another screen, beside the first screen, is displayed another form, either the same or very similar to the "control" form.

The girls look at the two forms and check "S" or "D" on a score sheet, depending on whether the variable form is the same or different from the standard form.

Simple?

Well, there are complications.

The background of the variable form is clouded with visual "noise" or interference. The effect of trying to distinguish a shape against this "snowy" background is much like trying to peer into murky fog or twilight.

Under varying conditions of difficulty known to the operator but not to the subjects, the shapes are flashed on the two screens -- over and over, back and forth, in sequence-arrangements which prevent the possibility of the girls' memorizing the "answers."

"From the girls' viewpoint, the experiment is long and tedious because the shape differences are often minute," Dr. Coules said. "The experiments require a high attention level and thousands of responses are needed to provide reliable data."

Someday the Form Constancy Perception experiment, carried a few steps further, may result in a series of electronically-transmitted words having a complete coded form meaning in the shape of things to come.

Fathers Get Glimpse Of Page School Program

WELLESLEY -- On Thursday morning, Oct. 12, the Anne L. Page Memorial School of Wellesley College held its annual Observation Day for Fathers. Thirty-eight fathers and mothers came to use the observation booths to watch their children's groups in action.

Following the observation period there was a discussion group meeting led by the director, Louice C. Keller -- and, at the end of the morning, parents visited with children in their groups.

Mrs. Emerson B. Hovey, Mrs. Norman M. Prentice and Mrs. Thomas A. Weil were hostesses at a coffee hour preceding the discussion group meeting. At this time the parents had the opportunity to talk informally and to share their observations of the four groups.

Several questions were asked about the program and curriculum for the kindergarten group. During this part of the discussion Mrs. Keller described the continuity of the nursery school and kindergarten programs. Both nursery school and kindergarten age children learn best through constructive play experiences with a wide variety of materials. She also highlighted some of the differences - mentioning that some areas of the kindergarten program are more structured by the teacher. She often helps children to develop a more specific focus in a particular activity; to identify a task and to follow it through to completion. The teacher uses many of the children's own ideas, incorporates them into the program, and helps them in developing a healthy and mature attitude toward learning.

Participating in this program were a number of Wayland and Weston parents of children who are attending Page School this year.

Pessimists are just average People who have no money to speak of just have to do their own talking.

Weston's Junior Biologists To Raise Trout at School

WESTON -- The Mass. Dept. of Fish and Game, through Chief Aquatic Biologist William Tomkins, has completed arrangements with the Weston High School Biology Club, to raise 200 brook trout. This novel student project will be directed by Irving Keene, high school biology teacher.

Weston's newly-opened high school has a unique open air biology laboratory and a series of excellent nature trails on the school grounds, plus a small, spring-fed brook, which is to be the home of the trout during the experiment.

Members of Mr. Keene's Biology Club have widened and deepened a section of the brook, lined the bottom with gravel, and erected concrete spillways, with barrier-screens, to form a pen to hold the fish during their growth period.

The students, led by Irene MacLeod, class of '64, who originated the project, will feed the trout according to the latest scientific methods, using a dry, or pellet type food, similar to that used in the State's Fish Hatcheries, which should assure rapid, healthy growth.

Mr. Tomkins recently examined the project site, checking the water and it's source and he believes that a successful trout rearing program can be conducted in the pool, barring unforseen difficulties.

He has arranged to have the partially-grown trout fry brought to Weston from a State Hatchery, and next summer, before the closing of school, the trout, which should be in the adult 7-9 inch stage, will be removed from the pool, and stocked in Weston brooks for the enjoyment of the local trout fishermen.

A new batch of fingerling trout will be made available to the school again in the fall, to continue the program.

Weston High is the first school in this State to undertake such a project, and the Dept. of Fish and Game has cooperated wholeheartedly, providing both technical advice - and the trout.

Members of the Biology Club who have worked on the project include: Seth Heywood, Leo Flint, Bob Lazzari, Bob D'Antonio, Bob Knowles, Fred White, Ed Rizzo, Paul Clay, Irene MacLeod, Joanne Gardella and Jo Wetmore.

PETER F. CONNOLLY of 57 Glezen lane, is one of 41 leading agents of Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. selected to participate in a conference at the company's home office in Hartford. All conferees are qualifiers for Connecticut General's Vice President's Club, an organization composed of outstanding field representatives.

Your Plan for Schools

(From WBZ-TV, radio)

A look at the public elementary and secondary schools in Massachusetts is far from encouraging.

Despite the expenditure of some $650 million for new schools since World War II, the state has far too many outdated school buildings. Even if structurally safe, these are inadequate for many phases of a modern educational program.

And school buildings are but one part of the problem. More than anything else, education depends on the standards of teaching. Without first-rate teachers and administrative personnel, our schools cannot hope to keep pace with the many improvements in education today.

Inevitably the teacher problem is linked to the matter of salaries. And here Massachusetts has been falling behind.

Twenty-five years ago the state was second in average teacher pay. Now it has slipped to 20th. And as a result there's been a drain of teaching talent both from the state and the profession.

We'd like to suggest two ways that individual citizens can help improve the situation.

The first problem to be solved is that of school and general community financing.

The expense of education in Massachusetts falls mainly upon cities and towns. And these municipalities are staggering under the heaviest local property tax loads in the country. Because of this they have often failed to spend the amount of money necessary to keep their school systems abreast of the times. The decline in our state's standing for teacher pay is a symptom of this failure.

One of the reasons the Legislature has done nothing to correct the overall financial situation is that the general public has remained apathetic.

If you want better schools, then, you will have to give your support to legislation for tax reforms and greater state aid to education.

There's a human side to the school problem, too. Under Massachusetts law the state sets certain basic educational standards and provides assistance in carrying these programs out. But the local school budget, the teacher salary schedule, even the all-important curriculum are decided by the city or town itself, through the school committee.

Next spring towns will be picking new board members.

Another way for you to improve schools, then, is to take an interest in these elections. Make an effort to find out who are the best candidates and support them. There's time for you and your neighbors to recruit topnotch people for these posts.

There's nothing wrong with our public schools that can't be cured with time, energy and money.

And this job is not one for educators, school committees and lawmakers alone.

You have a role to play, too.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

The Deer Lashed To The Car Roof

That fellow with the deer and the Christmas tree lashed to his car top, who just turned the corner, won't he be cock of the walk for the next week!

Yet probably he wishes he might have lived 300 years ago. Then he wouldn't have had to drive all day to northern Maine, with a thousand dollars worth of guns and equipment, hire a guide, and put in a tough week in the cold and snow, to bring home 200 lbs. of venison. Instead; just think, he muses, once you could go right out into the woods behind the house, take one shot, and have venison for a month.

But could he have, really? Captain Christopher Lovett was an English visitor to Maine in 1624. His luck with hunting seems not to have made him over-enthusiastic, for he told the folks at home: "I will not doe...as some have done...speak more than is true: I will not tell you that corne doth growe naturally, nor will the Deare come when they are called, or stand still and looke on a man, untill he shute him." Captain John Smith, who at least knew how to fire a gun (many of the settlers didn't), was also a pessimist on the subject: "Though there be... fowles in the ayre and Beasts in the woods, their bounds are so large, they so wilde, and we so weake and ignorant, we cannot much trouble them."

The truth is that long before any whites appeared, game had been pretty well thinned, anywhere near the numerous Indian Villages in eastern Massachusetts. The Indian hunters had to walk their legs off to get to good deer hunting.

But deer, a luxury for us, were an absolute necessity for them. Not just because, like you and me, they liked meat. Nothing could take the place of deerskin for clothing, for moccasins and leggings, snowshoes, thongs to bind handles to stone tools: and certain deer and moose bones made very useful implements. And of course, even with plenty of fish and maize, in this area, meat was always welcome.

Where these other foods were not so plentiful, however, one authority has calculated that an Indian village of a hundred people would need to have every hunter in the place bring in a deer at least once a week to feed them.

You modern hunters, tell me, wouldn't that be quite a chore, even for a seasoned woodsman with a high powered rifle? But with bows and arrows it would be tough. A hunter had to stalk a deer pretty close, no easy job on crackling autumn leaves, to kill him with an arrow.

To get their deer each tribe had its hunting grounds, generally many miles from the villages, prepared for this special purpose. Every spring they burnt over the area, to furnish sweet fresh grass and low herbage on which deer might feed. The fires also cleared much underbrush, so that a hunter could spot an animal at a distance. Places in Central Massachusetts like Monson, Ware, and New Braintree were bare; green pastures for deer, when the whites first saw them.

About this time of year the whole tribe would set off to the deer country on a community hunt, and drive the fat deer in toward the spots where experienced bowsmen would have the best chance to bring them down.

The whites, when they came, didn't find hunting easy. Most of them had never done anything of the kind in England, at any rate not lawfully, and their fowling pieces weren't much to boast about, anyway. Moreover, as one of the Canadian Jesuit fathers commented, hunting was all right if you never happened to be hungry except when game was around, but "if you are fifty or sixty leagues away" (and no auto either) "what are you going to do?" Why, you'll do what the settlers in Weston and Sudbury did in the fall; kill a hog or two, eat a little meat fresh, and then live the rest of the winter on salt pork and corn meal mush, varied with corned beef and apple sauce.

For, to quote plain spoken Lt. Governor Dudley of Massachusetts Bay "as for fowl and venison, they are dainties here as well as in England." Nowadays, fowl has become the cheapest meat there is. But as for venison, our friend turning the corner with the deer ornamenting the roof of his station wagon is just as well off, as to getting his deer, as if he had lived three centuries ago; and he certainly got it home a lot easier.

Not So Fast With Cash ...

To the Editor:

We voters can hardly be expected to act judiciously while under the influence of the heady tonic of patriotic fervor. And yet, at the Weston Town Meeting of November 14, 1961, an article was acted on immediately after a most persuasive appeal to the townspeople's loyalty.

Naturally, the article was adopted by an overwhelming majority in the emotion-laden atmosphere of the moment. Yes, you may be surprised to find I am not referring to the action on the civil defense items, but rather to Article 2 of the warrant which concerned an appropriation for legal expenses.

The speaker who stampeded the action claimed, in substance, that we all have a deep moral obligation to support actions of our duly constituted town officials-regardless of whether we agree with them. This is only a hairbreadth removed from demanding support whether the action of the officials is right or wrong.

Clearly, this is not democracy-it is an oligarchy which is being advocated - a Government whose officials can do no wrong. Should this attitude prevail, it is pointless to hold town meetings or any of the other trappings of democracy - the only proper function we voters have is to ratify, to rubber stamp, the actions laid down for us by our infallible officials! Isn't this what we deride as a gross sham when it occurs in the Soviet Union?

An item is on the agenda of a town meeting only because the proper course of action is in doubt. Let's not give away our obligation to decide individually on the proper course of action by blind allegiance to jingoist appeals.

Tapes Speed Up Shorthand For Weston High Classes

WESTON -- Stenography classes at Weston High School embarked on a new learning program this year with the introduction of tapes and other programmed materials in a unique attempt to completely individualize instruction.

Basic to this program is a library of taped dictation designed to build dictation speed and develop transcription skill. Such a library is gradually being built up through the acquisition of commercially prepared tapes and teacher-made tapes. Pupils are free to work at any speed level and to progress as fast and as far as they are able.

In the advanced class pupil work has been wholly individualized. Tape recorders are available in the classroom, and pupils work singly or in groups to build dictation speed and transcription skill. In the beginning shorthand class, some pupils are involved in group activities while others are working individually on the tapes.

Letters To The Editor

Of Rockets

To the Editor:

A reader might conclude from an article in last week's (Nov.22) Crier that members of the high school science faculty had sought permission to explode rockets. May I call the attention of your readers to the following exerpts from a printed policy statement of the science team.

"DO NOT ENCOURAGE STUDENT EXPERIMENTATION WITH EXPLOSIVES. If questioned about details of their preparation the proper response is to point out the danger of student experimentation in this area. UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES ARE CHEMICALS TO BE ISSUED FOR THIS PURPOSE. Avoid demonstrations involving dangerous effects which the students may be stimulated to duplicate."

The safety of students in our laboratories is of paramount concern to the teachers. As a regular part of our instructional program safe procedures and safety measures in case of accident are stressed.

"Good common sense, proper laboratory procedures, a proper caution without unduly alarming students--these are the ingredients of a good safety program."

To the best of our knowledge there have been no violations of this policy in recent years. We teachers are proud of this record and want to keep it that way.

Yours sincerely,
George P. Carpenter
Subject Leader, Science

Ed. note--We agree with you that no high school teacher is requesting "permission to explode rockets."

Chief Hartin was quoted as saying he has "refused requests for rocket experiments in conjunction with science fairs" which we take to mean the setting up of realistic rockets and the potential hazard this might entail. No science fair project has ever entailed the "explosion" of rockets and if it did the Boston Globe and M.I.T., we're sure, would turn it down for the same reasons as you have... hazards to youth.

Super Bomb: One Man's Solution

To the Editor:

My house rests on a four inch reinforced concrete slab, not a wholly reliable fall-out shelter but a shelter of sorts, and I am thinking of hauling a cot down into my cellar, with a transistor radio and some jugs of water and jugs of other juices, and some sardines and apples, so that when the megatons go boom I can hibernate and have a lazy, lubberly good time until it's safe to come up for air and look around to see if there's at least one second-hand mortician still in business to take care of my dwindling needs.

Or perhaps I'll take into my shelter a textbook on undertaking to pass away the time. When the fall-out has all fallen out and the earth lies serene and unmolested under the blue heavens, and there's nothing to buy and nowhere to go, a do-it-yourself job may be waiting for me.

How to Make Yule Tree Safe - Don't Spray - Follow These Ideas:

WESTON -- The Weston Fire Department wishes to inform all citizens of the town that the practice of spraying Christmas trees and wreaths has been discontinued.

Tests conducted by the department have shown that spraying has very little value in retarding the spread of fire and that a false sense of security has been created where trees have been treated in the past.

If the following recommendations are carried out the department believes that the fire hazard created by Christmas trees will be greatly reduced:

- Set up the tree only a day or two before Christmas and allow it to remain in the house no longer than one week.
- Cut the butt end at a 45 degree angle and keep the butt immersed in water at all times.
- Use only U.L. labeled lights on the tree and NEVER use candles.
- Remove all wrappings and other inflammables from the immediate area of the tree.

(Advt.)

Where were you 20 years ago today?

Curious, isn't it? People who can't remember what they had for dinner last night can tell you in detail where they were and what they were doing on December 7th, 1941.

For millions of us Pearl Harbor was not only a national tragedy, but a personal one as well. And so we remember the day clearly, forever.

This is no time to hit you with a commercial, but permit us this one comment. Financial ruin from the loss of a home or business or from a long-term disability are personal Pearl Harbors that people never forget.

As insurance professionals, we are unashamedly proud of these many "days of infamy" our skills and experience have helped prevent.

Indians Liked Palefaces From the North Best

By SOUTHWORTH LANCASTER

(December 3 - December 9, 1861)

THE NEWS: Dec. 3 - 4 -- There was desultory skirmishing at Vienna and Anadale, Va., Salem and Dunksburg (Sedalia), Mo. . . Dec. 5 -- The long-promised English Enfield rifles were on the way from Massachusetts, for regiments still equipped with smooth-bores . . .

Dec. 6 -- Charles Francis Adams, Minister to England, told the State Dept. that a collision with England was inevitable if the administration sustained the siezure of Messrs Mason and Slidell, forcibly taken from the British mail Steamer Trent. News had not reached London until Nov. 27.

Dec. 9 -- A body of Indians, loosely incorporated in the Union Army, had a tussle with Confederate guerillas at Bushy Creek, Ark. They were led by Opothleholo, a Creek chief.

BEHIND THE NEWS: Approaching Winter was cutting down military activity. New England soldiers already were complaining about deep, sticky Virginia mud . . .

The Enfields went principally to the 15th and 21st Inf. They were described as good weapons "but of poor quality, hastily and carelessly made. Until we discovered how well they could shoot, we almost wished for our old crooked - barreled smoothbores again". The Harper's Ferry rifles were called excellent and some Massachusetts regiments had them.

Perhaps half of these were rifled muskets (converted smoothbores) but there was little difference in the shooting qualities.

Loss of the Harper's Ferry arsenal was a heavy blow to Union arms after the first few months, when the War Department sought to make the Springfield the standard weapon, partly to simplify the ammunition problem, but full standardization was never achieved.

Private contractors were already turning out Springfields, for the capacity of the Springfield Armory was limited, despite efforts to expand the plant, though the situation improved as the War went on. Yet in 1862 Pope's ordnance officer had to supply eleven different kinds of ammunition.

Kansas and Missouri were Indian country and both North and South tried to enlist Indian support. The tribes had little interest in the issues of the War but on the whole tended to favor the North, since the U. S. Government administered Indian Affairs.

Indians fought on both sides, usually organized in separate units and conducted themselves well, although their numbers were relatively small.

Stand Watie, a Cherokee chief became a Confederate colonel and, later, a brigadier. Col. Ely S. Parker, a fullblooded Seneca and a man of considerable education, became Grant's staff secretary; he drafted the surrender agreement at Appomattox...

Capt. Philip H. Sheridan, 13th U.S.Inf., was serving as colonel of 2nd Michigan Cavalry Volunteers. According to one story, he never before had mounted a horse.

Just recently one of the surgeons at Emerson took part in such a procedure, and the following quote is from a letter received from the Boston Eye Bank:

". . . As a result of your efforts, a corneal transplant has been performed. It should not be long before another grateful patient can see again."

Swiss Youth Used to 12 Courses – Keeps on Go With 4 in Weston

WESTON -- Meinrad Ryffel, American Field Service exchange student at the Cambridge School in Weston, is living with the Arnold Peterson family at 20 Colchester rd. here.

Meinrad is 17 and a member of the senior class at Cambridge. His home is at Muri, Switzerland, a small village outside of Berne. His father is deputy director of the Board of Trade, Industry and Labor in the Swiss government.

Meinrad arrived by boat from Holland on Aug. 2.

His first few weeks in Weston were spent in helping the Petersons pack up and move into a new house.

School here is very different for Meinrad.

In Switzerland he would be taking 12 subjects this year. These would include singing, religion, French, Latin, German, math, biology, physics, chemistry, drawing and sports.

At Cambridge he manages to keep very busy with four subjects.

In Switzerland there are no lab periods and no study halls. There is also never any homework over the weekend. Meinrad enjoys school here. He says: "in Switzerland at school you are only a number, here I am somebody".

Meinrad's outside interests include skiing, and climbing as well as going to concerts and the theatre. He is very active in boy scout work. He leads a boy scout troop, taking them on winter ski trips as well as summer camp and climbing trips.

He is enjoying his stay in Weston. Many things are different from his life at home - food, habits of eating, hours of work but he has rapidly become accustomed to the American way of life.

He is anxious to become acquainted with the scouting program in Weston.

Wayland Man Honored for U.S. Space Role

WAYLAND -- Charles Melvin Peterson, head of communications of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory, has received a Smithsonian award "for exceptional services rendered in performance of duty.

Mr. Peterson lives at 36 Glover rd., Wayland.

In recognition of Mr. Peterson's duties, Smithsonian called him a "remarkable human being...at once leader, organizer, administrator and, in the best Navy sense of the word, operator---one who glides around, moves over or crunches through to get things done."

In the four years of the Space Age, the Smithsonian notes, Mr. Peterson's activities have brought the communications division from "zero" in 1957 at the time of the first Sputnik to an efficient organization today.

"From next to nothing--15 office phones, one crated TWX machine, little space and no operators-- he pieced together a communications system capable of handling all of our business traffic and our "social" or pressinquiry traffic (ed note--as the U.S. tried to match Russian strides in space), while easing many another problem not visibly connected with communications," Smithsonian officials pointed out.

Slim While You Swim Program Begins in Natick

NATICK -- Robert B. Gallipeau, president of the Aquatic Sports Center, 231 North Main st., Natick, announces the beginning of the winter program of swimming now scheduled for every Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday morning between 9:15 and 11:15 at the pool located near J. M. Fields and the entrance to the Wilson Junior High School on Route 27 near Route 9.

"Taking a note from President Kennedy's physical fitness program to restore and maintain healthful, wholesome exercise in our daily living," states Mr. Gallipeau, "is the greatest contribution Americans can make to their country while gaining immeasurable personal rewards. Our aim is to restore a new interest in swimming as a means to better health."

The "Slim While You Swim" periods are timed to permit the housewife to exercise during the morning hours after the children have gone to school and the husbands to work.

The Aquatic Sports Center maintains the only indoor pool in the area open to the public and offers excellent facilities to all who wish to continue swimming throughout the coming months. All those from the surrounding area who wish to enroll, just for the pleasure of swimming, may call Mr. Gallipeau at OL 5-0330 or HI 3-9312 for further information. If sufficient interest is shown, additional swim periods will be set aside for this excellent exercise.

Outside electric wires between buildings may stretch and sag allowing the wires to swing too close to the buildings or branches. Before ice and wind makes matters worse, have your electrical contractor make them entirely safe.

Workable Program

of the words "slum" and "blight" in describing their homes and neighborhood; and tey want the Town and Selectmen to know more about what is being planned for the Dudley Pond area or any other area before the Workable Program is approved (step #1) and subsequent application (step #2) made for federal planning aid money.

The Renewal Authority, established by vote of the Town on recommendation by the Planning Board at the March, 1960, Town Meeting, says that unless in its opinion urban renewal will help, not hurt, residents, there won't be any urban renewal; that it does not regard the Dudley Pond area as a slum or blighted neighborhood; that the time to stand up and be counted for or against urban renewal is not now but after they have made a detailed study exploring conditions and for which study they are now trying to apply for Federal planning funds (maybe $30,000) with no strings attached; and that Federal planning aid depends on whether or not, on the basis of a preliminary survey now being done by their consultant, 20 percent of the dwellings in the area are in need of improvement or repair ("If it's not 20 percent, we are not eligible, and that's it," says a member of the Authority); and finally that they anticipate very little, if any, relocation of residents when and if a program of renewal is undertaken.

Other documents frequently referred to during the hearing are the Harris report, begun in 1956 and submitted to the Planning Board in 1959, paid for jointly by the town, the State Department or Commerce and Federal Government, and regarded now as being out dated and inaccurate; the Neighborhood Analysis, now nearing completion and which the Renewal Authority is having prepared by its consultant, Morton Braun and paying for out of its original and only appropriation of $2000; and the Master Plan, also nearly ready, which the Town's Planning Board has been "finalizing" for some months now.

The Workable Program, which is not really a program at all but rather a statement of the town's condition in respect to planning, zoning, building codes, etc., awaits action by the Selectmen. No action was taken on it at their meeting on Monday - it was not on the agenda, and it is not known when it will be.

One unusual feature: everyone employed there must be a professional musician with experience and knowledge of the music field and must have the background necessary to advise customers. The same applies to occasional part-time help.

Plan to Upgrade Elections Outlined to Weston Democrats

WESTON -- Secretary of State Kevin H. White told a well-attended Nov. 17 meeting of Weston Democrats that he intends to request the Legislature to amend the current election laws in three vital areas so that the tone and quality of political campaigns may be upgraded.

These new Democratic proposals, the result of a long and careful study, are:

Establishment of a depository system for campaign finance funds, upgrading of the number of signatures needed to place a name on the ballot, and strengthening of the city, town and ward political committee system.

Mr. White told the gathering at the Lower Town Hall that he believes that enactment of these changes in Massachusetts election laws would play a significant roll in increasing the confidence of the public in politics.

Under the depository system, candidates for public office would be required to place all contributions to their campaign in one designated bank, and to make all disbursements for his campaign from this account.

He would also be required to make periodic reports on how much he had spent and how.

Mr. White stated that this method should eliminate the current flaunting of the laws that put unreal ceilings on how much can be spent in a political campaign.

Admitting that this is only a start in the direction of attempting to reduce the exhorbitant costs of campaigns today, Mr. White added that it may become necessary in the future to give tax concessions to those contributing to campaigns and to use government subsidies.

However, he believes that the depository system will give publicity to the candidate who spends too much and too foolishly, with the result that the public will demand more economical campaigns by defeating the free-wheeling candidates.

Prof. Robert Wood of MIT who also spoke to the Democratic session termed Mr. White's proposals as practical and restrained, and forecast that if they are accepted they will change Massachusetts politics.

He added that the state would be "shifting the ground rules" so that in an election the parties could carry out some of their campaign promises.

Upgrading the number of signatures needed to place a name on the ballot should eliminate the practice of large numbers of persons who know they have no chance of election putting their names up as a means of splitting the vote, Mr. White said.

At present, voters are often confronted with so many names in a primary, many of them the same as a well-known and favored candidate, that great confusion results.

Under the proposal to strengthen the role of local political committees, these groups would be allowed to endorse a candidate for election and have such an endorsement appear on the ballot after the candidates name. At present local committees have little actual power and little contact with the state committees.

What New Weston High Means to Town, Students

(By CAROL OTT)

WESTON -- "Adults must realize that they cannot impart their skill and wisdom to the young; they can only arrange those conditions which make it possible for each young learner to find his own," writes The Education Digest.

These conditions are at once the goal and the realization of Weston's new High School.

Dedicated to excellence in education, the building fulfills the ideals of growth, stimulation, flexibility and enrichment inherent in Weston's philosophy of learning.

At the heart of Weston's approach to education, and summarized under the designation "Accordion Plan", is the theory that flexibility, both in the classroom and the physical plant itself, leads to greatest promotion of student strengths. With this in mind, Weston High School has been designed to serve the needs of the community today, with ample provision for the needs of tomorrow.

Teaching teams, learning by machine, various class sizes, creative programming, educational television, remedial and advanced syllabi and visual aids are some of the techniques utilized by today's educational team. Weston High School has been constructed around these methods and provides ample facilities for their utilization and expansion.

A functional space plan, characterized by study clusters and proximity of related areas, is but one way in which the new school has been planned for excellence in learning.

Walls that move, color schemes which provide for a stimulating yet soothing atmosphere, language laboratories and well-equipped library facilities are some of the features which implement and bolster Weston's high ideals for its teen-age youngsters.

At the end of their four-year program at the high school, Weston's youth will have learned to live with their peers, understand the workings of their community and be prepared for further academic traning or a useful career in the business world.

School programs will have introduced them to the world of culture; the curriculum will have taught them to think logically and to express their thoughts clearly. With these tools as their passport to the world outside, Weston's youngsters are prepared for a rich life characterized by contribution to society and individual happiness.

Norumbega Council Scouts Going to Michigan Parley

WESTON -- The Norumbega Council of the Boy Scouts of America may be represented by three Explorers and one adult advisor at the first National Explorer Delegate Conference at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, Mich. next Aug. 26 to 30.

This was announced today by Ralph B. Johnson, Scout Executive of the Council. He said that 3500 Explorers and Advisors are expected at the first conference of it kind planned by Explorers who are high-school age members of the Boy Scouts of America.

Each council may be represented by an Explorer from each district, plus one from the council itself and an advisor.

Last summer more than 15,000 Explorers participated in twelve Regional Explorer Delegate Conferences conducted at university campuses, military installations and state fairgrounds. Two aircraft carriers in San Diego, California harbor were used for one conference.

The Norumbega Council was represented at the Region 1 Explorer Conference held at Fort Devens by 10 Explorers and two advisors.

The national conference will have 70 or more elective small-group clinic sessions on popular carreer and interest subjects.

There will also be a wide range of exhibits dealing with science subjects, hobbies, space subjects, scholarships and careers.

Norumbega Council is a Red Feather Agency sharing in the United Fund.

Davidson Receives R.O.T.C. Award

WESTON -- Harold A. Davidson Jr., 60 Rolling lane, was named Outstanding Middler Engineer Cadet recently at Northeastern University's annual R.O.T.C. Fall Awards Ceremonies.

N.U. President Asa S. Knowles presented Davidson with a $50 R.O.T.C. scholarship for "leadership ability and academic achievement".

Davidson, a junior civil engineering major in the College of Engineering, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Davidson, and a dean's list honor student.

On his "co-op" job, Davidson is a draftsman for Metcalf and Eddy, Boston. Under Northeastern's co-operative plan of education, upperclass students alternate 10-and 16-week periods in the University with periods of equal length on regular paying jobs in business and industry.

Stephens Alumnae Meet

WELLESLEY -- The Stephens College Alumnae Club of Greater Boston held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Porter Lee, 85 Crest rd., Wellesley, Nov. 15.

In addition to the business meeting, slides from the Stephens College campus were shown, and there was an exhibition of paintings by Martha Allen of Cambridge. Mrs. Allen is the wife of architect Winston Allen,

Among those attending from Weston were Mrs. Robert H. McCarter, Mrs. John R. Morton, and Mrs. Richard Kett.

Dana Hall to Expand Preparatory Classes in '62

WELLESLEY -- J. Lawrence Kelly, chairman of the board of trustees of Dana Hall School, says that beginning next fall Dana Hall will extend its program to include the freshman high school year, now a part of Dana Junior School. At the same time the school will develop further its new Senior Plan, begun this year on a voluntary basis.

It will then become a four-year college preparatory school for girls, with provision for both boarding and day students, plus a junior division (grades 7 and 8) for day students only. The junior division will be under the direction of an assistant principal.

Previously Dana Hall included only grades 10 through 12. Now, with Tenacre Country Day School, a co-educational school covering kindergarten through sixth grade, a qualified student is afforded an uninterrupted continuity of educational opportunity and experience from kindergarten to college.

The announced move of Pine Manor Junior College to the Dane Estate in Chestnut Hill affords Dana Hall an opportunity for growth of plant and program.

Through the gifts of alumnae, parents, and friends a classroom building was completed three years ago. For the past two years and again this year the proceeds of the annual Alumnae Fund and Parents' Fund are designated for a new Senior Residence Hall.

Man Has Always Met Challenge Now -- 3-Foot-Thick Shelter is Means

To the Editor:

The time has come to write of the moral duty and of the sacred obligation of mankind. The duty and obligation incorporated in all civilized religions around the world. This is to protect and to prevent the death of other human beings. There can be no alternative in a world of ethical standards.

We are living in the shadow of inhumanity and tyranny. We know it and hate it, but it cannot be wished away.

There is so much confusion and ignorance around us. Ignorance breeds fear and fear, panic. Can "Life as we know it" prevail in this atmosphere? For those who fear what will happen to people who have to live underground, witness the Londoner who from his shelters saw the V-2 rockets blasting his home to dust, who spent days at a time in cramped bunkers listening to his world going up in flames. Did he become a lawless marauder? For those who fear what kind of a world they will emerge into, witness the Pilgrim. He went into a wilderness and turned it into a home.

Man has always risen to whatever challenge has confronted him.

He fought the saber-toothed tiger with a stone. Do we have less courage?

Man put on animal skins to protect himself from the cold. He built houses to protect his family from the rains and snows. He built stockades and forts to protect his kind from their enemies. Is Man less a man for his clothes, home, police department, early warning system?

Man with his flint ax was in peril in a world miles wide. Man with his rockets is in peril in a world thousands of miles wide.

Man has changed. He has brought about many of the changes himself. He will go on changing into a different size, shape and color, and become wiser and have greater understanding.

We in the West are strong because we believe in the importance of the humblest of men and will fight for people's rights and dignity against all odds. Are we going to allow ourselves to lose our dignity by default because with the advent of the threat of radio activity the odds seem against us? The war against war must be unceasing. The war against defeatism and fear can be no less.

If we lived in a river valley we would plant trees, build dikes and flow-ways to protect our children, our friends, our neighbors from flood waters. Would flood control bring on a flood? If you say yes; which of the things you know are reasoned out and which are ruled by emotions?

The preservation of human life cannot be construed as an act of aggression to totalitarian societies which are far better protected than we. The type of defense needed for this sensitive, vunerable animal, Man, is in direct ratio to the damage this unique creature can inflict.

Door locks are unfriendly, but they can hardly be considered an offensive weapon.

Can we think less of human life than we do of personal property?

To avoid the destruction of human life in our nuclear age we must build our "clothing" strong and thick and three feet underground. There is no right or wrong to this situation. There is just logic.

The odds are that man will solve his international problems before exposing his children to nuclear attack. The odds are heavily on the side of mutual agreement of all nations to ban nuclear weapons.

Still, there is really only one conclusion if we are to continue to be human.

If there is a chance in a million that the United States has an all-out nuclear attack, and if there is a chance in a billion that mankind can survive, it is our obligation and our duty to see that mankind does. Conscience in a moral society can settle on no less.

Judith Owen Woodbury
336 North Av., Weston

Ed. note --There is hope, too, in the development of the Anti-Missile Missile. It never pays to give up.

Man Wasn't Made To Live in Caves

To the Editor:

I don't think the whole story is being told about shelters. Shelters are no safety device. They encourage more armament, more war talk.

Let me show you what Robert Meyner, governor of New Jersey has to say -- "Bomb Shelters Will Not Save Us!":

. . . There is only one way to assure the survival of 180,000,000 Americans. We must have peace... And to achieve it, we must intensify the battle for control of nuclear weapons by an international agency. . .

Under certain circumstances, some lives might be saved by such shelters IF the attack were a weak one; IF there were adequate warning; IF necessary services and facilities remained in operation after the attack; IF the shelter were not buried and sealed beneath mountains of rubble . . . The probability is that damage would be swift, extensive, sustained. It is the cruelest deception to create the impression that shelters are an adequate defense.

. . . Let's assume that an enemy were to use weapons of 10 megatons . . . What happens?. . .

Over the area of impact, and for thousands of square miles around it, a deadly canopy of radioactive particles is formed, contaminating food and water, destroying the delicate biological balance that makes human life possible, and leaving a possible legacy of malformed children to future generations. But radiation, as deadly as it is, accounts for a mere 5 percent of the force released by a nuclear blast.

A second effect . . . is heat and light, which account for about one-third of the energy released. A moment after (the) bomb explodes, a blazing fireball expands to a diameter of three-and-a-half miles, scorching the target and surrounding area with temperatures approximately equal to those at the sun's surface.

If the same bomb were exploded 30 miles above the earth's surface an intense wave of heat could sear an area of about 5000 square miles, setting afire everything inflammable.

A side effect, experts say, would be a rash of "fire-storms" -- fierce simultaneous infernos. The sudden, rapid temperature rise causes hugh updrafts of air, creating a vacuum; air rushes in and in so doing the oxygen is burned out of the surrounding atmosphere. To cope with this problem successfully, every fallout shelter would have to have a long-term supply of manufactured oxygen. . .

(After fires had destroyed woodlands), winter snow and spring rain would set in motion a vast process of erosion . . . Man would have to depend solely upon his own devices to exist . . .

There is also the question of cost. Estimates of the price of a massive fallout and blast shelter program range from $5 billion to $40 billion. This kind of money could better serve the cause of Peace if it were invested positively in the future welfare of ourselves and our allies.

Assuming, we could afford an outlay of this size, what of our friends abroad, what of the people of other lands whose friendship we seek? . . . If these people look to us to set an example, we serve them poorly in selfishly recommending something beyond their reach . . .

There is only one solution: peace. . . But the making of a genuine peace is too important to be left to governments alone. It needs the active support of individual citizens. . .

The most convincing argument against the "shelter psychosis" arises in the area of the human spirit which, at its finest, has always resisted restraint and closure.

Shelters represent a niggardly estimate of mankind's destiny and capabilities -- at complete variance with the optimism that has characterized the American spirit.

Has this faith so shriveled, our vision so dimmed, that we plan our future in terms of a cringing subsistence underground? Does man who has made proud symbols of the lion and the eagle settle now for the mole and the worm?

I say no. When primitive man left his cave and began to live in the light, he was meant to travel onward and upward; not to circle back.

So speaks Gov. Meyner. So speak I.

Sincerely,
William Moyer

Cochituate School Reports 5th Break

WAYLAND -- Police are investigating another break in the Cochituate School.

This one occurred over the last weekend and was reported Monday. It is the fifth in recent weeks at the school where young vandals have previously broken in and stolen milk money.

Police are still investigating two breaks and other vandalism at the high school. There, those getting in had left burned paper, apparently to find their way about.

2 Wayland Girls Play On Green Mtn. Hockey Team

WAYLAND -- Natalie Richardson and June Kerr, freshmen at Green Mountain College in Poultney Vt., were selected as members of the Vermont Field Hockey team which competed with approximately 20 teams from the northeastern part of the United States at the annual North East Field Hockey Association Tournament at Smith College on Nov. 10, 11 and 12. Both are members of the Green Mt. College team and before graduating last June, played for Wayland High.

priation from a Stabilization Fund set up in a prior year.

By making this transfer now, to the Stabilization Fund before the end of 1961, the Town will be able to get a $100,000 refund in 1962 rather than to have it spread out over five years.

Therefor, to carry out the finances in the plan involved, the Finance Committee recommends the approval of this article.

Article 2 involves transferring of $11,340.97 for the operation and expenses of Police, Health, Highway, Park and Recreation departments.

Broken down, the amounts would be allocated as follows: police - for signs and traffic lines, $800; collection of garbage, $1565.34; garage repairs and maintenance, $300; snow removal $2000; Sherman Bridge repairs, $681.06; street lighting, $2000; life guard and matrons, $994.57; dam repair caused by washing out of Millbrook Pond Dam, $3000.

These funds are estimated by the Finance Committee as necessary for the operation of the departments for the balance of the year. Exact amounts will be available at the time of the meeting.

Article 3 has been inserted to see if the Town will vote to appropriate and transfer the appropriation balance in the Highway account to rebuild Old Connecticut Path. About $11,000 remains as a balance from work on Commonwealth rd. east. At the last annual town meeting, now knowing the amount that would be needed for the completion of Commonwealth rd., east, the town voted the full amount of its Chapter 90 construction money for that road. The job is now completed and this article calls for a transfer of the balance for Chapter 90 construction work on Old Connecticut Path, preliminary engineering for which has already been completed.

Article 4 considers transferring two sums of .42 and .44 cents to Excess and Deficiency Account from the Highway maintenance and construction account.

Article 5 calls for an amending of the By-Laws at the request of the Town Counsel to cover appointment of an inspector of gas piping and gas appliances. This would include enforcing "the rules and regulations adopted by the Board of Selectmen and established by General Law, Chapter 25, Section 12H inserted by Section 1 of Chapter 737 of the Acts of 1961 and amendments thereto." Town Counsel has pointed out that under this legislation the town should have had a By-Law on its books covering the matter of Inspector by August 1961. (Weston just recently appropriated funds for this new post at the special town meeting.)

Article 6 considers a change to equalize treatment of any appeals put before the Appeal Board. It is worded, "To see if the Town will vote to accept the provision of General Law, Chapter 40A, Section 20 and amendments thereto."

A number of years ago, according to an explanation of this article issued from the Town Offices this week, the Town accepted the provision of the above under Section 8, by which no proposed change in any existing zoning by-law which had been unfavorably acted upon by a town meeting could be considered again on its merits within two years after the first unfavorable action. The only circumstance to alter this would be if the Planning Board proposed such action in its final report.

On Dec. 20 the Town is asked to accord similar treatment to any appeals on which the Appeal Board has rendered a decision. Specifically, it would mean every application would be accorded the same treatment in connection with unfavorable action of the board - except by consent of all the members of the Planning Board.

Affirmative action on this article would thus place a decision by the town and a decision by the Appeal Board on common ground.

Parents, Educators Enjoy All-Day Dedication

much more important than an answering teacher.

"Too often, we have underestimated the ability of boys and girls to do things for themselves.

"Thus, a good teacher sees education as a matter of the teacher teaching less and the learner learning more."

This was the theme of the all-day event which found parents and educators alike marveling at the planning involved in the rambling new school for 560 students on a 65-acre tract off South av.

Dr. Anthony Brackett, superintendent of schools and author of the accordion plan, said the emphasis had been on planning -- first upon curriculum and then upon classrooms.

"The program was arrived at first, then the building was designed to facilitate the program," he told the gathering.

The school's present capacity can be stretched to 800 students by means of the movable partitions. Its potential, with expansion, is 1200.

This is the third high school to be dedicated here in less than 30 years and by all odds the most unusual.

Most enjoyable for parents and educators were the panel discussions on achieving excellence in mathematics, fine and applied arts, science, social studies, English and foreign languages.

Helpful in this regard was the prescence on all panels of someone at the college level, thereby giving parents an insight into what may be expected of their high-school age offspring in this period.

The contrast in thought brought in by educators from The Phillips Exeter Academy and from outside high schools also proved helpful.

Following the noon luncheon attended by upwards of 250 of the in-and-out visitors Saturday, Russell N. Cox, chairman of the Special High School Plant Committee formally turned the rambling glass-and-brick school over to the town.

Later, visitors had a chance to see the unusual features of this accordion-school with its easily movable partitions.

Of especial interest were the auditorium, th gymnasium, special lecture halls, the library, and the science department with its outdoor-growing permitted indoors.

Visitors also saw the special "resource centers" for math, English, social studies and science all opening off brightly-lit corridors.

Principal Willard H. Smith said the unique dedication was a never-to-be-forgotten event for most who attended and from William G. Saltonstall he received this tribute: "Your plant is wonderful; your staff is superb."

Chairmen of the special committee's subcommittees include: Leo F. Glynn and Mr. Cox, building; Eleanor M. Bump, facility and site study; Richard T. Wareham, survey; Laurence S. Locke, accordion plan; Robert H. Marden, school committee chairman; Dr. Brackett, Mr. Smith and Kargman, Mitchell & Sargent, educational consultants.

Don't Worry About Metal No Bird Harmed by It

By CHARLOTTE E. SMITH

Many insect-eating birds, particularly woodpeckers, chickadees and nuthatches, are very fond of beef suet, and there are various ways of providing it for them. Mesh bags are fairly easy to make, and can be filled with suet and hung from a branch or post.

A holder of quarter-inch metal hardware cloth can be shaped like a pocket and fastened to a short piece of board (leaving the top open to insert the suet) and the board nailed to a tree or post.

The often-repeated warning about metal causing injury to the eyes, tongues, bills or feet of birds during zero weather apparently has not been authenticated by actual observation of experienced bird-watchers -- so don't worry about it.

Ready-made suet holders of various kinds can be purchased.

A youngster can easily make a peanut butter stick from a log about 15 inches long and 3 inches in diameter by boring one-inch holes at intervals and filling them with peanut butter.

The holes do not have to be deep--one-half to three-quarters of an inch is plenty. The bark of the log should be fairly rough so that the birds can cling to it. Oak is good.

It can be hung vertically from a tree branch, on a wire between two trees, or on a bracket at the upper part of a window. Your best customers will be chickadees, nuthatches, woodpeckers, and occasionally a brown creeper or a golden-crowned kinglet.

Two books which give excellent information on attracting birds (both winter and summer) are "Songbirds in Your Garden" by John K. Terres, and "The New Handbook of Attracting Birds" by Thomas P. McElroy Jr.

The Massachusetts Audubon Society has a pamphlet written by Edwin A. Mason, director of its Arcadia Wildlife Sanctuary, called "Invite Your Bird Neighbors to Dinner." It is available for 10 cents at the Drumlin Farm Nature Center Store in South Lincoln. (Last of four articles)

Garland, Howard A. Solomon, Donald McGourty, James White, Stan Kostokas, Philip H. Dudley, and also Mesdames Garland and White.

Something About Birds

By CHARLOTTE E. SMITH

WESTON -- With only a month to go before the end of 1961, the Weston "Bird of the Year" is visiting the feeder of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Lewis, 200 Boston Post rd. Mrs. Lewis first saw a strange woodpecker on Nov. 15, and it was identified as a female red-bellied woodpecker on Nov. 28 by C. E. Smith. It continues to come for suet on a hanging feeder just outside the Lewis' dining-room window, and is still present as this is written (Dec. 2).

In the official check-list for Massachusetts, the red-bellied woodpecker is called a "rare vagrant from the South," but it is usually recorded every year somewhere in the state. There are two previous reports for our immediate vicinity -- one at a feeder almost daily in Wellesley from Nov. 17, 1957 to Mar. 23, 1958; and one in Wayland in 1947. Mrs. Ruth P. Emery, compiler of Records of New England Birds published by the Mass. Audubon Society, has had one other report this winter -- a male seen once or twice in the Andover-Lawrence area.

These large, handsome, noisy woodpeckers are abundant in swamplands of the southern states. Their name is rather misleading because the red tint on the belly (brightest on the male) is not noticeable except at very close range. A faint red "wash" can be seen on the Weston bird, however. The male has red-orange on the head and nape, but the female has a gray forehead with red on the nape and a very small red patch at the upper part of the bill. "Zebra-backed" would be a better name, as the black and white barring is conspicuous.

This is a first record for Weston, making the total number of species on the "all-time" list 221.

GUY GARLAND

Garland Named V.P. at Nuveen & Co.

WESTON -- Guy Garland, Boston regional manager of John Nuveen & Co., national investment banking firm, has been elected a vice president of the company according to Chester W. Laing, president.

Garland is president of the Municipal Bond Club of Boston. Mr. Laing said that Mr. Garland joined the John Nuveen & Co. organization in 1953 and had been associated previously with the Second National Bank, Boston.

Mr. Garland is a graduate of Harvard University, and The Harvard Business School. He retired from the U. S. Navy in 1945 with the rank of lieutenant commander. He and Mrs. Garland live at 95 Rolling lane.

John Nuveen & Co. is the oldest and largest organization in the United States dealing in tax-exempt securities exclusively. It maintains headquarters in New York city and Chicago, and regional offices in Atlanta, Boston, Columbus, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, Omaha, Philadelphia, Seattle and St. Paul. Originally a sole proprietorship founded by the late John Nuveen in 1898 the company was incorporated in 1953.

IN SCHOOL PLAY -- Donald Guy of Lincoln and Polly Howells of Weston, both seniors at the Cambridge School of Weston, have major parts in the school's fall play "The Skin of Our Teeth" by Thornton Wilder. Don as Henry Antrobus and Polly as Gladys Antrobus. The play will be presented at the school on December 8th and 9th at 8:15. Admission is $1. Other students from this area in the play are Cynthia Guy of Lincoln, Gerry Zorn of Weston, and Harvey Gravlin of Acton.

Woman's Society Reviews History

WAYLAND -- The members of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Community Methodist Church in Cochituate enjoyed a recent potluck supper to which each member brought her best cooking.

This was followed by a brief business meeting and a program outlining the history of the work of the woman's society in recognition of its 21st birthday "coming of age", and the presentation of gifts for Christmas at Cooper Community Center in Roxbury.

During the history written and presented by Joann Brown, district treasurer, the three members still living who were part of the Ladies Aid in 20 were mentioned - Mrs. Dana Elkins, Mrs. Warren Bishop and Mrs. William Lewis - and suitably honored. Corsages made by Mrs. Arnold Baker and Mrs. Mims were presented to past presidents Mrs. Arthur Dudley, Mrs. Carlisle Scotland, Mrs. Daniel Robie, Mrs. William Lewis, Mrs. Harrison Ware, Mrs. Ralph Cox, Mrs. Herbert Schleicher, Mrs. Robert Earl and Mrs. Henry Wormley.

It was interesting and amusing to hear excerpts from the minutes of the various meetings held by the Ladies Aid and the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, until they were combined into the Woman's Society of Christian Service in 1940, and even the events of the past 21 years were news to many of the new members who help to make this society a vital part of the work of the church.

The committee in charge included, Mrs. Roy Mims, chairman, assisted by Mrs. Chislett, Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Hollowell, Mrs. Abbott, Mrs. McKay, Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Robie, Mrs. Tufts, Mrs. Megson and Mrs. Sutherland.

Yes, Skating On Mill Pond This Year, If...

WAYLAND -- Yes, there will be skating on the Mill Pond this season . . . if the Weatherman will only cooperate. The town has already come through.

That is what lies behind the $3000 transfer of funds for the Mill Pond dam at the special town meeting next Wednesday at 7:45 p.m. at the High School Field House.

When the dam burst earlier this year, the town was required to make emergency repairs in order to maintain the water at the level required by agreement.

The fund transfer will cover this emergency repair.

Still in the offing is a consideration by the Middlesex County Mosquito Control Commission to straighten out the meandering brook feeding the pond in order to improve mosquito control in this region.

Wayland to Improve Old Conn. Path To Keep Up With That Suburban Crawl

WAYLAND -- This town's growing pains are turning Old Connecticut Path, once recalled as a quiet country (back) road into a commuters' path.

The special town meeting next Wednesday at 7:45 p.m. at the High School Field House will be asked to transfer $11,000 in Chapter 90 funds, left over from the Commonwealth rd. reconstruction, to Old Connecticut Path.

And the reason is -- there is no longer any doubt that commuters prefer this cut-off and will use it . . . straight, curved, narrow or wide.

Town authorities estimate that the reconstruction of this two-mile stretch from the Red Coach Grill to Five Paths will probably require about four years' work.

What is being sought at the Dec. 20 meeting is the transfer of the funds to take care of the straightening, widening and improving of drainage for about one-third the distance -- from Red Coach to Rice rd.

The money to be transferred is not all the town's -- only one-quarter. The remainder of the $11,000 is state (50 percent) and county funds. After the town votes to transfer the fund to the Old Connecticut Path account, the county and state will follow suit.

Last March the town voted $5650

(Continue on Page Twelve)

Don't forget -- next Wednesday at 7:45 p.m. in the Field House of Wayland High School is a special town meeting . . . to decide on the transfer of some funds, the most important of which is the shifting of $100,000 in Excess and Deficiency Fund money to a new stabilization fund so as to make it possible to get state aid payments sooner on the proposed Loker School addition, if it is voted in March 1962.

Committe to Confer With Chief

New Weston Fire Study Group -- Without Chief Upham

WESTON -- A new five-man committee to study the fire protection situation here has been formed--without Fire Chief Maurice Upham as a member.

Chief Upham was offered a post on the committee but declined. He is now out of town and cannot be reached for comment.

One of the reasons for appointing a new committee to go over much the same territory that had been covered by a previous committee was that more consideration should be given to the fire department's views regarding possible construction of a second station on the southside.

It was fully expected at the recent special town meeting that Chief Upham would be one of those named by Town Moderator Glenn Lempereur.

Now it seems certain that the new committee headed by Boardman Bump of 229 Ash st. will confer at the outset of its studies with Chief Upham.

Also--it can be expected that it will meet frequently with the chief over the period covered by its study.

The principal issue: What is needed further to insure present high fire safety standards as the town grows.

Recommended as a last resort by the former study group: construction of a new central station to replace the present station.

The former committee voted down the suggestion of a southside station.

It did not find much success in working out a common station and system with Wellesley for the southern section of town.

But even before the Nov. 14 meeting, Wellesley officials let on that they would be interested in dickering with Weston authorities about such an arrangement.

Some objections to the appointment of Chief Upham to the committee arose at the special town meeting:

--Sometimes the committee would be hampered in a frank discussion of the department if the chief were a member.

--Eventually, the chief would be hampered in bringing out any recommendations to the town that did not precisely agree with the

James Gardner Named to High Pentagon Post

WASHINGTON -- James H. Gardner of Wayland, vice president of National Research Corp. of Cambridge, has been named to one of the top Pentagon jobs, effective Jan. 1.

He has been with NRC since 1951 and has served as assistant director of the petrochemicals department and of the research division.

In 1959, he became the first general manager of the company's metal division.

A native of Salt Lake City, Dr. Gardner graduated from the University of Utah and received his Ph. D. in chemistry from Harvard University.

During World War II he was a parachute infantry officer with the Office of Strategic Services in China.

He is married to the former Anne Palmer and they live at 101 Woodridge rd., Wayland.

Car Rams Wall, Driver Unhurt

WESTON -- Henry F. Regan, 33, of 75 Great rd., Maynard, escaped injury but his car was extensively damaged when it struck a stonewall early Sunday morning on Newton st.

He told police the car failed to make a bend opposite 110 Newton st., near the Pinebrook Country Club about 6:25 a.m.

Head-on Crash But Both Men Walk Away

WAYLAND -- Both drivers escaped uninjured, except for a shaking up, when their cars were involved last Monday in a head-on crash on Main st. in front of George Stockbridge's gas station about 4:40 p.m.

Luigi Andreassi of 2 Lagrange st., West Roxbury, was the operator of one car owned by Crognale Construction Co. of 13 Bird av., Roslindale, and Joseph A. Beck of 22 Brookfield circle, Framingham, was the owner and operator of the other vehicle.

Rush-Hour Gap Forcing B&M To Close Commuter Line Here

WAYLAND -- Don't look now but commuting by rail from Wayland has just about had it.

President Patrick McGinnis of the Boston & Maine Railroad has announced that the first commuter line he will seek to squelch--soon --will be the line from Boston to Hudson that currently has one train at approximately 7:45 a.m. and 5:25 p.m.

A spokesman for the railroad termed this question of a petition to abandon the line premature--because no petition has yet been filed with the Department of Public Utilities.

Although Mr. McGinnis said only about 45 passengers ride the line on one Budd car, commuters say it is closer to 174 on two cars.

One of the railroad's chief drawbacks is the rush hour gap--that is, the concentration of most of its rail travel in early morning and early evening hours, with the consequent tying up of trains and personnel, at high costs, for the remainder of the day.

This is the story of rail passenger travel in most metropolitan areas and Mr. McGinnis has not been reticent about closing out lines with these rush-hour gaps.

As to how soon this could come about, local commuters are of two minds:

"If they move as fast as those B & M short-freights move past the Raytheon crossing, we'll have commuter trains with us for some time to come," quipped one commuter.

He also felt that, judging by com-

Wayland Firemen Unexpected Guests At Church Supper

WAYLAND -- They had a hot time at the ham and bean supper. Had to get the firemen in last Saturday, in fact.

Seems there was an overload on the electric lines just about supper time at the old parish hall at St. Zepherin's. The firemen stood by until an electrician could eliminate the overload and the supper proceeded.

And this was what the rest of

No More Squint-and-Duck Driving: Conant Rd. Bridge Is on the Level

WESTON -- You can see clear to Lincoln. Well, almost. The new Conant Road bridge is in operation--level and straight as a die.

Work on the sidewalk, authorized at special town meeting, is expected to be completed early next week.

"Doing something" about the hump-backed bridge with the high accident potential has been on the books for years, but the dwindling Boston & Maine Railroad did not care to take it up.

Finally, the Town of Weston voted that it must get it done to allow fire trucks and school buses to pass over it safely--not to mention local motorists.

Under an agreement worked out with the railroad, B & M workers did the reconstruction at a cost of about $6000 to the town (plus about $3000 for the sidewalk), and from here on in, the town and railroad will share maintenace costs 50-50.

Work began on the bridge Monday, Nov. 13 and was completed Monday, Dec. 11.

For about 100 feet back on each side, the road has been raised to bridge level so there is no more squint-and-duck driving on the approaches.

Just the Facts, Please

Every so often facts just accumulate into a sort of pattern that goes unnoticed. Grinding our way through John Gunther's latest monstrosity, "Inside Europe Today," brought this home to us.

Twenty-five years ago when Gunther's "Inside Europe" burst upon the scene, we were a nation unaware of and indifferent to Europe -- and Africa, Asia and Latin America, too. Let them sink or swim themselves. Washington's Farewell Address and all that. Then a mixture of pap (how many American cars in Paris, the type of food preferred by the average Cockney family, etc.) with hard fact had some reason.

But oddly enough Gunther is still writing the same type of book all over again. America seems to have passed him by. Just the facts, Mr. Gunther. Not so much pap.

But why is that?

It seems to us that, educated by another world war, increased foreign aid, NATO and UN obligations and so many other things as well, Americans are infinitely curious and concerned about just-what-is-going-on in faraway Katanga, Vietnam, and Algeria and Berlin.

Day to day events there reach right into town meetings in Weston and Wayland today. And somehow interest has shifted to hard facts about these places and their people. We haven't noticed it happening. But all of a sudden it's here.

From indifference we've swung over to acute interest. People who never thought twice about who the Secretary of State was and about our policy in Berlin and Vietnam are suddenly digging into back issues of the New York Times and devouring factual outpourings.

Even the newspapers, which only a year or two ago were being criticized for slighting foreign news, almost perforce are finding their budget of interesting news (that is, what people will willingly read) crammed with items of international import.

Quite a change that's come over us while we were so busy. A pity Mr. Gunther could not have sensed it.

Letters To The Editor

Survival, Yes -- But for Good Reasons

To the Editor:

The local and nation-wide interest and confusion over shelters leaves me more than a little disturbed.

The root of my concern is an increasing awareness that mere survival, camouflaged by the desire to perpetuate the principles of democracy, has become the core around which our thinking is so frantically circling.

Survival, for whatever reason it seems, has become the supreme issue; the end rather that the means to life. It is this emphasis on survival that so greatly disturbs me.

It seems to me that there is more to life than mere survival.

For example, one of the greatest values of life is the right to choose to give up life rather than surrender to degredation of moral or spiritual principles.

Throughout the course of history many individuals have elected to die rather than merely survive. The greatest and most influential was, of course, Jesus Christ.

Needless to say, Jesus could have survived to carry on His teachings in the flesh. He need not have been crucified. But His strength and the effective perpetuation of His teachings lay, not in a consuming desire to survive for His principles, but in His willingness to accept death for them.

As an individual can choose to die for His principles, so, too, a nation--especially a nation as imbued with His teachings as is the United States.

To this end, the United States is already committed. Its nuclear strength clearly indicates its willingness to die in a thermonuclear war, if need be, to preserve its freedom, its democratic principles. But the construction of shelters belies this willingness to die for its beliefs. Rather, it suggests a willingness to survive for these principles. And yet, as history has taught us, strength and effective perpetuation of an ideal is derived from a willingness to die, not to survive, for that ideal.

Let us not weaken morally by hysterically clamoring for shelter information nor militaristically by reducing our nuclear force.

Irrevocable possession of moral and military strength will afford our adversaries and possible quacks indisputable proof as to our intentions.

And it is this strength that will provide us with our greatest deterrent to a nuclear holocaust. To weaken may result in our own annihilation.

Sincerely yours,
Virginia W. Robins

Let's See If Mr. K Really Means It

To the Editor:

How many of us know that according to the "Congressional Record", Sen. Joseph S. Clark (D.-Penn.), said in the U. S. Senate on Friday, Sept. 8, 1961:

"Surely, it must be clear to all the world that there can be no security in a continuation of the arms race . . .

"Mr. Khrushchev has stated as recently as Wednesday (Sept. 6) of this week that he is in favor of total and permanent disarmament under STRICT INTERNATIONAL CONTROLS; that he would waive the veto, that he is prepared to sit down and negotiate a meaningful agreement.

"What better evidence can we give to him and the rest of the world that we mean business, too, in this regard, and that we intend to put the best brains of America to work in searching out for that objective.

"Now, it may well be that Mr. Khrushchev does not mean what he said. He has a long record of broken promises, the most recent being his resumption of nuclear testing.

"But it occurs to me it is our obligation as a peace-seeking nation, to put the Soviet leader to the test, to call his bluff, if bluff it be, and in any event, to assert our own strong will to pursue this objective . . ."

Why is not this headline news in all of our newspapers?

Let us all urge President Kennedy and our government leaders not to "Fear to negotiate" with Russia; rather to leave no stone unturned to ease world tensions and fears, so that Weston and the world will not burn up in a vast, ghastly inferno. Surely thermonuclear, biological and chemical warfare is unthinkable and insane, and so needless.

Something About Birds

WESTON -- Mr. Koe says that a male wood duck is at the Duck Feeding Area, possibly the same one which was there last winter as he "seems to know his way around." There is no better place than here to have a close look at our most beautiful duck.

The latest count of tufted titmice in Weston is 10 -- two more having been reported by Mrs. D. R. Brooke, Derby lane and at the Reids' on Hidden rd. (first noted there by A. Leiby). One of the brown-capped chicadees on Webster Hill was seen recently by Mrs. L. S. Hayes, Gypsy Trail. A flock of 10 - 12 cedar waxwings was seen on Nov. 17 by Mrs. A. R. Crampton, Conant rd.

A female cardinal stayed most of the afternoon at the Davidsons, Golden Ball rd., on Nov. 15, and another was seen briefly by Mrs. D. E. Nickerson, North av., on Nov. 17. Mrs. Davidson has a male towhee still coming for food. A few small groups of evening grosbeaks have been reported (Briggs, Squibb, Gorely), and pine grosbeaks are still around but in smaller numbers. More adult males have been seen recently -- handsome birds in their rose-colored plumage.

Apparently the majority of fox sparrows left on the night of Nov. 25/26, but tree sparrows have been seen in increasing numbers (Smith, Fales, Foote). A whitethroat was seen on Dec. 5 by Mrs. A. S. Fales, Merriam st., and single song sparrows have been reported since Dec. 1 by Foote, Fales, and Smith.

The female red-bellied woodpecker continues to appear daily for suet at the Frank Lewises, and quite a few "birders" have come from surrounding towns to see this rarity.

Brief announcements of local interest are welcome. Right to edit all published material is reserved by the paper.

That part of an advertisement in which a typographical error occurs will gladly be reprinted but no financial responsibility for such error is assumed by the paper.

In Weston, editorial and advertising material may be left at Kien Chung Tea House, 502 Boston Post Rd.

Shelter Supporters Unrealistic

To the Editor:

How encouraging it was to read Mr. Moyer's quotation from Gov. Meyner's report on shelters in the Dec. 7 Crier. Some may prefer to crawl underground rather than putting their effort into saving humanity above ground, but, thankfully, there are many who believe that the time and money spent on shelters can better be spent in an all out effort to prevent a nuclear holocaust.

Anyone who thinks that humanity can be saved by shelters if megaton bombs start dropping over the world with the resulting fallout are unrealistic.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

Our Apostle To The Indians

Through the years the highways of our towns have seen the passage of many distinguished men, but none more remarkable or of saintlier character than John Eliot, apostle to the Indians, as he rode his horse between his home in Roxbury and the Indian villages in our neighboring towns of Natick and Acton, or Hammonasset in Grafton.

Nineteen sixty-one is an especially appropriate date to recall this, for it was precisely 300 years ago that, after 14 years of study, Eliot published his New Testament in the Algonquin language, and two years later, the entire Bible.

More than one of my readers, I fear, who calls himself educated, has never even read either the Old or the New Testaments in their entirety. What devotion, patience, and scholarship, then, were required for an English clergyman, busy with affairs of his parish, to learn the sounds of the "barbarous" Indian speech; form them into letters and words; prepare a primer so that the natives might be taught to read in their own tongue; and then translate the new script into so long and complicated a book as the Bible!

His printed work, with its title "Up Biblum God," and his Algonquin dictionary, you may now see under glass in a very few great libraries. The value of these copies of two of the earliest books printed in America is beyond price.

Scholar, Eliot surely was, a graduate of Cambridge University, and learned in Latin and Greek. When he voyaged to the New World, he looked for a field where his talents might be of use, and became minister of the church in Roxbury, now the part of Boston which houses so many hospitals. While there, he founded the famous Roxbury Latin School. Cotton Mather said that under his influence, Roxbury turned out more scholars than any town of its size in New England, and his Latin School still turns out men of learning to this day.

From two Indian servants he began to acquire the complex Algonquin dialect. Years of patient perseverence brought him to the point where he thought he could preach in it. His first sermon was at the Indian village of Nonantum, by the Charles River in Newton, near the present Watertown Square.

To this devoted teacher, minister and linguist it was soon clear that his Indian hearers must be able to read the Bible, if Christianity was to make real progress among them. But there was no written language: no Algonquin grammar! Hence, as has happened with scores of languages throughout the world, the missionary's ardor for souls resulted in the first primer, the first Bible, and the first dictionary in the native tongue.

But Master Eliot's conception of his task did not stop there. The Indians, he decided, dispossessed by the English of their original lands, and footloose and scattered, must be settled in towns. There they could learn new ways of life and new trades to gain a living by, as well as the new religion. He appealed to the authorities for help. To Eliot and two others the General Court provided funds enough so that they could purchase 6000 acres for a township for their praying Indians.

The place they chose was the lands on the two sides of the Charles River at South Natick. You may visit that peaceful village any day, and cross the river at the spot where the Indians, under Eliot's direction, built a bridge 90 feet long, and so well constructed that it withstood floods that carried away the white men's bridges. Here they laid out their houselots and planting fields, and built their wigwams and their church, and here they are buried.

Eventually, as the number of Christian Indians grew to 4000, Master Eliot established fourteen such towns. Of the others the nearest to us was Nashoba, by beautiful Lake Nagog, now on Route 2A at the Acton-Littleton line. The Concord Road in either Weston or Wayland will lead you to it. The orchards that you see there today are successors to those apple trees that the Indians planted in the seventeenth century.

Our space will not suffice to tell fully of the shameful results of the hysteria against all Indians which swept the colony when King Philip attacked. How despite the pleadings and tears of men like Eliot and Sam Hoar of Concord, who offered to be personally responsible for their loyalty, hundreds of friendly Indians were torn from their homes and herded onto Deer Island in Boston Harbor, just as we treated the Pacific Coast Japanese in the last war, there to waste away for three years in hunger, cold and disease. When the remnant was finally allowed to return, they found their belongings stolen and their houses burned. How the gentle Eliot himself was reviled by Boston mobs as an Indian-lover, and barely escaped drowning when enemies rammed his boat carrying provisions to the prisoners on Deer Island.

Yet despite inhuman treatment of their race by the whites, many Christian Indians served against King Philip in the armies of the colony. The company which marched from Charlestown to save East Sudbury, now Wayland, from Philip's depredations is said to have been largely of these "Praying Indians."

The final blot on the record of our ancestors in King Philip's War was the selling of Philip's wife, his little son, and hundreds of others into Spanish slavery. John Eliot saved those he could, and bought back others.

Master John Eliot wrote a message to his neighbors then. Is it not applicable to certain "neighbors" also in these bitter times? He said: "This usage of them (the Indians) is worse than death. The designe of Christ in these last dayes is not to extirpate nations, but to gospelize them... To sell soules for money seemeth to me dangerous merchandize."

3 Weston, Wayland Residents Honored by Wellesley College

WELLESLEY -- Three area residents -- Fred J. Pillion of Wayland, Mrs. Dennie Doucette of Weston, and Miss Katharine Sears of Wayland -- were among the guests of honor at the traditional Anniversary Dinner held Wednesday, Dec. 13, for employees of Wellesley College.

Anniversary Dinner guests were the 62 men and women who during 1961 have observed various five-year milestones in their association with the College. They have given a total of 730 years of service, ranging from two persons celebrating their 45th year at Wellesley to 31 employees who have worked on the campus for five years.

Honored employees were introduced by Wellesley's business manager, Robert J. Schneider, and were congratulated by Miss Margaret Clapp, president of the college, for their "years of loyal contribution given to the advancement of the college."

Mr. Pillion, whose home is at 12 Stanton st. in Wayland, has celebrated 25 years' service at Wellesley. He is general foreman of the building trades workers, which includes the carpenters, painters, sheet metal workers, roofers, and the boatman.

Last March marked the 15th anniversary of Mrs. Doucette in her employment at the college. She is the head baker at the largest dormitory kitchen, supplying Severance Hall and Tower Court residences. Her home is at 10 Sudbury rd. in Weston.

For 10 years Miss Sears of Pelham Island rd. in Wayland has been employed at Wellesley, where she is the secretary in the department of history. She holds the Bachelor of Arts degree from Smith College.

New Packaging Locks Flavor in Chicken at Co-op

WAYLAND -- Stop dreaming. The chicken in every pot idea is not so far off, according to The Co-op, Inc., in its three stores--here, in Natick and Framingham.

Poultry processors across the country are currently changing over to a new and advanced method of packaging and freezing chicken that promises to give the consumer more freshness, more flavor and more economy in every pound of chicken bought.

The process results from years of laboratory research. It employs a special plastic film for air-tight packaging of chicken and a flash-freezing technique that locks the farm-fresh flavor right into the chicken.

Maintaining peak freshness has always been a problem to the industry, because the "natural juices of the chicken weep away", as the experts explain it, in the long trek from the chicken-producing areas.

This packaged chicken can be placed right in the freezer, as is.

Bend your knees-not your elbows-if you expect to solve the world's problems.

Bits & Pieces

We don't know about bomb shelters for most of us. That seems to be an open question hereabouts but about one thing we're sure: the Kennedy families (cabinet and kin) are going to need one. Did you see the snide things they've been saying about the Birch-rodders this past week -- aid and comfort to the Reds and all that? Sometimes we almost lose confidence in the White House, when we realize how little they know about The Truth and The Power in this land. Wait'll R.H.W. Welch writes his next book, Messrs. Kennedy.

Had a phone call the other day. The gist: There's no South Wayland . . . only something called Cochituate. And some people like to think of it as a separate town.

Well, we're stubborn and we'll go right on calling it South Wayland if we want. We always thought Wayland was one town. And since we're stubborn, we'll go right on thinking it and invite anyone else who wants to come along.

For people with 10 thumbs like us, these assemble-them-yourself toys and other gimmicks (that once came in one neat package) are just the thing to make a Christmas a real Scrooge affair.

But we've finally met the manufacturer who was trying to make life pleasant, even for Old Ten Thumbs. Assembling a fire grate (only a matter of putting on the legs--and we got them on backwards, thank you), the first instruction read: "First -- take the nuts and bolts out of the envelope."

* * *

Toll road opponents have failed to put together enough signatures to wipe the in-town extension off the books. But don't give up, maybe the same signatures can be used for some other useful purpose--like keeping the MTA in Boston or fallout over Siberia. We're open to suggestions.

* * *

Just thought you'd like to know what the $143.34 Westonites contributed to the trick-or-treaters on Halloween could mean to any of the following, according to UNICEF headquarters at the United Nations:

--A daily glass of milk for 2437 children for one month -- BCG vaccine to protect 14,334 children from TB -- insecticides to protect 1147 children from malaria for one year -- a daily vitamin capsule for 71,670 children suffering from malnutrition.

All that from Weston alone!

About the only persons we know of who'll admit they're bully Birch-rodders are Robert Welch and General Walker. And it couldn't have happened to two nicer fellows.

* * *

And speaking of the Birch-rodders, we see where that leftist magazine published by Mr. Luce has had some unhappy things to say about them -- probably the most telling being that they are not as shrill as some of the new groups. Is that possible?

* * *

Our definition of maturity to which we'd like to live up: Maturity is the ability to accept with equanimity the calamity imposed on you by others.

Million-Dollar Expansion Planned at Emerson

CONCORD -- A $1,200,000 expansion program, including construction of a new, three-story wing, is planned at Emerson Hospital.

President George R. Walker unveiled the program at the annual meeting of the corporation members of Emerson Hospital, calling it a necessary step to guarantee greater medical care of residents of the area served by the hospital.

He announced the appointment of John S. Beale, a member of the hospital's board of directors as chairman of an $800,000 fund-raising campaign.

Beale explained that $400,000 of the total estimate cost is expected to be provided by the Federal government under the Hill-Burton Act and that the remaining amount would be sought in gifts from people in the Emerson Hospital area.

A highlight of the meeting was the announcement by Dr. Sidney H. Wanzer, chairman of the Doctors' Committee of the campaign, that the medical staff was aiming at raising 10 percent of the fund's objective, or $80,000.

The ground floor of the proposed structure will house the emergency and physical therepy departments, which will be expanded to four times their present size. The area of the X-ray department, also in the new building, will be tripled and the laboratory, using space vacated by the physical therapy department on the ground floor of the present West Wing, will be doubled in size.

Also located on the ground floor of the new wing will be a common waiting room as well as a meeting room for staff and personnel and a cafeteria more than twice the size of the present dining hall.

The floor above will provide accomodations for 34 medical and surgical patients in four-, two- and single-bed rooms, together with a centralized nurses' station, diet kitchen and other service facilities.

Exterior construction of an identical second floor is "a particularly sound and economical aspect of this building program," Mr. Nocka said. Reconstruction in the East Wing's maternity department will add an eight-bassinet nursery and three labor room beds.

Beale said that work on the campaign would begin immediately, noting that the results of a public opinion poll conducted by the hospital show that, to date, 72 percent of those replying are in favor of the expansion program.

It All Started Because They Tired of Walking

WESTON -- Two juveniles from Lynn and Swampscott, looking for a place to bed down on their hitch-hike journey to New York Tuesday, Dec. 5, tried a Weston car and ended up stealing it, crashing it and injuring themselves.

Abandoning their idea of a New York trip after finding the car keys, the boys started on a joy-ride of Greater Boston but crashed head-on with another vehicle on the Lars Anderson bridge in Cambridge about 8:15 p.m.

MDC took one boy to the hospital with a broken arm. The other was shaken up. Both were detained.

Their only complaint: they ought to allow hitch-hiking on the Mass. Toll Road--then they wouldn't have gotten into trouble...this trouble, that is.

Brakes Fail, Truck Flips, Man Unhurt

WESTON -- Paul F. Cahill, a bakery truck driver, was shaken up and his truck wrecked when, he told police, the brake failed on Sunset rd. Saturday about 2:35 p.m.

Mr. Cahill, who lives at 497 Main st., Charlestown, said the brakes failed, rushed down an incline and tipped over on its left side on Merriam st.

Dies of Heart Attack

WESTON -- Weston police Officer David Cahill responded to an emergency call Sunday at 1:40 p.m. at the Pinebrook Country Club where Edward Meyers of 93 Adena rd., Newton, an employee in the pro shop for 34 years had suffered a heart attack. Officer Cahill took Mr. Meyers to the Waltham Hospital where the latter died.

100 Years Ago . . . in the Civil War — XIII

Lincoln Skips Constitution To Get Power He Needs

By SOUTHWORTH LANCASTER

(December 10 - December 16, 1861)

THE NEWS: Routine skirmishing continued in Missouri, Kentucky and West Virginia. Along the Potomac, pickets on both sides exchanged shots, coffee, tobacco and newspapers.

Dec. 11 -- Confederate Congress offered bounty and furlough to all one-year-enlisted men who would sign up for two years more. Dec. 12-Brig. Gen. Ambrose E. Burnside reported that he had now assembled all necessary shipping and equipment for the expedition to Roanoke Island, N. C. A "division" of 15,000 men was concentrated at Annapolis, including 21st, 23d, 24th, 25th and 27th Mass. Flag-officer L. M. Goldsborough was the naval commander.

BEHIND THE NEWS: In both East and West, the situation resembled the "phony war" in France in 1939. (Yet, as Kipling put it, it matters as much to a dead man whether he has been shot in a Border scuffle or at Waterloo.) . . .

The South did not plan for three-year enlistments until August, and 148 one-year regiments were still on the rolls. National conscription was talked of, and individual states had already used this method to fill up their quotas of "volunteers"...

Lincoln's call in April had been confined to state militia for 90 days' service, but volunteers for three-year terms plus a small increase in the regular army had been ordered in May. This was a bold step of Lincoln's for in the absence of legislation it was technically unconstitutional.

Congress later ratified it, with the usual amount of grumbling. Simnon Cameron's War Dept. was so overwhelmed with the job of looking after the 90-day men that the organization of the new forces had to be turned over to Salmon P. Chase, Secretary of the Treasury. . .

The Roanoke Island move was one of those obvious things that had to be done and the preparations went on about as unobtrusively as a circus parade. Consequently, the Confederates knew all about it, but just as happened at Port Royal, there was no way to stop it . . .

The Roanoke plan was Burnside's,. approved by his friend McClellan. A West Point graduate turned Rhode Island manufacturer, Burnside had invented a breech-loading rifle that wouldn't shoot and a style of whisker that endured many years. Aimiable and unambitious, he had some limited military ability, and when the Roanoke expedition succeeded, he woke to find himself famous. Unfortunately, this made him a marked man and led him ultimately into assignments that were too big. It would have been better for him if he had failed at Roanoke . . .

The Navy, by law, had no rank higher than Captain. Necessity forced the invention of the grade of Flag-officer. Later, Congress overcame its aversion to high rank and permitted Commodores and three kinds of Admiral, but it remained adamant about the Army and tolerated nothing bigger than a Major General, until 1864 when something had to be done about. Grant. The South, more realistic, created full generals at the very start.

muter train speeds, we might already have lost the line.

Actually, the B & M would continue to run freight traffic over this Central Massachusetts division.

And local commuters, sometimes forced now to take buses to the Watertown MTA or all the way to town, might be compelled to rout their wives out of the curlers and kimona and away from morning coffee to make the train at Kendal Green.

Previous efforts to abandon service on this line have brought strenuous protests from Wayland commuters and officials. This one is also expected to be battled by the embattled travelers.

Old Conn –

as its share of the Commonwealth rd. project. This was set higher than the actual cost because it was not certain then how much the project would cost.

State and county approval have been given for the entire path project. Only when state approval has been given can a project be started and this determines the amount of Chapter 90 highway improvements the town can make. Chapter 90 is based on a 50 percent state subsidy, with the town and county sharing the remainder.

One of the more important improvements of the Old Connecticut Path rebuilding will be the regrading of the Five Paths intersection, scene of so many accidents.

Town officials have increased police supervision of this intersection at the morning and evening rush hours in past months. This has cut sharply into the accident rate.

But state, county and local authorities feel that this will not be a reasonable intersection for rush hour traffic until the blind spots have been eliminated.

This will probably take another three years to correct, based on the Chapter 90 allotment.

But as for the good old days on Old Connecticut Path, one Wayland observer noted:

"Well, this used to be a commuter road in the old days but the town sort of grew up around it and left it a back road. Guess we'll just have to recognize that it's become a commuters' thoroughfare once again. That's progress."

rest of the committee. (Actually, this argument leaves the town right where it was before the last town meeting, but it is felt that more consultation with Chief Upham may overcome this.)

Other members of the committee: Frederic S. Mann of 41 Pembroke st., a member of the original committee; Robert G. Guest Jr. of 73 Spruce Hill rd.; Robert S. Moulton of 244 Glen rd., who has been associated with the National Fire Protective Assn. and Donald D. Sloan of 292 Winter st.

4 Firemen Among 20 Graduating From Be-Prepared Aid Course

WAYLAND -- Twenty Waylanders, including four firemen graduated from the Red Cross-Civil Defense first aid course Tuesday at Parmenter Health Center.

"If firemen can apply themselves to this course," said Mrs. Joseph Vincent, chairman, "then others may find an hour a week for six weeks worthwhile."

As part of the C.D.-Red Cross program to insure that at least one member of each family will be trained in first aid techniques in case of an atomic emergency, 53 laymen and 25 auxiliary policemen have been trained in Wayland so far.

But too few.

NEEDED: more persons to take the six-week (Tuesday at 8) course to serve as instructors.

Also -- more women trained as instructors in order to meet the demand for afternoon classes.

The problem: Although surrounding communities have had five or more instructors, so far Wayland has been without one -- and has had to borrow from these communities, when possible. Deputy Fire Chief Vincent Glebus of Natick gave the course this time.

Next class in January (date coming in The Crier) will be taught by Joseph Vincent of Wayland.

"We feel that if just one person in a family knows something about first aid," said Mrs. Vincent, "they will be in a position to help themselves in an emergency when doctors and nurses will be in short supply.

"And if you stop to think of it -- it must seem obvious that even if the atomic attack never comes, a family is better able to handle emergencies with some training.

"And you'd be surprised how many don't have the faintest notion how to handle accidents in the home. Now if we had some instructors volunteering, we'd be able to make this program snowball."

Plea for Toys For Youngsters

WAYLAND -- The "Toys For Tots" Campaign started the second week of toy collection today. Co-sponsors of the campaign are The Salvation Army Men's Center, the U. S. Marine Corps Reserve, and the Shell Oil Company. They hope to achieve distribution by Dec. 24.

"Toys For Tots" combines the services of the three sponsors in an unusual manner. The Shell Oil Co. allows the use of its service stations as collection points for the toys; the U. S. Marine Corps Reserve picks up the toys from the service stations and takes them to The Salvation Army Men's Center, where they are sorted and distributed by personnel of the center.

New and good used toys are urgently wanted for distribution to needy children. The general public is urged to take such toys to their nearest Shell service in order to make some child happy at Christmas.

Wayland Boys' Tragic Experiment Provokes State Control Bill

WAYLAND -- This town's tragic rocket experiment accident in which two boys were severely injured has resulted in the filing of corrective legislation.

George Michael of Marshfield, deputy commissioner of Public Health and director of the department's Food and Drug Division, told The Crier the proposed law would prevent the sale of materials which could be combined to create an explosion.

The Nov. 14 incident on Winthrop rd. brought to a head the question of setting up more adequate control over such conditions, he said.

The law would require the licensing of all who sell materials of this kind and would spell out who might obtain such materials.

One of the ironic features of the local experiment was that the materials in and of themselves were not dangerous but were materials which are frequently used in combination to set off an explosion. This the boys did with tragic results.

The boys purchased the ingredients out of state but Mr. Michael is sure the state could work out controls in cooperation with the U. S. postal authorities to prevent such sales.

But in the main the bill would provide the means of regulating the 10 or more firms within the state which now dispense these materials.

Which Way to Peace? Women Air Issue

WESTON -- A group of more than 60 women met at the Jones House in Weston on Monday, Dec. 4, in response to an open invitation to the women of Weston to discuss the necessity of preventing nuclear war, of understanding our international policy, and finding practical ways in which to take positive action for peace.

Mrs. M. A. Cheek Jr. explored the uncertainties of the path to peace in a nuclear age to see if there might be some points of general agreement.

She said, "There is enough scientific agreement about the possible scale of destruction so that nuclear war has become an intolerable solution to the world's disagreements, but saying this does nothing in itself. The area where peace or war is daily forged is in the conduct of foreign policy and here we run into problems where honest men differ.

"What constitute grounds for negotiation? Must there be further nuclear testing to give us parity or superiority in weapons systems?

"Does the armament race itself heighten the risk of war? Is there any way to escape the paradox of forswearing nuclear war and yet preparing for it?"

In discussing the United Nations she said she thought its power and influence transcended the weaknesses in its structure and that, in any case, the world couldn't get along without it. She felt that one of the great contributions any group of thoughtful citizens could make was in creating basic attitudes; realizing that all roads involved risk and would continue to, that negotiations involved flexibility and patience, that face-saving and compromise were easier if every small act wasn't hailed as victory or defeat for Russia or ourselves but was seen as just another step in a long process. Above all, she felt we had to keep the steady view that the life of mankind was at stake in avoiding nuclear war.

'New Look' at Weston's Allen House Restores Its 17th Century Tone

By HARRY PATTERSON

WESTON -- The old "leanto" house at the corner of Chestnut and Wellesley Streets is said to be the oldest house in Weston. It was built by Joseph Allen in 1696.

Through the years it has been added to, subtracted from and re-added to -- but in the main it has much the same appearance that it had 200 years ago.

Early this year it was bought by Mr. and Mrs. John W. Scott, who have a real appreciation and love of old houses; and they have done a magnificent job of restoration on and in the fine old dwelling. Inside, of course, the plans called for certain modifications in line with present-day living. But several rooms retain all the original features that were built into them during the 17th and 18th centuries. And the exterior restoration is faithful in every detail.

Even the best houses have a way of wearing and deteriorating slowly, and it was the aim of the Scotts to make the building as proof as possible against the future ravages of time and the elements. All the clapboarding has been replaced, as have the windows and most of the doors. The foundation and chimneys have been pointed up and in some places rebuilt.

The work was directed by Mr. Philip Baker, a craftsman in the old-time sense of the word and an authority on Colonial houses. With his late father he worked for the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities in restoring the Jones House. He also helped in the restoration of Frederic Dumaine Jr.'s house on Lexington st.; in the rebuilding of the Wayside Inn after the disastrous fire; and on many other projects throughout New England. With his crew of seven artisans, he uses modern tools to reproduce antique features - windows, paneling, floors, fireplaces, wall lath and plaster, etc.

COZY DINING AREA in remodeled Allen House retains the 17th Century charm amidst modern conveniences. Oversize fireplace doesn't require much chopping. (Photo by Mike O'Neil)

Everything was fashioned right on the premises. Nothing was bought readymade. Replacement windows, for example, were put together with mortise, tenon and wooden pin, just as in the old days.

17TH CENTURY BEDROOM in the Allen House, Weston. Except for obviously modern portrait and lamp by bed, you might be stepping back two centuries here. (Photo by Mike O'Neil)

Mr. Baker believes that when the old house was built it may have had diamond-paned, leaded windows brought over from England, but that these were replaced with wooden sash as soon as glass panes of larger sizes became available in this country.

The old milk room, situated off the cellar stairs, still helps to cool the cheese room, directly above it, a few steps up the stairs to the second floor. Original paneled wooden shutters - one with a bullet hole in it -- still slide out from the wall to cover the windows on cold winter nights, or to protect the house from threatened Indian raids.

It is indeed fortunate that this beautiful old landmark came into the hands of people who, instead of allowing wear and tear to run their course, really did right by it.

Car Fells 5 Posts But Driver's OK

WAYLAND -- Ronald P. Falson of 16 Ash st., Marlboro, stepped unhurt from his car which had just struck and felled five concrete guard rail posts on Post rd., west, late Friday night, he told police.

Mr. Falson told police he was going west on Rte. 20 when the car veered into the posts on the hill.

Emil and Joseph

Straight Hair Casual? Well sometimes ... But more frequently taky, and sometimes downright dowdy.

Don't take chances - let Emil and Joseph give you an honest evaluation. He might say "Okay" (in Italian) in which case all you'll get is a little artful shaping. Or then he might say "Heaven Forbid" (in Italian) and absolutely insist on one of his new soft permanent waves, easily re-set week after week with no help. (unless you insist) from him.

Mary Leahy Named Principal At Claypit After Jan. 1

WAYLAND -- The School Committee announced its appointment of Miss Mary Leahy as principal at the Claypit Hill Elementary School to replace William Maxson who has resigned to become assistant superintendent of schools in Barrington, R. I.

Miss Leahy is a member of the Claypit Hill School's teaching staff.

Her appointment becomes effective shortly after Jan. 1, according to Schools Supt. Edward J. Anderson.

The committee considered a dozen applicants for the post.

Miss Leahy joined the Claypit Hill staff in September 1957, and has served most recently as the one responsible for the intermediate team teaching program for grades five and four and the high-achievement group of grade three.

Miss Leahy has also served in a number of non-teaching positions, including extensive work as a social worker in New York City and as personnel officer in the New York office of public housing agency.

Miss Leahy has taught in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades at Claypit. Last year, she was responsible for the fifth grade program.

From 1955 to 1957, she taught fifth grade in Lexington and from September 1952 to June 1955, she taught fifth and sixth grades in Norton.

From 1942 to 1951, she was employed by the Federal government in the area of employee relations, personnel recruitment and placement and administration.

She also served as assistant to

Richard Field Candidate for Moderator

WESTON -- Richard H. Field of 74 Sudbury rd., a professor of law at Harvard Law School, has announced his candidacy for the office of moderator in next March's election.

Glen N. Lempereur is resigning from this post at the close of his term in March.

Mr. Field has lived in Weston for 28 years and is considered an authority on civil practice among other fields. He has been a professor at Harvard since 1946.

Previously, he was a practicing lawyer in Boston from 1929 to 1942.

He then spent four years in government service, including three years as general counsel of the Office of Price Administration in Washington.

Mr. Field has long been active in town affairs, most recently as chairman of the Selectmen's Committee on Town Government which

Fiske Estate Offers 36 Acres To Weston for Green Belt

WESTON -- An offer of sale of land to the town for Town Forest has been made by the heirs and trustees of the estate of the late Miss Gertrude Fiske.

This concerns some 36 acres located west of Concord rd. near Cherry Brook Station, and north of the Clinton Division of the B&M Railroad.

Acquisition of this property would join the section of the Jericho Town Forest near Gun Club Lane given by Mrs. Alvah R. Boynton (then Miss Marion Farnsworth) with that section towards Merriam st. given by the Dickson family, and is the only way in which these two tracts can be connected.

The commission points out that the land itself is especially attractive, as it is bounded by Cherry Brook and yet is largely dry land, supporting what is essentially the last grove of big pines left in the town. There are good trails throughout the area.

The Conservation Commission has been in consultation with the Board of Selectmen and the Finance Committee, and if considered advisable, a proposal will be presented at Annual Town Meeting in March.

This land was appraised for the estate purposes at $750 per acre, and is being offered to the town at this figure -- or $27,000 in all. Offering land such as this at such a price indicates the interest which the beirs and trustees have in contributing to the Green Belt plans of the town and actually constitutes a substantial gift.

Harold B. Willis Jr., now representing the heirs and trustees, has felt it necessary to resign from his appointment to the Conservation Commission, much to the regret of other members.

Any citizen wishing to see this land should inform the chairman of the Conservation Commission, Stanley G. French of Ridgeway rd., who has permission from the heirs and trustees to arrange viewings.

Open House With Santa At Boesenberg's Dec.23,24

WAYLAND -- Don't look now (wait until Saturday and Sunday night) . . . but that's Santa Claus himself perched up on the roof of Ed Boesenberg's house at 14 West Plain st.

Tossing candy out to the kids, you know. Calls 'em by name -- and flip they've got something to remember. Great. Lots of fun every year.

And no, you're wrong, Santa's not related to Ed. Lot of people've said that but that doesn't make them right either.

Still, your child doesn't have to be known to Santa by sight to rate a candy. Just step up -- it's the house next to the Texaco station on Memorial sq.

The Boesenberg's have lived there many a year -- he for 35 and she for 27 as a bride. And they like children: have three daughters and three grandchildren.

That's why it's open house Dec. 23 and 24, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Come on along.

Wayland's Teacher Visitor From Spain Talks of Christmas, U.S. Habits

By BETTY GEIGER

WAYLAND -- "1 Feliz Navidad!" or "1 Felices Pascuas!" will be heard in Wayland this week- a Christmas greeting from a most attractive young lady, our Spanish import, Senorita Maria Paz Velasco.

Miss Velasco came to this country on Aug. 17 from Cordova, Spain, as an exchange teacher under the Fulbright Exchange program. She is teaching Spanish here at the High School and is thoroughly enjoying the experience, she says, although it is far different than her school in Marchena, Seville, where she taught French.

When asked why she picked Wayland, in which to teach, the vivacious young lady explained that she had traveled, studied, or taught in France, England and Portugal as well as her native Spain.

"There is a similarity about all the European countries' methods of education, but in the United States the system is quite different. This is most especially true of Wayland, and I wanted to learn about this

Taxpayers' Group Fights Lab Here

They Want to Keep Wayland Residential

WAYLAND -- Opening the zoning door for a research lab in southeast Wayland will mean the eventual end of the town as a residential community.

That's the view taken by a group of Wayland residents known as the Taxpayers of Wayland Assn. (TWA)

They also question the assumption that industrial taxpayers bring in more money and put less stress on the town's resources.

Twenty-six acres at the northeast corner of Rice rd. and Commonwealth rd. east are being sought by the Dow Chemical Co. of Midland, Mich., which wants to build a pure-research laboratory on part of the site. It also seeks an adjoining four acres in Natick.

Dow says that its proposed $750,000 (estimated initial cost) building would not entail any manufacturing--not even a pilot plant to test its research.

This, too, is questioned by TWA which insists that the very nature of science and the uncertainty of

Old-Fashioned Community Carol Sing Christmas Eve at 7 at Jones House

WESTON -- Weston and Wayland families are again cordially invited by the Women's Community League to join in the old-fashioned community carol sing in front of the Jones House from 7 to 7:20 on Christmas Eve.

Church bells will ring to herald the gathering of the carolers. The prelude by the Bell Haven Ringers of Weston will begin at 6:45 with the caroling led by David H. Bradley starting promptly at 7.

The Bell Ringers directed by Mrs. C. Francis Whittemore and a Brass Choir from the Weston High School, directed by Robert O. Corley, will accompany the singing.

The first community sing at the Town Tree near the Town House was in 1923 when Mrs. Whittemore played the trumpet. Her engagement was announced that evening.

The bell ringers group was formed in 1954 through the interest of Mr. and Mrs. Whittemore who are members of the American Bell Ringers Assn.

The group has a complete set of English handbells which were cast at the Whitechapel Bell Foundry in London. They have given many concerts throughout the Boston area. The members of the Bell Ringers who will play on this Christmas Eve are Mr. and Mrs. Whittemore, Mrs. Thomas Miller, Mrs. Arthur Brown, Mrs. Nathan Place and Mrs. Joel Covington.

Members of the Brass Choir are Douglas Downing, Richard Given, Jay Kilgore, David Leithead and Richard Moriarty, trumpets; Richard Hosterman, French horn; Roger Ferrelli, Eric Hoagland, John Petrick and Alton Stone, trombones; and Laurence Saunders, tuba. The carolers will enjoy the postlude by the Brass Choir.

The scene will be only faintly lighted by candlelight from the windows of the ancient Jones House, the traditional tallow candles recently replaced by safer electric candles, so carolers should bring flashlights for reading the songsheets which will be provided.

ENGAGED -- Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Brosseau of Cochituate announce the engagement of their daughter, Frances F. to Paul W. Senory, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Senory of Cranston, R.I. Miss Brosseau is a graduate of Wayland High School and Chamberlayne Jr. College. Mr. Senory is a graduate of Wayland High School, attended Boston College and is currently serving with the U. S. Air Force at Homestead Air Force Base, Homestead, Fla. A May 19 wedding is being planned.

Miss Guest was graduated from Darien High School, and is attending Simmons College in Boston.

Mr. Adams was graduated from Culver Military Academy, and will be graduated from Harvard University in June 1962. He is a member of The Fox Club, Hasty Pudding Institute of 1770, and Harvard Club of Boston.

A September wedding is planned.

Mr. Agnew is now associated with the First National Bank of Chicago, and is a member of the University Club. A February wedding is planned.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

"A Delightful Appearance To The Eye"

The white dwellings of our villages look neat and appropriate at every time of year, but the wreaths and lighted windows of Christmas add a special flavor. Even with fresh snow about them their white lines stand out clearly, and the occasional bold red, or the cream or buff of some neighbor add a pleasing contrast.

When a nephew, never before out of California, came east a couple of years ago, I had hard work to make him believe that many of these houses, though of wood, had been built one, two, even three hundred years ago; and were likely to stand there at least as long again. In California, he said, a wooden building is old at twenty-five years, and is likely to be decrepit at fifty. At seventy-five, in that young state, it is almost ancient.

What is the secret, then, of the youthful vigor and good looks of so many of our pre-Revolutionary houses? It is not merely a certain simplicity of line and grace of proportion. It is also the care of paint and roof and foundation that has kept the gales and snows from penetrating.

The paint and the colors, now so commonplace, have not always been used here, though. After the first hasty hovels and wigwams, the Puritans built little houses of wattle and clay, English style, or larger ones of plank or squared timbers. Elisha Jones, over in Concord, sheathed his frame with overlapping boards of pitch pine, and Mr. Pelham of Watertown built his small house "all of clapboards."

In Boston, however, a different siding became popular. Two Hollanders who visited here in 1680 reported: "All the houses are made of thin small cedar shingles, and then filled-in with brick and other stuff, and so are the churches."

With no paint, the siding, whether clapboard or shingle, soon weathered to a soft gray or darkened almost to a black; both having been split from the log, and perhaps shaved, rather than sawn. In Deerfield today you may see a few such dwellings surviving, whose owners would be aghast if you suggested paint; and shingled unpainted houses are not uncommon in other old towns.

It appears to have been about 1700 that painting got its start, first with Indian red ochre mixed with fish oil for the cornerboards. Others tried coffee, and egg yolks, for color. Perhaps the latter, with the later substitution of yellow ochre, may be responsible for the buff, which, after white, is still the most popular color here for houses, as red is for barns.

Within a few years imported oils and pigments were offered for sale in Boston. The famous Boston Stone, set in the side of a building just off Hanover Street, was brought over to grind pigments, and by 1730 Boston had a professional painter. Still, not many people painted their buildings. Some even thought paint hastened the decay of clapboards and shingles.

With the importation of white and red lead and good linseed oil from England and Spain, customs began to change. In 1753 the village of Hadley voted to cover the meeting house with clapboard and "color it." When a Connecticut town in 1770 built "a very genteel meeting house," the town voted "that it be colored white." After the Revolution had ended a visitor to the little town of Worcester reported the houses there generally painted, as were the meetinghouses in Spencer and Springfield.

By the time President Timothy Dwight of Yale made his famous journeys through New England in the early 1800s, he could comment on one place that "the houses, fences and outhouses" are "almost universally painted white" and "make a delightful appearance to the eye." About the same time an Englishman called Dedham a "handsome little village," the houses "mostly built of wood and painted white," just as you see them today.

Never since has New England found anything that will better stand our blistering July heat, and our wild January northeast gales than white lead and linseed oil; though we no longer use egg yolk to vary the color to buff, or pond scum for green blinds.

This lead and oil habit, now well along toward its third century, is one of the characteristics that make our villages appear different to the eye of a Californian, while they also keep Weston's Jones House or Golden Ball Tavern and Wayland's First Parish church as weatherproof as the day they were built.

And when Christmas adds its candles, greenery, red ribbons, and sometimes its snow, our villages look truly well dressed.

Something About Birds

By CHARLOTTE E. SMITH

WESTON -- The first "white-winged" gull of the season an immature Iceland, was reported by W. Koe at the Duck Feeding Area on Dec. 9 -- an early date. H. Ogilvie, Conant rd., has been seeing a flock of pheasants which reverses the usual order of things --7 cocks and 1 hen!

Mrs. C. P. Gorely, Jr., Boston Post rd., recently saw a pileated woodpecker flying low over her home. These birds have a characteristic "long-drawn-out" look in flight which, together with the large size and coloration, makes them unmistakable. This might be one of the pileateds which have been seen in the Jericho and Weston College area, as in winter they range up to four miles from their "home territory" in search of food. The red-bellied woodpecker at the Lewises has been most accommodating about showing itself to the many visitors who have come to see it.

Mrs. W. Merdinyan, Longmeadow rd., saw two bright male bluebirds on Dec. 11. Four more brown-capped chickadees were reported on the morning of Dec. 14 -- two by Mrs. L. McConaghy, Eliot lane, and two by Mrs. M. Theall, South av. They appeared simultaneously, so must be four different birds.

A number of pine siskins have been present for about a month in evergreens at Benotti's Flower Shop, South av. (Mrs. L. Cugini). A flock of 25 pine grosbeaks (4-5 adult males) was seen Dec. 8 by J. Fitzpatrick on the Arboretum property, Ash St., and on Dec. 6 Mrs. C. G. Squibb, Newton st., reported 12 (6 adult males). She saw several feeding on their driveway, apparently attracted by sand and salt which had been spread there. Very few landbirds will eat salt, but A. J. Berger says in his recent book BIRD STUDY (highly recommended, by the way): "This habit appears to be characteristic of species which subsist largely on seeds or fruit during certain periods of the year... crossbills, siskins, purple finches, and evening and pine grosbeaks."

For the past two weeks a male dickcissel has been seen feeding with house sparrows by Mrs. R. Carine and Mrs. L. Cugini, South av.

Sweet Disappointment

We've been sitting right here in the office and seeing a large part of the world these past few weeks.

We wish we'd kept track but there's been by conservative count, more than 30 men and women who've come in here and left disappointed.

Each was looking for the UNICEF Christmas cards. We were sold out. Had been since four weeks before Christmas. Same story throughout Massachusetts.

We were surprised, as they were. And we hope they were as happy as we were.

Somehow -- almost like magic, we like to believe -- sending beautiful UNICEF cards donated by world-famous artists has become a wise thing to do.

All the money goes to the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (UNICEF) to help underprivileged children throughout the world.

And the remarkable thing, as we at The Crier can testify, is that all money paid for the cards goes to UNICEF. Even postage and handling charges are absorbed by the "retailers" who put the cards on display. That's as it should be. Every cent goes to help someone.

If this means anything, it means that this sell-out is going to mean the needy youngsters in other lands won't be sold out this Christmas, nor for some time to come. A dollar and a quarter goes a long way abroad.

And we'd just like to say this to those Christmas givers who wanted to do their bit with the purchase of the cards.

You can still Christmas-contribute to UNICEF the amount you'd have spent for cards by making a check out to U. S. Committee for UNICEF, Room 1860, United Nations, N. Y. Or make your check out to them and leave it here -- we'll forward it . . . with ours.

A Merry Christmas to you all.

So Who's Innocent?

Three die in fiery collision on the Southeast Expressway. One car, doing probably 90 mph, jumped the center barrier and set off the explosion-and-fire.

We've heard many comments on that tragedy, but among the most telling was this, oft-repeated:

"It just shows you -- there's no protection for the innocent driver in the other lane."

Well, yes. But we'd like to add our dour comment.

More people are doing 90 mph. It's so easy. You don't notice the speed behind the wheel of today's cars. And more people are letting them--this includes police and judges. It's so easy, if you've got a friend. And whaddya going to do? They need the car for a living, don't they?

Well, we'd just like to make a wish -- namely, that police and courts enforce the law. If we knew 90 mph was punishable, there'd be fewer chances taken... and fewer needless deaths.

And don't say it can't be done. Just look at Connecticut, and blush.

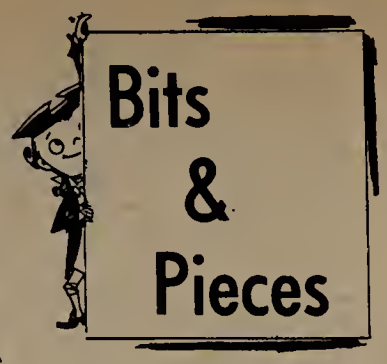
Weston Brownies Busy as Beavers

WESTON -- The activities of the Brownies in WESTON reflect close knit inter-cooperation in the town. Although Brownie II's spent much time learning beginning camping techniques, building fires and cooking outdoors, they also found time to make and decorate 200 tags for Christmas stockings for the Metropolitan Hospital children, presents for their mothers, and lovely identification name tags with natural decorations for the members of the Womens Community League.

On Thursday they attended the performance of "The Birds Christmas Carol" to which they were invited by the Sisters of Regis College.

United Fund Says Thanks



To the Editor:

Your paper deserves a heartfelt "Thank you" from the volunteers and staff of the Greater Boston United Fund for your part in publicizing the 1962 campaign.

Your help by bringing to your readers the events and progress of this year's drive, cannot be too highly appreciated. This can be attested by the fact that a record sum of money for United Fund agencies was raised this year.

An informed public, throughout the year, is essential to the success of the United Fund's program as well as its campaign; in giving the Fund such generous coverage you are a leader in promoting "People Helping People".

Sincerely yours,
Carl N. Schmalz

We've been making up our Christmas list--and since we may run out of cash before we fill it out, we thought we'd let all our friends know what they've have got if we had got more of what we haven't got:

----B & M Railroad: a gilt-edged crying towel.

----B & M commuters: The Good Old Days.

----Town of Wayland: One phone exchange, one postal delivery, one-name-for-all, one hundred thousand dollars tax free to fill in the tax chinks.

----Wayland Redevelopment Authority: protection and free passage through the Dudley Pond Area.

----Heard House: an unqualified yes from town authorities.

----Ralph Heard et al: a nursery to roam about in.

----Birch-rodders: a soupcon of self-doubt.

----Civil Defense: a Word Shelter for protection against the anti-Shelterites.

----Webster Gwemleyites: a bound volume of Robert Welch's talks to the Welchers.

----Voice of Women: a choice of some historical perspective or a lead-bound volume of ALL of Mr. Khrushchev's quotes--AND deeds.

----Town of Weston: a fire study committee to study a fire study committee studying a fire study committee's needs to study a fire study committee.

----Weston School Dept.: a free book of Accordion lessons.

----Weston High Football Team: How to Find Something to Be Thankful for on Thanksgiving Day.

----Real estate operators: an original copy of the music for "Nothing but Blue Laws From Now On."

----Both finance committees: a tax on passing motorists.

OVERHEARD: Five-year-old recalling her reluctant 10-day stay in Children's Hospital when four: "So I said to the doctor, have you got a car...and he said yes... and I said, Fine, will you take me home in it right now...."

Just so you'd know: Waylanders' $627.32 contributed to UNICEF on Halloween could well "treat" foreign children to any of the following needs:

----Daily glass of milk for 10,664 for one month----BCG vaccine to protect 62,732 children from TB----insecticides to protect 5019 children from malaria for one year----daily vitamin capsule for 313,660 children suffering from malnutrition.

Little bits about Christmas we gathered from sneaking a look at our children's World Book Encyclopedia:

St. Francis Assisi is known as the father of Christmas caroling, and Martin Luther is believed to be responsible for the lights on the tree. He is supposed to have added the lights to represent the stars above Bethlehem on Christmas Eve.

Brief announcements of local interest are welcome. Right to edit all published material is reserved by the paper.

That part of an advertisement in which a typographical error occurs will gladly be reprinted but no financial responsibility for such error is assumed by the paper.

Letters To The Editor

That 150-Megaton Cure

To the Editor:

Oh have you considered what would be lost
In a thermonuclear holocaust?
Though we might huddle down in our neighborhood holes.
Deeper and deeper like burrowing moles.
Far from the firestorm, fallout and blast,
With dehydrated goodies our daily repast.
The magazine pictures show neat double-deckers,
Fathers and Mothers and kids playing checkers.
(But I can remember a three day rain,
When my family drove me nearly insane.)
One of our inmates would certainly snore,
While voices protesting might rise to a roar.
Wait two weeks, they say, for the worst of the fallout,
And Civilian Defense will beam us the "all-out".
Then what will be left of our comfortable houses?
Where are our school children, brothers and spouses?
There'll be strontium 90 and other trash,
Deep in the radioactive ash.
The scientists tell us that even the trees
Would all be destroyed or succumb to disease.
Now I enjoy tennis and sailing and skiing,
These are some of my reasons for being.
The trivial round and the common task
And a chance for life for mankind I ask,
Stars and the moon and the warmth of the sun,
Green things growing and friendship and fun.
The Statesmen may think that the bomb's a solution
(Though we'd all be killed by the air pollution.)
"The bigger we build them the more they'll deter,
We must test and arm so a war can't occur,
Stockpiles must grow and we'll foot the bill
For missiles and moon-shots and 'overkill'."
But I am convinced that this madness must cease,
Such tactics aren't likely to lead to peace,
And an ounce of prevention is better I'm sure,
Than a hundred and fifty magaton cure!

Answer to Anti-Shelterites: As Long as Man Is Fallible...

To the Editor:

The rational understanding that not oneself but the preservation of Mankind is our aim is a most important difference between humans and other animals.

Though lower animals will fight to the death for their young, they do it as an instinctual effort to make their species survive. To this man has added the ability to think and to love. He has created the belief that the human species will not only survive but will grow in humanness.

In our sophisticated times Man has had the leisure to be introspective. This does not allow him to be selfish.

Where there is peril, steps must be taken to protect the greatest number of people.

In the case of nuclear protection it does not mean that we have to plan on a life underground. It means that along with the effort to make life on this Earth the wonderful and ever progressive way that we want it to be, we must realize that we, as a country, are almost alone in our well-being ... in a world where powers are striving to keep men quiet and busy when they cannot give them bread. They have no time for love and no desire to enlighten.

Christ died so that men could live. He died so that the world could get a glimpse of love and unselfishness. He also rose from the grave. His death was not a sacrifice for principle, but an expression of His belief in the immortality of Man.

An individual can and should choose how he will live but he cannot ethically choose for others how they will die.

He must in all ways provide that others live, though he, himself, perish.

Though an individual may decide that he would rather die than live in a poisoned, blasted world he cannot make the decision that othes die with him. It is especially true that he must not decide for young and minor children, who have no voice. We cannot shirk our responsibility to them.

It will do our world prestige no harm to let other nations know that along with wanting an end to strategic nuclear testing and a sensible limitation of conventional arms we love our children so much and have so much faith in the eventual future that we are protecting them during this irrational hazardous period of "sabor-rattling".

There is no such thing as "mere survival". Without life, there can be no perpetration of the ideals we so fervently fought to establish. What we are going through in this country today is not a new crisis, but a continuation of the struggle toward freedom, not only for this nation, but all people.

The people of a nation dead and dying through lack of preparedness, though they had lived by the highest of standards and with the greatest of optimism, are still people dead and dying.

As long as Man is the fallible being he is, he must try, to the utmost to guard others from his own fallibility.

Exchange Students Enjoy Dessert Party in Weston

By HARRY PATTERSON

WESTON -- Mrs. Henry M. Merrill of 215 Boston Post rd. gave a "Dessert Party" on Sunday evening, Dec. 10, in honor of the exchange students sponsored by the Weston-Rombas Affiliation Committee, of which she is chairman. Other foreign students living in Weston also were invited.

During the evening photographic slides showing scenes in different countries were viewed. The guests also heard a tape recording made at the United Nations dinner, Oct. 24, by Theodore Jones of radio station WCRB, and presented by him to the committee.

On it were recorded speeches made at the dinner by five committee-sponsored students, and they added Christmas messages to families and friends at home.

Copies of the tape have been sent to Rombas, France, Oslo, Norway, and Puerto Sierra, Brazil, and will arrive in time for the holiday.

Among those who enjoyed Mrs. Merrill's hospitality were Mrs. E. S. Hoagland, whose daughter Judy is Weston's student in Rombas this year; Mrs. Hugh A. 'Marriage' — a Man's Viewpoint With Sympathy by Friendly's

By ANNE S. HOCKING

The Friendly Society raised the curtain on its annual yuletide production this Friday last with Leslie Stevens' Marriage Go-Round. And with what excess of friendliness, too!

It seems that friendship like love, embraces many relationships. There's the man-to-man type, the man-to-wife type and the man-to-not-wife type. In the interests of drama, the author, Mr. Stevens, restricted himself to the latter two. A pity - one had the feeling after an hour or so that perhaps he might have been more knowledgeable on the first. He certainly couldn't have been any less.

It might be in poor taste for any woman to dispute his healthy image of the male and his role in domesticity (and out) but one can dispute his placid assumption that this image is shared by women as well.

At least when a woman writes a play from a purely subjective point of view, she has the sensitivity to leave the men out of it altogether (to wit; Clare Booth Luce's The Women), except as invisible objects of friction.

But leave it to Stevens to bring his women into the act poising their noses and flapping their fins in applause like a couple of circus seals. Tch, Tch, such subtlety!

In other words, this was a man's play -- so if there's one around who is not confident that through his stolid and dutiful exterior ooze the invitations of a Don Juan, drag him to it somewhere. And moreover, this was particularly a Weston man's play - a natural for such a professorial clime as ours. Our protagonist is a professor, his wife is a professor, his rival a professor and his dalliance a professor's daughter - a libertine Swede with a comfortably compatible I. Q. of 165 and a body equipped to camouflage it. Is this not the stuff that Middlesex dreams are made of?

Perhaps that is why it was performed with such sympathy. I commend actresses Ann Wells and Ricki Robbins for their gallantry and loveliness in martydom and actors Gary Kant and C. Inglis Wetmore for fidelity to their cause. Obviously Director Alice J. Mallet knew a good thing when she saw it.

Weston Blake Jr. Brings New Facts to Light on Arctic

WESTON -- A Weston native is opening up new avenues of thought on the little-explored Arctic wastes.

And Weston Blake Jr., 31, son of Mr. and Mrs. Weston Blake of 147 Newton st., knows whereof he speaks.

Mr. Blake has just returned from two years in the frozen north around Spitzbergen. He is writing an advanced thesis at Ohio State University on his finds.

In his two years at the University of Stockholm, Mr. Blake's explorations took him to points 600 miles south of the North Pole in the sometimes ice-free Arctic Ocean.

Two summers were spent camping and boating in the areas bordering Spitzbergen.

He and another graduate geology student worked in the ice-free parts of an area 80 percent covered by a glacier in 1957 and 1958. At one point, a voracious polar bear tore down their tent but Mr. Blake was elsewhere -- for which he's thankful.

Driftwood and shell samples collected by Mr. Blake and his expedition will help geologists in their views of the Far North.

Some of the wood, for example, was spruce and pine that had drifted down from Siberia and was as much as 10,000 years old.

Using radio-carbon dating methods, geologists at Ohio State will be able to precisely determine their age.

Actually, Mr. Blake's report may shed some light on a current controversy among geologists -- whether or not the once totally-covered glacier area is rising.

Mr. Blake's view: "I think it has almost stopped rising."

Next summer Mr. Blake and his Swedish wife, Ingrid whom he met at the University of Stockholm, will work in the Canadian Arctic Archipelago and live in Ottawa.

He is now working at the Ohio State University Institute of Polar Studies.

Revere Bell Ready To Toll Again – Thanks to Donors

WESTON -- The Paul Revere Bell Fund Committee is very pleased to announce that the new mechanism which will "reactivate" the bell has been ordered. Both clock and striker were designed and built by Howard Clock Products, Inc., of Waltham, under the supervision of John C. Patten.

They are now being installed in the belfry of the Unitarian Church and, if all goes well, you should be hearing the great bell striking the hours once again by the time you read this.

The committee regrets to say that sufficient funds have not yet been received to cover the entire cost of the new equipment; but a second appeal is planned as soon as the holidays are over, and in view of the generous response so far, it is quite certain that before many more weeks the total sum will have been raised.

The committee thanks sincerely all those who have already contributed to the fund, and reminds those Weston residents who have not yet given that their donations, however modest, are still urgently needed to bring this campaign to an entirely successful conclusion. Checks should be made payable to The Paul Revere Bell Fund and sent to Henry W. Patterson, 70 Conant rd., Weston.

Lincoln Had to Rout McClellan From Bed

By SOUTHWORTH LANCASTER

(December 17 - 23, 1861)

THE NEWS: Dec. 19 -- Burnside began 2-day inspection of troops for Roanoke. "Long and Tiresome", said Capt. Chas. Walcott, 21st Mass.

Dec. 20 -- Ord's brigade of McCall's Pennsylvania division, on dual mission of driving back enemy pickets and securing stocks of forage south of the Potomac, collided at Dranesville, Va., with Jeb Stuart and 4 Confederate regiments. Cleverly using artillery and following with a smart infantry punch, Ord routed Stuart's force before the remainder of the division could come up . . . McClellan fell sick of typhoid fever. Brig. Gen. R. B. Marcy, his chief of staff (and father-in-law) sickened the same day . . .

Dec. 23 -- Brig. Gen. Alpheus S. Williams, 3rd brigade of Banks' division, wrote that constant changes in movement orders were hard on the men, who had no chance to build huts for protection against rain and sleet.

BEHIND THE NEWS: Dranesville, like Ball's Bluff an unplanned battle, had no effect on the war as a whole, but caused great enthusiasm in the North, which had had little to cheer about.

Jones, the Richmond diarist, asserted that Union sympathizers had lured Stuart into a trap, while even Joe Johnston said that Jeb had merely "withdrawn". Stuart in fact had taken a sound drubbing; he had only been after the same forage that McCall was looking for . . .

Brig. Gen. E. O. C. Ord, former artilleryman (witness that battle!) got his second star next year and later did well under Sherman at Vicksburg. McCall's other brigade commanders were George G. Meade and John F. Reynolds.

Both McCall and Reynolds were captured in '62 in the Peninsular Campaign. McCall never returned to duty. Reynolds became a major general, did nobly at Gettysburg and like so many heroes was killed at his supreme moment. (Incidentally, his command fell to Maj. Gen. Abner Doubleday.) . . .

McClellan's illness was real enough, but he seemed to enjoy the attention he received and was in no hurry to end his convalescence. Lincoln finally jolted him into action. The President had been denied access to the sickroom -- one of the physicians was Dr. Marcy of New York, (McClellan's brother-in-law) and could get no comfort at headquarters, with McClellan and the chief-of-staff absent and nobody knowing what the next move was. The Army was literally without a head . . .

One might speculate about a successor, in case "anything happened" to McClellan. There were only three regular 2- star generals; Halleck, not yet made famous by Grant; Hunter, out of favor in Washington and virtually exiled to Kansas; and Fremont, whose Missouri antics were still fresh in mind. Two Massachusetts major generals had hinted that higher command would not be displeasing, Ben Butler and Nathaniel P. Banks, but their commissions were in the Volunteers and they had no military background. Buell, whom we have met, and McDowell, who really hadn't done too badly at Bull Run, might have been promoted in the emergency. But the Union government had not yet learned what it takes to make a General.

Time Stands Still For Weston Pupils

WESTON -- Exploding cannons and brass gongs helped trace the evolution of timepieces on Friday, Dec. 1 as all the students at Weston High School and Weston Junior High School saw the "Parade of Time" presented by the Hamilton Watch Co.

While tracing the development of timekeepers from the sundial to the electric watch, Henry Flood of Hamilton's education department, explained that man has used sun, fire, water, weight, coil spring and now electricity as sources of power to measure time.

"The history of timepieces often parallels the changing needs and advances of civilization," Flood stated.

When 24-hour timetelling became important to man, for example, the sundial gave way to other devices such as water clocks. The sand hour glass, however, proved more practical where there existed a water shortage or a need for a more portable timekeeper.

Yearbook Under Construction

By DON SANDERS

The noble carpenters of the senior class, the yearbook staff, have set about constructing in a pattern of pictures and words the most architecturally perfect yearbook ever to leave a drawing board.

Evidence of the '62 staff's imagination has been shown by combining pictures of the faculty with the various club activities each department advises. This combination emphasis a close relationship between the students and faculty and the important role which the clubs play in the development of the student. Fourteen pages have been set aside for fall and winter sports. Taken with accomplished sleuth, many candids throughout the book catch the students as they really are in classes, at games, at dances and in between times.

Several pages are devoted to the school building itself in its many stages before completion as well as during the dedication ceremonies. The possibilities of subject matter to choose from this year seems endless, especially to the staff that is limited to 140 pages. Countless hours have already been spent selecting and putting together material for the first 46 pages that have already been sent to the printer.

Key members of the staff are Phil Comeau, editor; Judy Eaton and John McKenzie, assistant editors; Barbi Downing, Bob Cocks, and Jan Sullivan, section editors; Nancy Ferranti and Pat Murphy, typists; John Bump, emergency photographer, and Don Sanders, copy boy.

An advanced sale of 181 books reflects the enthusiasm and faith of the underclassmen in the seniors' taste and talents. Much of the credit also goes to the yearbooks' competent business manager Tim McGettigan.

Science Clubs Share Spotlight

By HOWARD STORM

All three of the science clubs have been in the spotlight recently for unusual programs. The various activities of each have been summarized briefly below.

Weston High school has everything including a trout pond. It is the only one of its kind in any public or private school in all of Massachusetts and possibly New England. Before the Biology Club thought about putting trout in the pond, they had to make a suitable pond.

The originator of the trout pond project, Irene MacLeod, and her father got the measurements for the pond from the Massachusetts Fish and Wild Life Service. Bob D'Antonio, Fred White, Seth Heywood, Bob Lazarri, Jon Trowbridge, Jody Wetmore, Ed Rizzo, and Dennis Atwood worked to convert the stream on the south side of the high school into the specified pond with screen dams at both ends. After the pond was approved by the Fish and Wild Life Service, a truck brought a tank with 300 5" to 7" rainbow trout from the state hatchery.

The day after the trout were put in the pond, two-thirds of them escaped through holes in the dam. Seven boys spent a whole day netting the trout which had traveled up and down the stream while others repaired the dam.

COMPUTORS

Dr. Martin Fieldhouse from Emmanuel College, Cambridge, England held 40 math students spellbound with his talk on what computors were and how they worked. Although many technical terms were used, no one seemed to lose interest in how the computor grew from a simple adding machine into a complex system of machines capable of many complex functions.

Dr. Fieldhouse is presently studying at Harvard on an exchange program. He first came to Weston to attend the United Nations dinner last month and just happened to be placed next to Miss Zelinka, advisor of the Math Club. Miss Zelinka hopes that he will accept another invitation to address the club again on another phase of computors later in the school year.

SCIENCE TEAM

After taking first place in competitions with Lincoln-Sudbury and Natick High School broadcast over a local station, the Weston science team will appear on Date-Line Boston for succeeding contests beginning in January.

The library has over 3,500 books. To Kill A Mockingbird is checked out most often.

WHS Made Official

By LESLIE TOWNSEND

After printing booklets and programs, talking to newspaper reporters, guiding visiting dignitaries, parents, and photographers through the building, holding discussions on excellence in education, and listening to platform speeches, Weston citizens and friends officially dedicated Weston High School on December 2.

An estimated four hundred people attended the panel discussions during the morning and at least twice that many came in the afternoon to look at the inside of the sprawling structure. Mr. Keene's snake pit and the equipment in the language laboratory drew many inquisitive visitors. When the use of tape recorders was demonstrated, many were surprised by the sound of their voices on tape. Equally curious were those who stopped in to see the music room with its acoustic walls and the combined food-arts department.

The stimulating exchange of ideas among teachers in the morning panel discussions was a unique part of the dedication program. It was obvious that there was not just one view of what excellence was or how it should be reached. The opportunity to listen in on current educational talk was exciting in itself.

Mr. William G. Saltonstall, principal of the Phillips Exeter Academy, succeeded in summing the most basic aims of education -- to make fine young men and women who have an interest in life. At the same time he pointed out the obligation of a good teacher to invest his whole self into his career. He also demonstrated one of the best qualities of a teacher, a warm sense of humor.

This Is Your Life

One of the reasons you came to Weston this year was to meet new people. You are interested in becoming acquainted with people all over the world. As far as traveling goes, you've seen many unusual places, which most of us have longed to visit, such as the Riviera, Versaille, Paris, Strasbourg, and the Alps.

You have many hobbies such as playing "a little" piano which you have studied for three years. Drawing is another hobby, and you have designed several Christmas cards. You also like to collect stamps and listen to music. The Twist and the Charleston are two of the dances you enjoy.

You are an outstanding student in math and French. You are considering going to an interpreters' school when you graduate. Modern Problems is your "problem" course because you have never had much interest in history or politics. You like sports and went out for field hockey. Now you are enjoying the basketball season.

Your father owns a small French car, but you were not old enough to drive it in your country. Instead you depended on two bicycles for transportation. While you are here you hope to learn to drive. Although you have no brothers and sisters, you have four pet German Shepards, Dogali, Hi-Fi, Capi, and Louki. Your father sells dairy products for a living.

It is your bright blue sweater and gesturing hands and not a French accent which distinguish you, if at all, from the other students at Weston High. Josyanne Braas, or Josy to friends, THIS IS YOUR LIFE.

Sister and Brother Play Leading Roles In "Madwoman"

By MARYBETH MYERS

Barbara Arnold and her brother Louis will share the leads in the Weston Dramatic Club production of "Madwoman of Chaillot" on January 26 and 27. Barbara will play the madwoman, an eccentric but honest old lady who sees the world swindled by three crooks played by Tim McGettigan, William Vaughan, and Jeff Ogilvie. Louis Arnold is cast as the rag picker that first convinces the madwoman evil exists.

Mary Gowell, Joanne Gardella and Renee Strong assist Barbara in her crusade to ride the world of all parasites. Arra Avakian has a romantic interest in Martha Castillo in this performance. There are 28 members in the cast. Georgie Roland and John Harnish will be assisting Mr. Nichols as stage managers. Chuck Eldred will handle the lighting.

An easy play to understand and enjoy, "Madwoman" presents some interesting problems for the actors. Barbara has an imaginary dog to pet. When she sends the crooks through a passage way off stage looking for oil, they are in her mind sent to hell. "The whole play is acted as though it were an illusion," explains Mr. Nichols. "The cast has to pretend they are stereotypes instead of real people."

Avant Garde

The play was written by Giraudoux, a French playwright and novelist who is sometimes called the father of the modern French (Avant-garde) theater. Like Shaw, one of his contemporaries, he wrote plays of social criticism. "Madwoman" points out the evils of a materialistic, money hungry society in brilliant satire and comedy. Unlike Shaw's realism, Giraudoux wraps his characters in fantasy.

Unusual light techniques will be used to suggest the effect of fantasy. Some of the interesting props will be a nine-foot feather boa, several elaborate bird cages, and voices in the dark.

Please Love, No Partridges

"The Twelve Days of Christmas" is a lovely song, but the lyrics are terribly out of date. Hardly anyone sends his true love a partridge in a pear tree any more. Combining the talents of several of the staff members we have comprised a more realistic gift list for the modern "true love." To be fully appreciated, the list should be sung out loud.

First day of Christmas, a package of potato chips.
Second day, two show tickets.
Third day, three circle pins.
Fourth day, four paperbacks.
Fifth day, five submarines.
Sixth day, six shades of lip stick.
Seventh day, seven photographs.
Eighth day, eight charming bracelets.
Ninth day, nine kinds of perfume.
Tenth day, ten pounds of candy.
Eleventh day, eleven original poems.
Twelveth day, twelve cashmere sweaters.

Year Ends with Music

By RENEE LEISER

If you like Christmas music, then you will enjoy the Christmas assembly to be held tomorrow. Mr. Corley, director of the program, has mixed many familiar songs with new ones. Songs which the E period choir will sing are "Carol of the Bells," "Hark, Now O Sheperds," "O Come, O Come, Emmanuel," "Sing Alleuia," and "Gloria." This program was sung on December 2 for the Women's Community League.

Two solos will highlight the Girls' Glee Club performance. Muffy Crocker will sing "Go Tell It to the Mountain," and Judy Valentine, "As It Fell Upon a Night." The band has chosen to play "White Christmas" and a Christmas carol medley. The "Ballet Parisien" will be presented by the orchestra.

Students Monitor Conference Time

By BEVERLY BODEN

The conference periods are finally being supervised by students. One junior or senior is assigned to each of the 19 homerooms. Only four teachers are involved in supervision during the period at any one time. They are stationed in the halls.

This plan is set up to offer the maximum benefits of the conference periods to students and teachers. For the teacher it means more freetime to be with students. With monitors in the homerooms, the teacher will no longer have to act as a policeman. To students the system means greater self discipline in homerooms. It will also give students more time to meet individually with his teachers.

Any student who wants help during the conference period must have a pass, which has been signed by the teacher he is going to see, before the period begins. This pass is then presented to the monitor who records his destination and releases the student to go to his conference. No student will be allowed in the halls without a pass. (This does not mean a verbal excuse.) Attendance sheets will cover large group meetings so that individual passes are not required.

The study hall rules will be kept during the period. Anyone who does not participate will be referred to the Assistant Principal, Mr. Hale. The Student Council will discuss recurrent problems.

The Student Council plans to follow through this honor system by having students supervise the study halls and the hallways in the near future.

What a beautiful Christmas tree? The decorations are lovely. That glittering Explorer II looks magnificent on the top! Look at all those satellites, they are all different colors! How clever! And those rotating lights give a grand effect. Oh, there goes Saturn!

There is a wreath on every door. Those space stations do adapt so well. It is said that the tree at Cape Canaveral is higher than the twelve story tree at Rockefeller Center. They've strung lights over an idle launching platform.

Christmas cards are unusual too. With all the pictures of Santa and his rockets, Dasher, Dancer and Prancer, kids are wondering if Santa is an astronaut! He is being more practical at any rate! The picture is not the most important part of the card. It is the message that counts. It too portrays the Christmas spirit "Have a zooming good holiday." "Hoping your Christmas is A O K."

Are you wondering what to get Dad? The latest thing is a high frequency wrist watch to make communications so much easier. You know, the Dick Tracy style. The perfect gift for Mom is the latest recipe book. A collection of interplanetary favorites with a few tips on cooking in space. Why not get the kid sister a mechanical monsteress. The present for your brother must be a computor. Teachers recommend them.

This is Christmas of the future! It just goes to show that the commercial side of Christmas goes along with the times. But there is a more important part of Christmas, the religious side, which has stayed the same since Christmas began.

Ten Acres Sold To Natick Man

WAYLAND -- One of Wayland's best-known landmarks has changed hands. It has been announced by Edward A. Veno, Wayland realtor handling the sale, that Robinhood's Ten Acres has been purchased by Louis J. Monaco of Natick.

The property was sold by Robinhood's Ten Acres, Inc., represented by Harry D. Hull.

This sale is perhaps the largest real estate transaction of its kind ever made in this area.

The new owner has been a successful restaurateur for many years. Mr. Monaco was formerly a part owner of the 1812 House in Framingham, and before that was associated for 16 years with Dinty Moore's Restaurant in Boston.

According to Mr. Monaco, the name "Robinhood's Ten Acres" will be retained by the new ownership.

$3600 to Film Wayland Records From 1835 Sought

WAYLAND -- Surety Bonds for Collector and Treasurer for 1962 in the minimum amounts approved by the state were voted on at the Selectmen's meeting on Monday.

The treasurer is bonded for $63,200 and the collector for $68,800 a relatively low sum, according to executive secretary Norman E. Taylor, due to their excellent records. The Town of Wayland does approximately $3,500,000 business annually.

The town offices will close at noon on Dec. 22 following action taken by the Selectmen.

Mr. Taylor submitted his proposed Budget to be considered by the finance committee. A request for a sum of $3600 will be made in order to microfilm all town records from the date of its incorporation in 1835.

Housing Groups Make Plea: Be Fair to All When You Sell

WAYLAND-- The Fair Housing Practices Committee of Wayland consisting of 115 members and Weston's 143 members are urging residents who are selling or renting their homes to offer them without racial or religious discrimination.

Homeowners are asked to call Mrs. C. W. Skinner at TW 4-2210 or Mrs. R. Robins at EL 8-7556 for information about the services of the committees in affording equal opportunity to persons of "minority groups" who are looking for suburban housing..

The committees point out that the service they offer does not take the place of that of a real estate broker, but is in addition to it.

Houses listed with the Wayland and Weston committees are normally transmitted to the Fair Housing Federation of Greater Boston which maintains a listing for members of minority groups looking for housing in the Greater Boston area.

Those families who have applied for suburban housing to the Federation office can then be introduced to the seller, if he so wishes, through his own broker.

Over the past several years the committees in Wayland and Weston have found that minority groups who have sought housing in this area, both those moving here from out-of-state and from Boston, have encountered difficulties.

A number of selling owners in both towns have shown their houses on a non-discriminatory basis, and the committees anticipate increased cooperation in the future.

Field Seeks Moderator Post

recommended a change in the method of electing town officers among other things. Its report was discussed at a public hearing this fall.

Mr. Field was a member of the first committee on veterans' housing and a member of the finance committee for six years and chairman for two.

In 1956 he was elected to the Board of Selectmen and served for two years, resigning to undertake an extensive revision of procedural statutes and rules for the State of Maine, which was designed to modernize Maine judicial practices.

These statutes and rules formulated by Mr. Field have been in effect in Maine since Dec. 1, 1959.

In this connection, Mr. Field was co-author of a treatise on "Maine Civil Practice".

For the past two years Mr. Field has been in charge of a project of the American Law Institute, financed by the Ford Foundation. This involves a study of the jurisdiction of the Federal courts with the objective of making recommendations to Congress for legislative changes. This is a five-year project.

During this time Mr. Field continues to teach at Harvard Law School.

Bringing Metro Planning Closer

a state agency, expects upwards of $4.6 million in Federal funds for use in planning mass transit in Greater Boston.

The money will provide a financial cushion for any "dry runs" the agency may want to stage.

Ordinarily, the MTA, the railroads or buslines would not care to test a new transit scheme because of the financial hazard. But the Federal funds will absorb the financial shock if such a plan went awry.

State money, too, will be involved -- up to one-third of the total amount . . . or half the Federal contribution.

This "bankroll" will also help set up transit studies.

But to insure that the final product will bear some relation to real conditions in Greater Boston, the commission is endeavoring to line up responsible officials from various communities to serve on these advisory councils.

This is the essence of metropolitan planning in a limited field.

And since transit studies can not be complete without knowing more about a community than its present commuting needs, metro planning is involved here . . . without its being stated as such.

Such factors as a town's master plan, zoning bylaws, code enforcement and prospective development are all parts of the transit planning scheme.

Thus, Weston is beginning to share in a metro planning concept even before any such agency is set up . . . through the transit commission's needs.

Don't Breach Wayland Zoning Laws for Research Lab, They Plead

business conditions make it impossible to say what Dow's directors may seek from the town in the future.

"A business recession," said Atty. C. Peter R. Gossels of Old Tavern rd., "might find Dow seeking another concession ... like a pilot plant in a few years.

"Or a change in scientific methods," added Dr. Ronald Vanelli of Woodridge rd., chief of Harvard University's chemical lab, "might mean a change in the whole structure. A research project can sometimes look pretty much like an industrial plant.

SPEAKER -- Robert C. Rier of 11 Kelsey rd., Wayland, district manager for LeFebure Corp., national manufacturer and designer of business systems and equipment, was the principal speaker at a meeting of the Mayflower Chaper of the Systems and Procedures Assn. held at Patten's restaurant. In his talk, entitled "Systems Savvy in Suburbia," Mr. Rier reviewed the methods and procedures being employed by suburban banks to reduce operating costs, streamline operations, and provide better service to customers. Mr. Rier is well known throughout Massachusetts as an authority in the field of systems and procedures for financial institutions.

"Besides, the trend today is to make research labs a part of the home office. Dow seems to be bucking the trend in what they're asking for."

The Anzevino property is zoned for three-quarter-acre lots. Dow would like it changed to limited commercial.

Once the change has been made, TWA argues, it becomes easier at a later date to extend the usages.

Basically, Mr. Gossels explained, "we are against this because we want to keep Wayland a residential community. We have members all over Wayland--about 50--who believe this firmly."

The TWA argument runs like this:

Adjacent to the Anzevino land is the high-cost residential development, Wayland Hills, with homes in the $35,000 class.

Other residential properties with good homes lie just to the south, only a stone's throw from the Natick Industrial Park. To the west, along Commonwealth rd., is more Anzivino property, also zoned for 30,000 square foot lots.

TWA maintains that opening up this "choice 26 acres" to commercial development will only make it easier for future developments of like nature to follow along Commonwealth rd. until they hook up with the commercial section about a half mile to the west.

Then, TWA says, a commercial strip will run through the middle of residential area-- and the trouble will start.

"Who will want to buy a good home in that area," asks Richard Bicknell of Timber lane, "if you have a commercial building jutting up on the highest point of ground nearby?"

As for the residential potential of the 26 acres, TWA feels that due to the ledge underlying this land, only homes starting at $35,000 could be built there. About 26 in all.

More revenue will be brought in from these homes, TWA maintains, than from Dow's plant.

"We plan to show that in town expenditures in schools," added Mr. Gossels, "that the costs will be about the same as those for Dow. Only 1.4 school-age children are found in such homes. And-this will insure that the town will remain residential."

Members of TWA now working on the case against "letting down the zoning barrier" include Robert Davis of Old Tavern rd., Paul Schleikjer of Claypit Hill rd., Henry Moeller of Black Oak rd., Robert Farrington of Dean rd., Roland MacGown of Valley View rd., Dr. Vanelli, Mr. Bicknell and Mr. Gossels.

"When they sprang Raytheon on the town," said Mr. Gossels, 'it was put in terms of Raytheon's campus lab or low-cost homes. We have no such alternative now.

"It's simply a lab that may grow--or high cost homes. We think most people will prefer the later for Wayland."

Wayland PTA's Scholarship Drive At $1900

WAYLAND -- Wayland High's PTA is still looking for that $1 from each resident to help meet the college scholarship needs of today's high school graduate.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald A. Donahue, co-chairmen of the Scholarship Drive, point out that the first PTA scholarship in 1942 was $75 . . . in a year when there were 27 graduates.

Today's need is for $11,000 -- about $1 per resident.

To date, the drive has collected $1900 (as against $2400 last year) -- but the door is still open for late contributors who wish to see needy qualified youngsters get the wherewithal for college.

Framingham Community Concerts Plans Program

FRAMINGHAM -- Framingham Community Concerts Association board of directors met recently at the home of president Albert G. Ponte, 255 Potter rd., to select opening concerts for the 1962-63 season. The artists selection meeting is the most important single event of the year, exceeded in excitement only by the flurry of campaign week in the Spring.

Detailed and lengthy discussions of all available touring artists were necessary in order to select the finest possible concert series for Framingham area residents. A breath taking Russian dance group; a glamorous mezzosoprano, and an internationally famous 25 piece orchestra were among the final choices considered. Opening concerts will be formally announced after the first of the year. The board of directors was assisted in its choices by Richard Jarvis, representative of Columbia Artists Inc. of New York.

The Community Concert Association was pleased to welcome Miss Ellen Hunt as a member of the board of directors. Miss Hunt accepted the job of campaign dinner co-chairman with Mrs. Lee Oldham Jr. Both have been long active in many Framingham civic groups. In June this year Miss Hunt retired after 41 years of service on the faculty of Framingham State College. She holds a B.A. from Wellesley College, an M.A. from Columbia University, and is a member of the American Association of University Women, Framingham-Wellesley branch.

Members of the Framingham Community Concert Association will soon enjoy the long awaited concert by internationally famous pianist Alexander Brailowsky. Hailed as the world's foremost interpreter of Chopin and one of the most beloved pianists of the age, Mr. Brailowsky will revive the glories of the pianoforte, Jan. 10, at Dwight Hall, Framingham State College.

Residents of Framingham and surrounding communities will have an opportunity to join the Community Concert Association during official campaign week in March, 1962. Further information concerning membership may be obtained by calling Mrs. John J. Iffland, 872-5035 or Mrs. Avery H. Hevesh, 877-2803.

ALEXANDER BRAILOWSKY, world-famous as the "passionate poet of the piano", will play at Dwight Hall, Framingham State College, January 10. under the auspices of the Framingham Community Concert Association. The veteran virtuoso has been long acknowledged an incomparable interpreter of Chopin, Liszt, Schumann, and other masters of the Romantic school. He is now completing his annual transcontinental tour before departing to fulfill numerous engagements abroad.

Christmas in Spain...

first hand," she stated.

According to Miss Velasco the Americans are "especially kind." Not only the people with whom I work, but even total strangers whom I have chanced to meet," she says.

"But your American car, available to so many, has cut you off from people," the Senorita states.

"The car is a necessity in this country to get around - especially in a community like Wayland. In Spain one shops, goes to church, or meets one's friends in the local cafe for an evening of conversation without the need of a car."

In returning to the subject of education, Miss Velasco pointed out the two categories of teachers in her country.

"Maestros" are the elementary teachers and "Profesores" are the high school teachers. A Maestro is a graduate of a special school for teachers and the Profesores must have completed five years at the university.

Discipline is far more rigid in Spain, as elsewhere in Europe, she states, but perhaps the biggest difference is the overall emphasis of our whole system.

"In American your system of education is keyed more to the individual student and this is, perhaps, the greatest difference in teaching, she added," and the fact that the Profesores are much more highly regarded abroad."

Miss Velasco will spend her first Christmas in this country in Portland, Me., as the guest of her Cambridge roommate, Miss Anna Lee, who teaches French at the high school here. They plan to get in some skiing of which there is little in Spain.

Following is an account in Senorita Velasco's own words, of Christmas in Spain:

" La Navidad (Christmas) is celebrated in Spain much the same as it is here, except that there is no Christmas tree and the children receive their presents on the 6th of January.

"This day is known as "El dia de los Reyes Magos", the day of the Three Wise Men.

"On the evening of Jan. 5, the children put their shoes on the windows of their bedrooms. The kings leave gifts in the shoes. This same evening, in the streets, there is a parade - 'cabalgata.'

"Camels, laden with toys, kings and servants parade in the streets and give away candy and toys to the children. They also visit the hospitals, orphanages, etc. to give gifts.

" 'Aguinaldos', presents to the servants and to all those who have served the family in some way during the year, the postman, newsboy or others, are given during this season.

" On 'Nochebuena' (Christmas Eve) the family gathers to eat together. The turkey is the special food for Christmas. After eating everyone sings Christmas songs and then the family attends Midnight Mass (La missa del gallo.)

"Although Christmas trees are found now only as decoration in stores or in a few homes, all the homes have "Nacimientos" (Nativity scenes) with figurines of clay which represent the birth of Jesus in Bethleham.

What was that year that just passed? How did it set with Westan and Wayland? See Page 4 and maybe yau'll agree and maybe yau want, but Happy New Year ta yau all in any case.

SNOWED UNDER . . . but you know what they say about the post office. Here Wayland Postmaster Thomas Hynes (center) and staff work their way through waist-high drifts of Christmas mail. Wayland, Weston and Cochituate Post Offices were busy places during one of the busiest Christmas-mailing seasons ever seen here.

But Many Question Move

Wayland Votes to Improve Old Conn. Path, 70-48

By BETTY GEIGER

WAYLAND -- A handful of people voted on an issue of considerable importance to the whole town last Wednesday, at the special town meeting.

Due, perhaps, to the time of year, few townspeople turned out and worded Article 3 passed by a vote of 70 to 48. The quorum for a town meeting is 100 voters.

This action makes possible the transference of $11,000 from the account of Chapter 90 Construction, Old Connecticut Path.

The question, which is quite likely to arise again in connection with future highway work in town, concerns the picture each resident holds of his own town in the view of many who spoke on the issue.

Should it remain quiet, scenic, undisturbed, or should it be improved to the point of sacrificing some of the beauty and rustic qualities of the town?

Highway Commr. Charles H. Peters, Robert M. Morgan of the Finance Committee, and a gentleman from the floor who drives a school bus voiced the sentiments of those who feel Old Connecticut Path should be widened, resurfaced, improved and drained.

Alex Hayner, Mrs. Max Thomas, former moderator Howard Russell, Robert H. Charnock of the Planning Board, Richard Durant, and Edward Mendler were among those who voiced objections to the plans.

Mr. Peters pointed out that this was one of the hardest roads in town to maintain and was a constant drain on the Highway maintenance costs.

He said lack of drainage for the many springs and the narrow way made it hazardous. In answer to a question about it becoming a truck route if it is improved, he pointed out that the town has refused to allow trucks on School st. and can do so here.

Both Mr. Peters and Mr. Morgan emphasized that the Chapter 90 Funds (by which the State pays one half and County and Town each one quarter of the total would be lost if not used.

"All Wayland has to do is decide not to use them next year and all the other towns in the county will be ready to gobble this money up," Mr. Morgan stated.

The school bus driver claimed that when a car and bus pass on this highway it is very dangerous with the bus driving too close

Wayland Impulse Spending Boosts Transfer to $14,653

WAYLAND -- The sum of $14,653.36 was appropriated and transferred from available funds for operation of various town departments this year instead of the original $11,340.97 in the printed warrant, by unanimous vote at the Wednesday Special Town meeting.

The largest item was $6000 asked for snow removal instead of the estimated $2000. Other items dropped - police request of $790.26 instead of $800, dam repair, $2540 instead of $3000 and street lighting $1,782.13 instead of $2000.

Only two questions came from the floor before voting on this sum: Eugene C. Roberts of High Rock rd. questoned the increase in street lighting and was told that they have been kept on all night recently in answer to numerous requests for this service.

Mr. Roberts also questioned the sum for lifeguards and matrons and was informed that with the increased use of the Town Beach this year, on recommendation of the Red Cross, additional help was necessary.

THE CLUTTER WAS CLAUS -- Engineers at Wayland's Raytheon Co. lab verify what hundreds of local children know . . . that was Santa Claus who made that visit Sunday night. Unorthodox but welcome radar returns on their scope, shown here, were identified as "friend". Our "friend" was plotted at a bearing of 355 degrees, range 78 miles before a sub-sonic vehicle entered the landing pattern on its way into area homes.

Don't Delay – Do It Today

If you have a special news item for next week's Town Crier (Jan. 4), please send it right in today. That's the deadline because of the holiday crush. And thanks...to all those who got in early copy last week in the midst of their Christmas shopping.

Plan Transit – or Else U.S. Message to Hub, Suburbs

WESTON -- It's come down to this: plan together or forget all hope of Federal aid on transportation.

That's the message from Dr. Joseph F. Maloney, executive director of the Mass Transportation Commission. And it was given to Weston representatives last Monday at a meeting in Brandeis University of officials from 144 Greater Boston communities.

Vote of Confidence For School - Whfft: $100,000 Fund

WAYLAND -- That the Town of Wayland backs the School Building Committee was evidenced last Wednesday night at the special town meeting when Article 1, authorizing a transfer of funds, "Excess and Deficiency Account" to a Stabilization Fund of $100,000, was passed within a few minutes after the explanation made by Alan R. Finlay of the committee.

Only one question was raised from the floor - by Ralph S. Blanchard of Bent av. who asked "How much will be left in the E. & D. Fund?" and was answered by Robert Morgan of the Finance Committee, "Just under $100,000"

The unanimous vote makes possible a "breathing space without an increase in the town's finances on a long term debt" and makes it unnecessary to borrow to finance future work in the construction of the Loker School addition.

Free-Spending of Resources Stripping Wayland of Glamour

WAYLAND -- The newly-established Conservation Commission issued a jarring warning this week to Waylanders who like things pretty much as they are.

The message: Time is running out on those who "take for granted" the resources which make Wayland a pleasant place to live in.

At the present rate of indifference and free-spending of resources of water, land and "space" the commission warned, Wayland will soon be something totally unrecognizable to those who prefer its quiet country atmosphere.

"Today man's technological capacity is so vast that the welfare of all is endangered by practices which until now have often been regarded as inherent rights," states the commission in an open letter to the town.

But, it adds, it seems obvious that "no man has the inherent right" to pollute the air or the water so necessary to life, nor the topsoil so vital to all animals. Nor gobble up space.

Grandiose thinking? Not at all, says the conservation commission -- but the principles are just as applicable in Wayland as in New York City, California and China (all areas plagued by loss of resources).

"The only difference," says the group, "is that Wayland still has the opportunity to keep these basic resources which have been so much a part of our lives that we have 'taken them for granted'."

That's where the Conservation Commission comes in: to protect the town's interests . . . now and for future generations.

Members of the commission are William M. Young, Fern Taylor, Allen Morgan, Clifton Gladu, C. Austin Eckerline and Marie Cutler.

The commission promises to keep townspeople up to date on conservation issues through periodic open letters and points out that it will be working with other town bodies (Planning Board and Water Department, for example) on related problems.

It states:

"Like any other branch of town government, it must represent the interests of a majority -- and the majority must make its views known and support the program which results.

"As the commission works on these problems, we will be coming to you as citizens to ask for your opinion and help.

"The conclusions and plans which result will be laid before the town at public meetings or at the regular meetings of the commission."

CONCERT ARTISTS--Performers at the Country Evening Concert in the Country School Jan. 12 are the Albeneri Trio (from left): pianist Artur Balsam, violinist Giorgio Ciompi and cellist Benar Heifetz.

Country Evening Concert Jan.12 Features Albeneri Trio

WESTON -- The Albeneri Trio, to be heard in a concert on Friday Jan. 12 in the Weston Country School Auditorium, consists of three musicians who vary in background, native language and culture.

Pianist Artur Balsam was born in Warsaw and is the newest member of the group. Since coming to this country in 1932 he has gained fame for his solo virtuosity and for his collaboration with such artists as Milstein, Francescatti, Sgigeti and Menuhin, as well as with the Budapest, Vegh and other outstanding quartets.

Giorgio Ciompi, violinist, was born in Florence, Italy. Advanced studies with Georges Enesco and extensive concertizing here and abroad have led him to his present position as head of the violin department of the Cleveland Conservatory.

Russian-born 'cellist Benar Heifetz also is known for his solo career in this country and in Europe, as well as for his service under orchestra conductors Toscanini and Stokowski. He is a much sought-after participant for classical "jam sessions", and his knowledge of the chamber music repertoire is unequalled anywhere in the world.

Season tickets at the special rate of $10 (students $4) are still on sale. Reservations may be made by enclosing check payable to the Country Evening Concerts to Co-Chairman Mrs. Reginald Elwell or Mrs. Marshall Campbell, Ripley Lane, Weston (telepones TW 3-7361 or TW 4-4402). Reservations may also be made at Whelpey's, Weston Center. Proceeds of the concerts, now in their 11th season, support a scholarship at the New England Conservatory.

Treasurer of 3d Form

WESTON -- Thomas Macy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. West, 22 Church st., has been elected treasurer of the Third Form for the winter term at the Fessenden School, West Newton.

Gas Inspector Newest Officer In Wayland

WAYLAND -- An inspector of gas piping and gas appliances will be appointed by the Board of Selectmen each year following approval of those in attendance at the special town meeting last Wednesday.

A discussion of who would do the job, how much it would pay and how the job would be handled was cut short when Town Counsel Frank W. Kilburn stated that these matters made no difference on the voting because according to present legislation the Town had to approve of the Article.

Atty. Kilburn then read the 1959 legislation passed by the town on this matter.

There will be further review of this matter by the Board of Selectmen in answer to a letter received by them from the Boston Gas Co. arguing the inequality of charges for gas inspection. At the present time Donald Ide is the inspector who will handle the job.

Death Takes a Holiday

By SOUTHWORTH LANCASTER

(December 24 - December 30, 1861)

THE NEWS: Christmas Day -- At Arlington, Va., the camp of Boston's Fighting 9th was "tastefully and profusely ornamented with evergreens and the day commemorated in an appropriate manner."

At Annapolis, a "beautiful flag" was presented by Boston citizens to the 20th Mass. in remembrance of Ball's Bluff.

Dec. 26 -- State Dept. announced that the stopping of the steamer Trent would be disavowed and that Messrs Mason and Slidell were free to proceed to England. This displaeased the South, which had hoped for a break between Washington and London, with consequent recognition by Britain of the Confederate States . . . At year's end, the Union Army had 575,917 men; the Confederates, 351,418. The Northern Navy had 188 steam vessels in commission or building. From Richmond, Navy Secretary Mallory reported the raider Sumter at sea, four ironclad rams building and satisfactory progress in the emergency river fleet.

BEHIND THE NEWS: Though tempers had somewhat cooled, Britain fully meant to get tough over the Trent affair and prepared to send troops to Canada.

However, Prince Albert, Victoria's consort, insisted on a mild protest, helping out Sec. Seward who from the first had asserted that seizure of the Confederate emissaries was improper. Adroit diplomacy on both sides, plus the clear-headedness of Seward and of Earl Russell, British Foreign Minister, averted serious trouble, despite efforts of certain Northern fire-eaters to force a showdown. . .

Later, Lincoln suavely offered to allow British troops en route to Canada to land at Portland, Me., instead of St. John, so they might escape a winter march through snowy New Brunswick. . .

The North really had no case, for America had always upheld the right of neutrals to be free of search and seizure at sea, and the War of 1812 (as well as the later War of 1917) had been fought to defend this principle. . .

Mason and Slidell, released from custody in Fort Warren, Boston, went on to London, got a cool reception, got nothing done and after some profitless months were recalled to Richmond. . .

The disparity between Northern and Southern armies was not so great as it looked. Union Services of the Rear were highly organized, lines of communication needed protection and key points, notably Washington and the coastal forts, had to be garrisoned, so that the drain on manpower was heavy. The Southern Army, operating on home territory, had no such problems.

Considering only "troops available for combat", the two armies were fairly equal. Moreover, the South at this stage of the War had a definite superiority in leadership and its field forces were used to better advantage than those of the North. . .

The Sumter, a small converted passenger steamer formerly on the New Orleans-Havana run was the first regularly commissioned Confederate raider, although the Richmond government had earlier licensed a number of "privateers", which could keep for profit anything they captured.

Commanded by Capt. Raphael Semmes, later captain of the Alabama, she was at sea from June 1861 to January 1862, when she was blockaded at Algerciras, Spain, condemned and sold. She later appeared as a blockade runner. During her career, she captured 17 Northern-owned ships and burned six others.

EDITORIAL

The Year That Just Passed

The year 1961 can be written down as the Great Year of Irresolution...also of change. And some very definite lack of change.

Issues that began the year were still with the towns in many cases. And new ones, such as the emotional intrusion of Civil Defense, also remained unresolved in the minds of many.

This was a year in which the outside world dropped in on our section of Suburbia with a bang, symbolic of the Big Change going on everywhere.

Wayland and Weston will never be the same since the eruption of the Civil Defense issue. Shelters? How much? What kind? IS there protection?

These were questions that came to dominate conversation and town affairs, even to the point of uncivility on the part of many disputants. But there was no question about its immediacy... about as gripping as a sharp rise in the local tax rate.

But local issues continued to have their place in 1961. Some made the towns seem like the Same Old Place.

Anyone hear of the Heard House? Or the cat shelter? Pretty much where it was a year ago is the Heard House, despite some gallant marching up the hill and down again repeatedly to win it a new place in the sun. And the cat shelter that almost got into Wayland--it's still howling just outside, in the courts.

Then you take that sleeper--the Blue Laws. Nearly took over the economy, they did. Ask any realtor. And they almost closed the towns' social center--the Town Dumps. Almost but not quite.

It was a great year for education. Wayland witnessed its first graduation in the new high school and Weston its last in the old which became a junior high. In January, Wayland dedicated its campus-style high school and at the other extreme, (Dec. 2) Weston dedicated its new-building with a series of seminars on excellence in education.

Wayland's new high school continued to receive accolades throughout the year and to receive eager-to-learn educators from all over the nation and foreign countries. Wayland voted $285,000 for an addition to the Claypit School and reserved $100,000 in a special fund for a similar addition to the Loker School, probably next year.

As for finances--each town voted a bit more than $2.5 million in its budget. This meant an $86 tax rate for Wayland, and $63.80 for Weston.

Signs of the times: three town meetings for Wayland (March, June and December) and two for Weston (March and November).

Wayland noted with discouragement the signing of a new state law making it easier for power companies to install overhead power lines. Issue still in court.

Commuters continued to feel blue. Threat of loss of last commuting line on B &M through Wayland. And, of course, the year ended, as it had begun, with the blitz from the Snowman.

But there were some encouraging signs for conservationists: The so-called Wetlands Bill passed, making it possible for the Federal government to buy and save marshlands along the Sudbury.

Urban renewal became a big issue in Wayland...the renewal authority finding itself under attack by the Wayland Civic Assn. most of the year. The latter wanted one thing--no renewal. Like most other issues--no resolution yet.

Rte. 117 (North av.) got a new bridge connecting Weston to Waltham and Weston's Conant Road bridge got a new look--on the level, ridding it of the troublesome hump-backed appearance. And in time Rte. 20 and Rte. 128 would come up with a gigantic rotary to end all rotaries. In time.

Other signs of the times: plans for a 200-car parking lot for Wayland Center (railroad station property), rebuilding of Old Connecticut Path (over objections), plans for a summer kindergarten.

For Weston: division of the town into two voting districts (just too many eager voters), revision of the caucus system to make more contests possible and continued study of fire protection, with the possibility of a new station.

And when you consider that the Democrats opened a mission in Weston (a town committee), you can see things are changing so much it's positively unsafe to venture a guess about 1962--except to wish you all a Happy New Year from us at The Crier.

Principal Smith Resting at Home

WESTON -- Willard Smith Principal of Weston High School, is recuperating at home from a recent circulatory disorder. Dr. David Reid reports that Mr. Smith is progressing nicely and his recovery should be rapid.

During Mr. Smith's absence, Donald Hale has been named Acting Principal of Weston High School.

Weston Mailman Retiring Dec.31

WESTON -- Charles McKenna, Weston mailman for nearly 39 years, will retire on Dec. 31.

Mr. McKenna lives at 10 Cambria rd., Newton. He has carried mail in the Meadowbrook section for the past nine years. He has no immediate plans--except to putter around the home and look for some mail...no farther away than his own front door. His many friends have sent him their best wishes for a happy future.

THE LIVING PAST by Howard S. Russell

How We Arrived at New Year's

So next Monday will be January 1, and New Year's Day! Who ever decided that anyway? Or has it been so since the beginning of the world?

Oh, no indeed; nor, in fact, has December 25 always been Christmas Day. Nor was Christ born at the beginning of the year one, but rather several years before. You see, we speak nowadays of fixed dates, but in the past the calendar has been anything but fixed. Today you can pretty well rely on the Old Farmer's Almanac, with its 400,000 mathematical calculations, but calendars have varied according to whose calendar it was, in what part of the world, and at what period.

The Babylonian and the Chinese calendars, much older than ours, took their start 2500 years before ours. They had a year with twelve months of 30 days each, with an extra short month once in a while to catch up. Our leap year Feb. 29 originated in Babylon. Their year began in the third month of the sun's year.

For Mohammedans, Christ's birth, from which we supposedly date, was a minor event. Their great day was that on which Mohammed was expelled from Mecca and began his Hegira, or flight. This happened, we would say, on July 16, 622; but to Moslems it is the year one. Their months are strictly lunar, each with 29 days, 12 hours, 44 minutes, just as American Indians reckoned time.

What about Christmas? The birth of the babe occurred while "shepherds were abiding in the field." But in Bethlehem December 25 comes in a cold frosty period, when sheep are and always have been housed inside; so scholars think our date for Christmas is either some months late or some months early. The first reference to Dec. 25 is said to have been in the fourth century, and it was not chosen until after long debate.

As to the year one, the monk to whom the Pope gave the duty of figuring back to Christ's birth, in his computation apparently overlooked several years, and failed to check against the Roman events specifically mentioned in the New Testament accounts. So scholars say that our year one is anywhere from four to nine years out of the way: but in this late era, no one appears anxious to do the job of calculation over.

Now comes New Year's, and it was the distinguished Roman Julius Caesar who chose that. We still start the year at Caesar's date, though in the meantime Christians at one time or another have used Christmas; March 1; Lady Day, March 25; and Easter Day, as the year's beginning.

Caesar set up his calendar, to start with, in what we would call B.C. 46. His selection of the day for January 1 had a certain astronomical significance, and it was also a high holy day for the Druids, with whose customs he was thoroughly familiar. Caesar's calendar served the western world for six centuries, before dates began to be calculated from the birth of Christ; and thereafter no other change was made for another nine centuries.

By that time it was clear that the dates within the year were getting askew. Hence, with the advice of astronomers and mathematicians Pope Gregory XIII made some corrections. He took notice of the overtime that had accumulated since Caesar's day, and in 1582 set up the present system. This is still not precisely accurate, I believe, but good for some thousands of years. Russia and the Eastern Orthodox Church stick to the Julian calendar, so their New Year comes considerably later than ours.

Protestant England did not adopt the Gregorian calendar of 1582 until 170 years later. Finally, in 1751, Parliament struck eleven days from September; and our calendar here in New England was changed accordingly. If you read old books or documents relating to the Colonial Period, you often find two dates given; one O.S. or old-style, according to the Julian calendar; the other N.S. or new-style, referring to the Gregorian.

All this confusion gives us an extra chance, which we may need for 1962. If you don't adopt all the good resolutions you should at the beginning of the month which faces both ways, January; or fail to keep them; you can have another opportunity on the Russian New Year's Day later in the month. If you backslide after that, try again on March 1, March 25, or Easter Day, all of which are or have been someone's New Year's Day.

Should you still have trouble, try July 4, from which the year of the independence of the United States is reckoned. Beyond that, all is not hopeless, for January 1 will soon be round again.

That Was a Good Job

Congratulations to both Wayland and Weston for the prompt "plowing out" they gave us over the holiday weekend.

We imagine someone there is who may have an exception they'd like to cite. But on the whole, we believe the towns did remarkably well in the face of that one-two punch from the Weatherman.

Now if someone would give us a hint about how to get those long driveways cleared out after two successive storms, we'd all be in business again.

What Birds Have You Seen Lately?

Columnist Thanks Her Informants

By CHARLOTTE E. SMITH

WESTON -- The E. P. Taylor family, Bay State rd., had an excellent view on Dec. 16 of a barred owl as it sat most of the day in a pine tree in their backyard. It obligingly stayed until the Smiths were able to see it that afternoon. Mrs. G. H. Hart, Wayland, reports a shrike (probably Northern) on Dec. 14, and Mrs. C. P. Gorely, Jr., Boston Post rd., had a late brown thrasher feeding with other birds on Dec. 17.

A personal note: My sincere thanks to all who have been kind enough to call or write about their birds. This column could not have been written otherwise. Weston has, it would seem, more "bird watchers" than any town around, and your observations of fall migrants, in particular, were valuable in connection with the radar-migration study which depends upon ground observer reports to identify the species moving on a night of migration.

A word, also, about unusual vs. common birds. All of us enjoy seeing for the first time a rare bird like the red-bellied woodpeckier. However, for future studies on changes in bird populations and on migration, regular reports of common birds are the ones which are, and will be, the most valuable. Rare birds are purely fortuituous (lots of fun to see, though!), but regular observations of nesting birds in summer, migrants in spring and fall, and winter visitors -- with numbers, dates, and comparisons with past years -- are most appreciated. They do not always "make" the column, but all are carefully recorded and sent at the end of each month to Mrs. R. P. Emery, who compiles the Records of N. E. Birds for the Mass. Audubon Society. In turn, Mrs. Emery sends some of our Weston records to the National Audubon Society in New York for its Audubon Field Notes which cover the entire country by regions.

Even if you read that someone else has already reported a bird you have just seen, please do not hesitate to call anyway. This is not just repetition. It all helps in presenting as complete a picture as possible of Weston birds throughout the year.

Highway safety is a two-way proposition between the driver and the pedestrian.

Beth Parlee Wins Curved Bar Prize

WESTON -- Outstanding performance in skills and badge work has earned Beth Parlee of Conant rd. the first curved bar award of the year to eighth grade Girl Scouts in Weston. This is the highest rank to be earned by intermediate Scouts and is given in commendation of service as well as individual initiative. The award was made on Dec. 12 at the Court of Awards, presided over by Mrs. Robert Stauffer and Mrs. Arthur Jones, leaders of Troop 22.

Wayland Sinks No. Reading, 60-30

WAYLAND -- Ron Reeves did the honors, and Wayland High swamped North Reading High Dec. 18, 60-30, in a Dual County League game in North Reading.

Ron netted 25 points and grabbed 27 rebounds. It was quite a day for Wayland's right forward.

Off to a 9-3 lead in the first period, the Warriors salted it away in the third, with 24 points. This was Wayland's third straight victory.

The summary---WAYLAND: rf R. Reeves 25; rf Kruse, 8; lf York 7; lf Kent, 6; c Arnold, 2; c Nichols, 2; c Plump 0; rg A. Reeves, 2; lg Perodeau, 8.

Wayland Romps To 3d Big Win

WAYLAND -- Wayland High's Warriors continued their victory string with a 54-30 win over Lincoln-Sudbury last Friday, with Al and Ron Reeves (11 points) and Steve Druse and Bob Kent (with 13 each) led the attack.

It was pretty much even-Steven in the first period but with Al Reeves and Kruse shooting, the Warriors jumped off fast in the second period and ended the half

Weston Drops Lynnfield, 52-48

WESTON -- Lynnfield High fell vic im to the fast-rushing Weston High Wildcats last Friday in a thriller, 52-48 with Buddy Foster and Art King scoring 27 and 20 points respectively.

Only Weston and Wayland remain undefeated in the Dual County League--as of Friday.

Foster and King scored 33 of Weston's 37 points in the first half--Foster 18. The difference came with Brian Claridge, Lynnfield's top scorer missing nine straight foul shots in the crucial second half.

Students Turn Weston Schools Over to Christmas

WESTON -- The halls of the Weston schools were decked not only with holly but with Christmas trees, good cheer, student decorations and displays of traditional holiday scenes.

Anxiously awaiting the Dec. 22 recess, youngsters at all levels of the school system prepared special programs and events to usher in the joyous season.

At the Country School, a fourth grader, Nancy Bellows wrote a christmas play, "The Night Before Christmas" which was staged, produced and directed by the youngsters. A special assembly presented by the Music Department, under the direction of Claire Driscoll highlighted the last day of classes.

Class parties, caroling for students and parents and general festivities marked the Country School's Christmas preparations.

"The Christmas Elf" was enjoyed by members of the 6th grade at the Elementary School while fourth graders studied Christmas in such far away places as Germany, England and Mexico.

Our seventh and eight graders enjoyed a tree in the lobby, special show cases devoted to holiday themes and a special assembly. Under the combined direction of Robert Corley and Mrs. Angelyn MacWilliams, the Junior High School Orchestra and Glee Club presented a programoftraditional Christmas music. Audience participation from the student body and a welcome gathering of parents, added to the holiday air. Mrs. Rosamond Howe led a group of eighth graders in Scripture Reading.

Up at the new High School, a last-day of-classes assembly, directed by Mr. Robert Corley and Mr. John Zorn, featured bible reading, reading of "The Meaning of Christmas" with musical accompaniment, Christmas carols, violin solo and piano accompaniment, Girls Glee Club, Band selections and a program of choir singing.

BROWNIE CAROLERS AT LIBRARY--Members of Brownie Troop 1A sing carols and decorate the Christmas tree at the 40th Anniversary celebration of the Rosamond Freeman Room of the Weston Public Library. In background, Richard A. Bodge, librarian. During these 40 years, Miss Margaret E. Mosher, children's librarian, has been in charge of the department. Funds for the room were given by Miss Louisa W. Case and Miss Marian Case in memory of their young niece, Rosamond Freeman.

to the trees at the roadside.

But Alex Hayner maintained that if all the things that are mentioned are done it will cost three times the amount proposed - and "what is now a country road will become a major route...a direct line between Waltham and the Toll Road."

He argued that people who use it most, the property owners in the area, are against it as the road is "perfectly adequate for their use."

Mr. Mender came up with some statistics showing that if the 30-mile-an-hour speed limit were observed, the road can handle 2000 cars an hour which is adequate.

Improving the road would be for out-of-towners who would consider this a thruway, he stated, and the load would only be increased by 200 cars per hour, according to his statistics.

Howard Russell gave an answer to those who put forth the argument that work on Old Connecticut Path was started on the other side of the Five-Path intersection and should be completed by mentioning that work had been started on Oak st. two years ago and it would be logical to finish clearing the stumps of trees cut down there and finish that job.

Mr. Russell also suggested that the most important sections of Old Connecticut Path were the two intersections which could be improved. (At Five Paths and the entrance to Rte. 20.)

Mr. Durant suggested that the road could be resurfaced and drained without widening.

In answer to Mrs. Thomas' question, "What does the Planning Board have to say about this work?" L. William Bertelsen answered:

"The Planning Board has not really studied this problem," but added that it was hoped that with the event of the proposed by-pass the traffic would be lessened here.

Both Mr. Bertelsen and Mr. Charnock stated they were not in a position to endorse the plan for improvements.

Mr. Morgan summed up his feeling on the situation by saying, "Nobody who lives on a main road likes to have that road made a through road. I didn't like it when they improved Old Sudbury rd. right past my house. But we must have the best interests of all the town on this, not just a few."

School –

This addition will be asked for at the March town meeting. Should the town not approve of the addition in March "these funds will continue to remain in the Stabilization Fund in the town treasury for other projects in town-not necessarily a school project," Mr. Finlay pointed out to the small gathering.

By its action the Town of Wayland will be able to get a $100,000 refund from the state in 1962 rather than to have it spread out over a five-year period. The addition will cost somewhere between $250-$285,000 and the Town's normal reimbursement would be on the basis of about 50 percent.

The low bid on the Claypit Hill School addition was about 14 percent under the School Building Committee's figure. "This favorable bid made a saving between $25,000 and $35,000 on the project, "Mr. Finlay told the meeting.

Transit –

Toward this end, the MTC is gathering information from members of the local communities in the area. The planning sought by Washington is greater cooperation between local and state planning agencies.

For several years now it has been almost an axiom that planning agencies won't let one another see their plans.

Now, with the advent of the MTC's transportation study, there has been a closer cooperation.

The agency is also expecting $6.9 million, two thirds of this from Washington, to initiate certain tests in mass transit schemes that ordinarily are considered too risky to try because of the financial hazards. The tab will be picked up by the Federal government in the event there are some initial losses in these tests on the MTA, railroads and bus lines.

The theory behind it: at least the agencies here will have a chance to break out of the transportation bottleneck that has plagued the area.

The Community Advisory Council of the MTC, comprising three representatives of each of 144 Eastern Massachusetts communities, was listed by MTC Chairman Daniel Tyler Jr. as one of the three groups whose cooperation is required if the MTC work is to be successful.

The survey and analysis outlined to the advisory council on Dec. 18 is designed to provide the eventual groundwork for a master transportation plan, prompted by Gov. Volpe's statement that "we all have learned there are practically no exclusively local or exclusively state problems in planning."

Don't be an ostrich-type of pedestrian.

Young Scientists Sample Weather

WESTON -- Future scientists of America, in the guise of six eighth graders from Weston Junior High School, recently participated in a program of science in action which brought a page from their textbooks to life.

Using the Massachusetts Broken Stone Quarry in Weston and Waltham's Prospect Hill as examples, the youngsters studied the differences in barometric pressure at the earth's surface and below. This is tied into their classroom study of atmosphere and weather.

The field trip's success was due to the efforts of Richard Robinson of the Massachusetts Broken Stone Co.
